Background

Method Of Discovery

Name, Location, Associates, Occupation, DOB.

Summary of findings

Background and Family:

Subject Eric Cinotti is a 49-year-old male residing in Leland, North Carolina. His partner, Bianca Cinotti has been located and included in the report. Several images of Subject's son have been located and included as well but his name is unknown, though it appears he is only a couple of years old.

Employment:

Per LinkedIn, Subject is currently employed as a Syndicated Columnist at BBS Radio TV · Contract, On Air Personality, Talk Show Host at The Hostile Zone, Confidential Intelligence Analyst (previous Emergency Medical Technician Instructor), Law Firm Legal Expert/ Criminal Investigator (previous Investigator & Legal Researcher), National Board Certified Mediator, Actor, Model, Adjunct Professor, Firefighter, State Government Mediator, Child Protective Investigator, Tactical Combat Medic, County Government (Youth Cadre, Juvenile Justice Coordinator, Multi-Disciplinary Team Coordinator), U.S. Military Soldier and Funeral Honor Guard, Police Officer, and Judicial Officer. Per Facebook, he is a Lawyer, Author, Investigative Journalist with Daily & Column and Talk Show Host at BBS TV & Radio, Professor / Professional Researcher at the University, and Actor. His educational background on LinkedIn states that he went to Law School, Confidential Certification Military Police, Associate of Arts and Sciences in Criminal Justice and Human Services, Fore Academy, Martial Arts Black Belt, Regional Community Policing Institute Academy, Training Academy for Haz Materials Chemical, Biological, Radiological, and Nuclear, Training Academy for Human Trafficking, Bachelors in Sociology and Criminology, and Master of Public Administration.

No discoveries were made regarding these employment positions; they could not be confirmed.

Prior to the DOI:

Photos/posts include:

- Images of Subject.
- Hockey Records.
- Confirmation of Marriage.
- Confirmation of DOB.
- Confirmation of Location.

After the DOI:

Photos/posts include:

- Articles written about Subject's criminal record.
- Articles written by Subject.
- The Hostile Zone podcast.
- Images and videos of Subject working out.
- Mentions of his occupations
- Google Reviews.
- Comments on his criminal record.
- Podcasts.

- Subject's family.
- Numerous photos of alcohol and cigars held by Subject.

Findings:

Several accounts have been located in Subject's name and included in the report. Two Facebook accounts, an Instagram, LinkedIn, TikTok, X, Google Reviews, Threads, YouTube, SubStack, Medium, and Cash App have been located and included in the report. All accounts have been through 2025, but only Subject's personal Facebook activity dates back to the DOI.

Before DOI, several mentions of Subject's occupation have been made and included in the report. In 2010, Subject mentioned working on a murder case; It is unknown if this is true. His confirmation of marriage, DOB, and location have also been located and included in the report. Images of Subject have also been located and included. His hockey records were found; his team won over 13 times in 2013.

After DOI, Subject left 2 Google Reviews since DOI in 2021. Several articles have been located and included in the report regarding his impersonations and the several felonies Subject has acquired. WHQR wrote, "Coast Guard issued warnings about impostor Navassa cop, who has a long history of attempted deception." They continued to explain how "During the investigation, authorities discovered Cinotti had a history of impersonations, including a firefighter, lawyer, judge, mediator, military officer, EMT, and federal investigator. According to interviews and documents reviewed by WHQR, Cinotti has exaggerated his responsibilities under former employers, forged government documents, claimed phony degrees, and harassed veterans, military members, and their families." The article continues to explain how he was able to do this and explained how he is still free. Details on these instances can be located in the report.

On January 6, 2023, Subject explained why his LinkedIn account was lacking credibility, saying " I didn't list exact names of employers, schools nor the actual dates. Too many problem people out there. So, for the record, all is true just modified names and dates. If a recruiter or otherwise wish to speak we can go into detail." In 2023 he started a podcast with his wife titled "The Hostile Zone." Episodes and promotions for this podcast can be viewed in the report. In Subject's first video, he introduced his podcast saying he was going to be talking about the Constitution, rights, and several other topics including his past and experience. He continued to explain how "Haters always want to bring down someone and will use lies, slander and any means possible to "rain on your parade.." It is unknown if this is targeted at his criminal record and impersonations. Several comments by Subject on his criminal record have been located on Facebook under news articles, which can be viewed in the report. Subject claimed to have an EMT and Firefighter license, and was volunteering at the time. Recent episodes of the podcast taken from his Facebook account have been included in the report. More are available upon request.

Since then, several images and videos of Subject working out have also been found and added. Subject has also posted numerous articles regarding political agendas, legal opinions, and scholarly articles which can all be located in the report as well.

Court and Property Records:

Property records for 8646 Lanvale Forest Drive NE Leland NC 28451 were not located in Subject's name.

No court records were located in his name, but several mentions of legal troubles have been located via articles. CBS17 stated that "Cinotti posted a $50,000 bond to get out of jail while he awaits trial. But a Motion to Modify Conditions of Pretrial Release filed with his court paperwork notes a request that Cinotti be monitored by a GPS tracking device. It notes that "the defendant left the jurisdiction and assumed a different identity" after his arrest in July, and has "approached government officials purporting to be an officer of the United States Military. In addition to the current charges, the defendant has posed as a fireman, a military officer, an attorney, and a federal judge." Later on, it was stated that Subject received several felonies due to his impersonations.

For various reason but mainly because he overcame adversity and fought for something and ultimately lost his life over it. I like when people fight and climb to the top without taking any handouts.

Spartans Take Care of NEC 6-1

2/23/2013 12:00:00 AM

Box Score

Rutland, Vt. – No. 4 seed Castleton exploded for three goals in the final period to finish with a dominating 6-1 victory over fifth seed New England College on Saturday evening in a physical ECAC East Quarterfinal matchup at Spartan Arena.

The Spartans advanced to the ECAC East semifinals for the third straight season with the emphatic win and improve to 15-9-2 on the year. They will take on top seed Norwich on Friday evening. The Pilgrims finish their season with a 9-13-4 mark.

Senior Josh Harris continued his excellent play, scoring twice and dishing off an assist for his fifth straight game with at least one goal. Defenseman Ryan Delorme handed out three assists and Brian Greene scored once and recorded an assist for two points. Junior Eric Cinotti was solid in net, making 18 saves to earn his 13th win of the season.

Capeside Animal Hospital
58 Waterford Business Center Way, Belville, NC 2...

★ ★ ★ ★ 4 years ago

Capeside Animal Hospital is way more expensive than other vets in the area. I also had a nightmare situation with them...I had an elder cat who I brought into Capeside and she received a full "senior cat" evaluation. They prescribed a special diet and they charged me $65 for a 7lbs bag of the food along with fee for the blood work and evaluation. They said she was a healthy senior cat. Less than a month later she lost 2lbs and I come home to find her in a comatose state. I rushed her back to Capeside and they say she has late stage cancer and they need to put her to sleep. And to add insult to injury they call me at 9:00am the next day, less than 12 hours later, to tell me I owe them $100. Yes, less than 12 hours later. They failed to diagnose her cancer less than a month prior and they make me buy a $65 bag of food and she is put to sleep less than a month later. They have the nerve to threaten me with collections over the $100. Note, that I have a few cats and I've spent MORE than $2000 this year alone and they call me less than 12 hours after their failed service demanding $100! Do yourself and your loved pets a huge favor and DO NOT go to Capeside! I was warned about them by a local pet store but I gave them the benefit of the doubt. Stay away if you care at all about your pets!

Leland PD: Man with Navassa PD badge and driving a police vehicle arrested

July 27, 2021 by WWAY News

LELAND, NC (WWAY) — The Leland Police Department arrested a man on Friday after he allegedly responded to a medical call posing as a detective with the Town of Navassa.

The Leland Police Department Criminal Investigations Division arrested Eric Andrew Cinotti, 46, and charged him with one count of felony operating a vehicle with a blue light.

Police say the charge stems from an incident that happened on Wednesday around 10:30 pm. Officers were dispatched to a scene to assist EMS with a medical call.

According to police, Cinotti arrived on the scene and represented himself as a law enforcement officer with the Town of Navassa.

Police say Cinotti was wearing a black ballistic vest with the word "police" written on the front and a Navassa Police Department metal badge that read "Detective" pinned to the vest. He was also openly carrying a black semi-automatic handgun on his right hip and had a police radio.

He was also driving an unmarked Dodge Durango Town of Navassa Police vehicle that was equipped with blue lights and siren, and he drove that vehicle with the blue lights activated.

Leland Police say they were suspicious of Cinotti's actions and investigated.

Police say Cinotti does not possess a law enforcement certification from the North Carolina Criminal Justice Training and Standards Commission – the governing body that issues and manages law enforcement certifications for the State of North Carolina.

Cinotti was placed into custody and transported to the Brunswick County Detention Center without incident, and was given a $5000.00 bond.

Cinotti was placed into custody and transported to the Brunswick County Detention Center without incident, and was given a $5000.00 bond.

Navassa Mayor Eulis Willis confirmed there was an incident involving someone impersonating a Navassa police officer but would not confirm who gave Cinotti the keys to a Navassa Police Department vehicle or other Navassa police gear.

On Tuesday, Navassa town administrator Claudia Bray claimed Cinotti was not a town employee, but would not answer any other questions.

"The town is deferring all questions to the town attorney which is Norwood Blanchard, you can go to him to get the information that you need," Bray said.

Town attorney Norwood Blanchard confirmed Cinotti was not a sworn police officer with the town. He also said as of Tuesday, there were no employees with the police department.

There had previously been one officer employed by the department also serving as acting chief, but Blanchard would not say if this officer was terminated due to the incident with Cinotti.

Leland Police say anyone with information regarding this case is encouraged to contact the Leland Police Department at 910.371.1100.

Brunswick County man accused of impersonating police officer faces more charges

September 21, 2021 by WWAY News

LELAND, NC (WWAY) — A Brunswick County man accused of impersonating a police officer now faces even more charges.

On Monday, a Brunswick County grand jury indicted Eric Cinotti on eight criminal charges. Those include six additional counts of felony Impersonation of a Law Enforcement Officer, one additional count of felony Operating a Vehicle with a Blue Light, and one count of Reckless Driving to Endanger.

The charges are related to incidents that occurred in Leland and Brunswick County in July and are in addition to the charges Cinotti was already facing.

Cinotti was initially arrested on July 23 by detectives with the Leland Police Department and charged with one count of felony Impersonation of a Law Enforcement Officer.

That arrest sparked a comprehensive multi-agency investigation involving the Leland Police Department, the Brunswick County District Attorney's Office, the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation, and the Brunswick County Sheriff's Office.

On Sept. 20, the Brunswick County Sheriff's Office, in conjunction with the Brunswick County District Attorney's Office, arrested Cinotti and served him with the eight additional indictments.

He received a $50,000 secured bond. Cinotti has posted bond and is awaiting future court proceedings. He has a bond hearing tentatively scheduled for Oct. 5 in Brunswick County Superior Court.

"We're grateful for strong partnerships with the DA's Office and the Sheriff's Office that allowed us to explore all avenues in this investigation," Leland Police Chief Brad Shirley said. "The safety of our citizens is our top priority. Sharing that dedication with our partnering agencies not only brought a close to this case but has resulted in a safer region overall."

BRUNSWICK COUNTY, N.C. (WECT) - Court documents indicate Eric Cinotti has a long history of pretending to be things he's not. Cinotti, already facing charges for impersonating a Navassa Police Officer at an emergency medical call over the summer, was indicted on additional felony charges this week. They stem from new evidence authorities uncovered after first becoming suspicious of Cinotti when he responded to that medical call in the neighboring jurisdiction of Leland.

These charges are related to incidents that occurred in Leland and Brunswick County in July and are in addition to the charges Cinotti was originally faced following his initial arrest on July 23. In that incident, the indictment says Cinotti was driving a Navassa Police Dodge Durango with blue lights on, had a gun holstered on his hip, and was wearing a Navassa Police Department Polo shirt, a Police Detective's badge, and a bullet proof vest with the word police on the front.

Cinotti's latest charges include six counts of felony impersonating a law enforcement officer, one count of operating a vehicle with a blue light, and one count of reckless driving to endanger.

Sources familiar with the case tell WECT that after Leland Police first encountered Cinotti at that emergency medical call, authorities obtained dash camera video from inside the Navassa Police SUV Cinotti was driving, and learned he'd been making other traffic stops under the guise of a police officer.

Court documents indicate that on July 20, for example, Cinotti stopped someone in a silver pickup truck, which pulled over after Cinotti activated his blue lights. Further, the indictment states that the same day, Cinotti drove 107 miles per hour on Interstate 40 while operating a blue light under the guise of official police business.

Cinotti posted a $50,000 bond to get out of jail while he awaits trial. But a Motion to Modify Conditions of Pretrial Release filed with his court paperwork notes a request that Cinotti be monitored by a GPS tracking device. It notes "the defendant left the jurisdiction and assumed a different identity" after his arrest in July, and has "approached government officials purporting to be an officer of the United States Military. In addition to the current charges, the defendant has posed as a fireman, a military officer, an attorney, and a federal judge."

A search warrant executed on Cinotti's Leland home after his July 23 arrest detail the emergency call from July 21 that first raised authorities suspicions about Cinotti.

"The male identified himself as 'Eric' and stated he was 'new with Navassa' and was 'trying to get to know everyone.... The [Leland Police] Sergeant was suspicious of his conduct and the answers to his questions, and spoke with the interim chief of Navassa Police, Stephen Conrad, who advised the Sergeant that he was unsure if the male was sworn in with the police department," the search

The [Leland Police] Sergeant was suspicious of his conduct and the answers to his questions, and spoke with the interim chief of Navassa Police, Stephen Conrad, who advised the Sergeant that he was unsure if the male was sworn in with the police department," the search warrant reads.

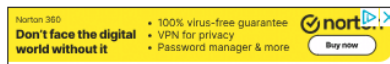

The warrant also mentions a previous fraud investigation that put Cinotti on law enforcement's radar, where "Cinotti allegedly approached the victim at the VA Hospital in Wilmington and identified himself as a Colonel. Cinotti was allegedly attempting to create a militia-style humanitarian aid agency and attempted recruiting the victim. The victim allowed Cinotti to make a purchase of military uniforms on an online retail website... using the victim's financial transaction card. The victim never received the items or a refund of his money upon request."

The search warrant details a Brunswick County Sheriff's Office report filed on 10/15/2020 regarding Cinotti practicing law without being a member of the NC State Bar. Cinotti has a website advertising legal mediation services doing business under the name of The Cinotti Group. It indicates he has a law license and a Masters in Public Administration.

"Impersonation of law enforcement, especially when firearms and police vehicles are involved jeopardizes the safety of the general public," a Leland Police Detective wrote in his application for a warrant to search Cinotti's home.

During the execution of the search warrant, authorities seized a bullet proof vest, a Navassa "Detective" badge, a portable police radio, a collapsible ASP baton, a typed letter from Navassa, a key fob for a Dodge vehicle, and metal handcuffs from Cinotti's home.

WECT tried to clarify Cinotti's exact relationship with the Navassa Police Department at the time he was charged with impersonating a police officer, and to determine if he was on their payroll or just a volunteer. Town Attorney Norwood Blanchard said Cinotti was never on the payroll. As he understands it, the previous interim police chief allowed Cinotti to volunteer, but doubts he was ever authorized to conduct traffic stops.

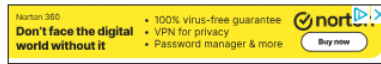

No one answered the door when WECT went to the address listed for Cinotti on court paperwork. An American flag with a US Army logo was flying in front of his home, and an SUV with a Disabled Veteran license plate was parked in front of his house. The plate was personalized with Cinotti's initials, EAC. When WECT called the phone number listed for him on court documents, the man who answered said the reporter had the wrong number. The number listed on the web page for Cinotti's business as a certified mediator is answered by an automated recording.

Cinotti's neighbors said they used to see quite a bit of him around the neighborhood, but that he's been laying low since being criminally charged this summer. They also said he wanted to run for a seat on the board of their Homeowners Association, but was not allowed to because he does not own his home.

Cinotti retained his own attorney, Jordan Duhe Willetts, to represent him on his growing list of criminal charges. Willetts declined to comment for this story.

These charges are related to incidents that occurred in Leland and Brunswick County in July and are in addition to the charges Cinotti was originally faced following his initial arrest on July 23. In that incident, the indictment says Cinotti was driving a Navassa Police Dodge Durango with blue lights on, had a gun holstered on his hip, and was wearing a Navassa Police Department Polo shirt, a Police Detective's badge, and a bulletproof vest with the word police on the front.

Cinotti's latest charges include six counts of felony impersonating a law enforcement officer, one count of operating a vehicle with a blue light, and one count of reckless driving to endanger.

NC man charged over bomb threat outside US Capitol found competent to stand trial

Sources familiar with the case tell WECT that after Leland Police first encountered Cinotti at that emergency medical call, authorities obtained dash camera video from inside the Navassa Police SUV Cinotti was driving, and learned he'd been making other traffic stops under the guise of a police officer.

Court documents indicate that on July 20, for example, Cinotti stopped someone in a silver pickup truck, which pulled over after Cinotti activated his blue lights. Further, the indictment states that the same day, Cinotti drove 107 miles per hour on Interstate 40 while operating a blue light under the guise of official police business.

Cinotti posted a $50,000 bond to get out of jail while he awaits trial. But a Motion to Modify Conditions of Pretrial Release filed with his court paperwork notes a request that Cinotti be monitored by a GPS tracking device. It notes "the defendant left the jurisdiction and assumed a different identity" after his arrest in July, and has "approached government officials purporting to be an officer of the United States Military. In addition to the current charges, the defendant has posed as a fireman, a military officer, an attorney, and a federal judge."

A search warrant executed on Cinotti's Leland home after his July 23 arrest detail the emergency call from July 21 that first raised authorities suspicions about Cinotti.

"The male identified himself as 'Eric' and stated he was 'new with Navassa' and was 'trying to get to know everyone.... The [Leland Police] Sergeant was suspicious of his conduct and the answers to his questions, and spoke with the interim chief of Navassa Police, Stephen Conrad, who advised the Sergeant that he was unsure if the male was sworn in with the police department," the search warrant reads.

The warrant also mentions a previous fraud investigation that put Cinotti on law enforcement's radar, where "Cinotti allegedly approached the victim at the VA Hospital in Wilmington and identified himself as a Colonel. Cinotti was allegedly attempting to create a militia-style humanitarian aid agency and attempted recruiting the victim. The victim allowed Cinotti to make a purchase of military uniforms on an online retail website... using the victim's financial transaction card. The victim never received the items or a refund of his money upon request."

The search warrant details a Brunswick County Sheriff's Office report filed on 10/15/2020 regarding Cinotti practicing law without being a member of the NC State Bar. Cinotti has a website advertising legal mediation services doing business under the name of The Cinotti Group. It indicates he has a law license and a Masters in Public Administration

“Impersonation of law enforcement, especially when firearms and police vehicles are involved jeopardizes the safety of the general public,” a Leland Police Detective wrote in his application for a warrant to search Cinotti’s home.

WECT tried to clarify Cinotti’s exact relationship with the Navassa Police Department at the time he was charged with impersonating a police officer, and to determine if he was on their payroll or just a volunteer. They have not responded.

No one answered the door when WECT went to the address listed for Cinotti on court paperwork. An American flag with a US Army logo was flying in front of his home, and an SUV with a Disabled Veteran license plate was parked in front of his house. The plate was personalized with Cinotti’s initials, EAC. When WECT called the phone number listed for him on court documents, the man who answered said the reporter had the wrong number. The number listed on the web page for Cinotti’s business as a certified mediator is answered by an automated recording.

Cinotti’s neighbors said they used to see quite a bit of him around the neighborhood, but that he’s been laying low since being criminally charged this summer. They also said he wanted to run for a seat on the board of their Homeowners Association, but was not allowed to because he does not own his home.

New chief aims to rebuild Navassa Police Department

March 18, 2022 by Peyton Furtado

NAVASSA, NC (WWAY) — After a great deal of controversy surrounding its police department, the Town of Navassa has hired a new police chief with 33 years of experience in law enforcement.

Chief Daryll DeCotis began Bolton's police department in Columbus County 12 years ago. After moving to the private sector to work in security, he remembers hearing about a Navassa incident involving Eric Cinotti, who has been charged for allegedly pulling drivers over, pretending to be an officer.

Town of Navassa has hired a new police chief with 33 years of experience in law enforcement.

Chief Daryll DeCotis began Bolton's police department in Columbus County 12 years ago. After moving to the private sector to work in security, he remembers hearing about a Navassa incident involving Eric Cinotti, who has been charged for allegedly pulling drivers over, pretending to be an officer.

"Pulling people over in other municipalities," DeCotis said. "And so I said well, I think they need some leadership."

With decades of experience in law enforcement, DeCotis has begun rebuilding Navassa's Police Department from square one. The town went a period of time without any police. Since October, DeCotis has attempted to rebuild both staff and trust.

"Trust is definitely important and that's a process," he said. "So that's not something that can be generated overnight. So I do believe it's going to take some time to gain that trust back."

With the area continuing to grow, DeCotis is moving the department from within Navassa's Town Hall to a neighboring building, working to make the department more autonomous while fostering relationships within local law enforcement.

DeCotis continued, "The more people that come, unfortunately the criminal element follows that. Unless you have a Police Department or law enforcement agency to help answer that. Typically things go out of control and off the rails."

The short term: DeCotis plans to hire six full-time officers and some part-time officers. The long term: he hopes to grow the department along with the community, working together to keep Navassa a safe place and past incidents, like civilians impersonating officers, from being repeated.

"As far as the keys to the kingdom, I have those. And an incident such as that will not be repeated."

DeCotis said the police department should be fully moved into its new building in the next 30 days.

LELAND, N.C. — A man accused of impersonating a police officer in Brunswick County was convicted Monday night.

Eric Cinotti maintains his innocence and entered a rare Alford Plea, meaning he didn't admit to the crimes, but realizes the evidence against him is too great. Regardless, he is considered guilty in the eyes of the law.

Cinotti was arrested last summer after showing up to an emergency call in Leland wearing a badge, gun and bulletproof vest.

Leland police officers were suspicious of his behavior, and started asking questions, which led to Cinotti's arrest.

BRUNSWICK COUNTY, NC (WWAY) — Eric Andrew Cinotti, the man who was arrested for impersonating a Navassa police officer in 2021, has been convicted in a Brunswick County Court.

According to Chris Thomas with the Brunswick County District Attorney's Office, Cinotti, 46, entered an Alford Plea on May 6. He was found guilty on two felony counts of Operating a Vehicle with Blue Lights, and one felony count of Operating a Vehicle With Blue Lights Causing Others to Yield.

The Alford Plea means Cinotti is found guilty, although he maintains his innocence.

He was initially arrested on July 23, 2021 by detectives with the Leland Police Department and charged with one count of felony Impersonation of a Law Enforcement Officer. In September he was indicted on eight total criminal charges.

On July 21, Cinotti arrived on the scene of a medical call and represented himself as a law enforcement officer with the Town of Navassa.

Police say Cinotti was wearing a black ballistic vest with the word "police" written on the front and a Navassa Police Department metal badge that read "Detective" pinned to the vest. He was also openly carrying a black semi-automatic handgun on his right hip and had a police radio.

So did they give him a badge and car as a volunteer? If so how did they charge him for impersonating an officer? Obviously he was wrong for going to a scene in a neighboring jurisdiction.

Dustin Scott Baker that's correct badge, ID, car, radio, vest, OC spray, handcuffs, handcuff key, as baton and other equipment, all issued by the chief and yes, that chief authorized me to respond to 911 EMS call because I had an EMS bag in my car and M EMS don't believe everything you read.

Wesley Stephens probably because the chief of police issued me a badge an ID with his signature the original signature I might add the vest, the handcuffs, the handcuffs key, a police radio, and I was issued a radio call number for the Brunswick county to reach me in the car and I had to take on car and yes the cheap verbally and in writing a permission to respond to that 911 medical call because I had a medical trauma bag in my vehicle and I'm trained in EMS and My by the way, I never made a penny I was volunteering my time to help people and I bought toys with my own money and gave out toys and football etc. for kids but they left that part out and News as well everything is shady corruption, corruption, corruption

Prosecutors explain why supervisors did not face charges after Cinotti impersonated police officer

By Ann McAdams

Published: May. 19, 2022 at 6:18 PM EDT

NAVASSA, N.C. (WECT) - WECT broke the news this week that Eric Cinotti, the man accused of impersonating a Navassa Police Officer, entered a plea deal in Brunswick County Court. He's now a convicted felon for making traffic stops and responding to an emergency call without being an certified law enforcement officer.

Since that story aired, WECT has fielded questions from people wondering why Cinotti's supervisors are not facing charges too, since Cinotti says former Navassa Police Chief Stephen Conrad is the one who issued him a badge, patrol vehicle, and other police equipment.

"Acting Chief Conrad is a co-conspirator at the very least. If they want to charge me with a felony as they did, then in order for me to do that, I needed somebody to provide me that equipment. It's very clear. It's on video. People saw him teaching me how to use the lights," Cinotti told WECT of how baffled he is about his arrest after volunteering as a detective for the town.

"I believed as a reasonable person — a man with the title of chief or acting chief, and I met him in City all in uniform. He has apparent authority of a chief. Everybody knows what a chief can do, basically, and in that, he gave me the position of auxiliary detective," Cinotti added. He said North Carolina General Statute 160A-283 allows police chiefs to add auxiliary police officers to the force.

Conrad resigned from his job right before news broke that Cinotti had been impersonating a police officer on his watch. But to hold Conrad or other town officials criminally responsible for Cinotti's actions, prosecutors would have to prove intent that they knew Cinotti was not qualified to be an officer and intentionally placed him in that role anyway.

Navassa officials claimed that Cinotti convinced them his background with military police and his training in basic law enforcement were enough for him to work as a volunteer. Prosecutors say they gave him a badge and a patrol car in good faith, assuming that was true.

Cinotti and his mother made the same claims to WECT. They showed us paperwork that they say documents the positions he's held over the years, but they would not let us make copies to help us independently verify that the documents were legitimate.

While they may not be facing criminal charges like Cinotti, prosecutors say it was sloppy of officials with the Town of Navassa not to verify his law enforcement credentials.

"My concerns with the town of Navassa Police Department went beyond their handling of the Cinotti matter. I had serious reservations regarding the structure and leadership of the police department. I am pleased that the town has hired an experienced leader in Chief Darryll Decotis and he appears to be implementing necessary changes. My hope is that town officials will give Chief Decotis and the department the autonomy and resources they need and deserve. The District Attorney's Office will continue to assist the police department in furtherance of their job to serve and protect the citizens of Navassa," Brunswick County District Attorney Jon David told WECT.

When WECT previously attempted to reach former Chief Conrad for comment, he hung up after realizing he was speaking to a reporter. Navassa Mayor Eulis Willis has been reluctant to talk, and has referred us to the town administrator when asked for details about how Cinotti got a badge.

Coast Guard issued warnings about impostor Navassa cop, who has a long history of attempted deception

Earlier this year, a man named Eric Cinotti was convicted of several felonies in connection with his impersonation of a Navassa police officer. An investigation by WHQR reveals a long history of dishonesty and deception, including attempts to gain access to military facilities.

Last year, authorities arrested Eric Cinotti for impersonating an officer. As the case developed, it became clear it was not an isolated incident. Ultimately, Cinotti took an Alford plea deal for three felony counts – but the criminal investigation suggested he had a long history of impersonations.

These weren't harmless. According to a warning from the Coast Guard's Intelligence Division, Cinotti and/or his associates were considered very likely to attempt to gain unauthorized access to the Port of Wilmington – even after he was arrested. In an earlier warning from the Coast Guard, issued before his arrest Cinotti himself was suspected of trying to gain access to other military and government facilities.

All of this seems to be part of a much longer history of deceptive behavior by Cinotti. However, for the record, Cinotti's Alford plea means he maintains his innocence and while Cinotti declined interview requests from WHQR in response to any of the information in this report, he denied all specific allegations of dishonesty.

A strange arrest

Last July Eric Cinotti was arrested for impersonating a law enforcement officer in Brunswick County. Police immediately picked up on odd behaviors exhibited by Cinotti and arrested him at the scene. During the investigation, it came to light that Navassa officials gave Cinotti access to police equipment as a volunteer for the department. Town officials have remained evasive about why they did this, but it's possible the town's ongoing staffing and financing problems could have contributed to the situation.

Authorities initially charged Cinotti with one felony count of impersonating an officer, but the investigation uncovered that Cinotti had performed police stops with a blue light and did so at "excessive" speeds. He entered an Alford plea, in which a defendant acknowledges that the evidence is enough to sway a judge or jury to convict them, while still maintaining their innocence. Based on the plea, Cinotti was convicted of three felony charges involving the use of blue lights on his vehicle.

During the investigation, authorities discovered Cinotti had a history of impersonations, including a firefighter, lawyer, judge, mediator, military officer, EMT, and federal investigator. According to interviews and documents reviewed by WHQR, Cinotti has exaggerated his responsibilities under former employers, forged government documents, claimed phony degrees, and harassed veterans, military members, and their families.

But officials have been silent on the other impersonations outlined in court documents.

documents, claimed phony degrees, and harassed veterans, military members, and their families.

But officials have been silent on the other impersonations outlined in court documents, fraudulent identities that Cinotti has continued to use after his arrest — and may be continuing to use after his conviction. It is unclear if local, state, or federal law enforcement agencies are continuing to investigate him for these or other behaviors.

Coast Guard 2021 and 2022 BOLOs

Several weeks ago, WHQR received the second of at least two "Be On the Look Out" (BOLO) bulletins published by the U.S. Coast Guard that identified Cinotti as a suspect who has been impersonating a military colonel and a law enforcement officer.

Coast Guard Sector North Carolina
(UNCLASSIFIED/LAW ENFORCEMENT SENSITIVE)
BOLO
"Fraudulent Militia Member Recruiting Individuals and Targeting Port of Wilmington"

Date: 02/04/2022
Subject 1: Eric Andrew Cinotti
Subject 2: [REDACTED]

Summary: On 02 FEB 2022, [REDACTED] contacted the Leland Police Department (LPD) with concerns about Cinotti. [REDACTED] informed LPD that he had been recruited by Cinotti to be part of "Project Oculus LLC", which he stated was tied to a joint CIA/NSA task force investigating human smuggling at the Port of Wilmington. Project Oculus LLC was established by Cinotti in SEP 2021 and it is not affiliated with any Government Agency. Cinotti has repeatedly tried to access multiple military facilities to obtain a military Common Access Card (CAC). He has also claimed to be a Colonel (O-6) in the "North Carolina State Army Guard", attempting to recruit "soldiers". The North Carolina State Army Guard is not a sanctioned organization. In 2019, USCG members and their families were harassed by Cinotti, who falsely identified himself as a CG Law Enforcement Officer. He was subsequently disavowed from the USCG Auxiliary. Cinotti falsely claims to be a board-certified mediator in New Jersey and an Appellate Court Judge in NC. On 23 JUL 2021, Cinotti was arrested and charged with impersonating a police officer. On 26 JUL 2021, a USCG Officer encountered Cinotti at a Wilmington baseball game wearing an Army uniform with Colonel rank insignia. On 18 DEC 2021, USCG members encountered Cinotti, his wife, and possibly Hampton at a "Wreckless Across America" event at a cemetery in Wilmington. On 02 FEB 2022, a USCG member encountered Cinotti conducting contactless drills with their child as part of a class at a Taekwondo dojo in Wilmington.

Assessment/Implications: Based on past reporting and his continued activities, it is very likely that Mr. Cinotti and/or associates will attempt to gain unauthorized access to the Port of Wilmington.

Be On the Look Out (BOLO) notice for Eric Cinotti and an alleged associate issued by the United States Coast Guard's Intelligence Division.

Editor's note: WHQR was unable to contact Cinotti's recruit. Aside from several traffic tickets, the individual does not appear to have a criminal record and did, according to the Coast Guard, contact law enforcement with concerns about Cinotti. For those reasons, we have redacted the individual from the USCG BOLO.

The bulletin was initially issued in February of this year, after Cinotti's arrest but prior to his conviction. It contained a narrative of his continued attempts to gain access to local military and government facilities by fraudulently obtaining official military identification. It also revealed that Cinotti approached the children of military service members and has continued to harass service members and their families.

And, perhaps most troubling, the first BOLO notes it is "very likely that Mr. Cinotti and/or associates will attempt to gain unauthorized access to the Port of Wilmington," — and, despite his arrest, shows a continued pursuit of this goal.

The BOLO describes Cinotti's most recent endeavors to recruit for a currently defunct state militia; he has so far apparently recruited one known member.

The bulletin notes that Cinotti registered a business named Project Oculus LLC, which he claims is "tied to a joint CIA/NSA task force investigating human smuggling at the Port of Wilmington." The bulletin refuted that the company had ties to any government agency.

BOLO
"Possible Militia Member Trying to Gain Military Access"

Date: 04/01/2022
Subject: Eric Andrew Cinotti

Summary: This bulletin was recently anticipated to obtain a military Common Access Card (CAC) at multiple locations and himself to be a Colonel (O-6) in the "North Carolina State Guard". Mr. Cinotti is also attempting to find jobs for the "soldiers". According to their website, the "NC State Guard" is believed to be a militia or paramilitary (voluntary organization). In 2019, USCG members and their families were harassed by the subject and falsely identified himself as a USCG Law Enforcement Officer. In the past week, Mr. Cinotti has attempted to gain a CAC from Fort Crater and the Navy Reserve Center in Wilmington, NC. But was denied from both. The subject recently has been released a state State Guard card to Leland, NC. He also claims to be a board certified mediator in New Jersey and an Appellate Court Judge in NC. The subject was disavowed from the US Auxiliary in 2019, and his DOD 2-L4 in his auxiliary profile was disavowed was previously on Army 2-L4.

The first BOLO WHQR received was published on April 7, 2021, several months before his arrest, and detailed other attempts by Cinotti to impersonate military personnel (including his claim to be a Coast Guard law enforcement officer) and gain access to restricted areas.

The U.S. Coast Guard initially declined to comment on these, but after the second BOLO, they provided a statement.

"The Coast Guard can confirm that we did issue a BOLO on April 7, 2021, and February 4, 2022, after Mr. Cinotti was found to be impersonating military members, recruiting civilians to a fraudulent militia, and soliciting unwarranted contact with Coast Guard personnel. The Coast Guard will continue to monitor all threats to its members, infrastructure, and Marine Transportation System," according to Lt. Andrew Jacot, public affairs officer for Sector North Carolina.

Cinotti's history of embellishment and dishonesty

Prior to Cinotti's arrest, there was an extensive LinkedIn profile in his name. While Cinotti declined to comment on it on the record, he denied the LinkedIn account was his, claiming someone else had set it up. Nevertheless, it matches some of the claims the Coast Guard ascribe to him, and WHQR was able to verify some of the employment in the resume — although often it turns out Cinotti had embellished or invented his various roles and the time he served in the jobs. In some cases, Cinotti noted years or months where he lasted mere hours before organizations realized he was not who he said he was.

The resume includes a military history in it; he asserts he was an officer in the U.S. Navy Reserve. But documents received in FOIA requests show that Cinotti joined the U.S. Naval Reserve in Connecticut and served for five years and obtained the rank of E4 — not an officer.

He deployed to support Operation Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom. During this time, Cinotti worked aboard a naval vessel with NCIS in Bahrain during his deployment and served with his unit for 15 months, according to a New Jersey National Guard Public Affairs officer, Capt. Amelia Thatcher. Cinotti's DD214, which covered the time he was on deployment, noted he did not receive or complete any additional training during his time with NCIS, including law enforcement or intelligence training.

After he was discharged from the Naval Reserve, he joined the New Jersey National Guard and served from 2007 to 2009 (a common enlistment term during this time), according to Capt. Thatcher.

"In the New Jersey National Guard, the individual you referenced was never commissioned as an officer. He was enlisted the whole time," said Major Agneta Muman, Public Affairs officer for the New Jersey Department of Military Affairs.

Below: Cinotti's LinkedIn page, article continues afterward

Cinotti's history of impersonation dates back at least 13 years. According to a public records request fulfilled by the town of South Hackensack, New Jersey, Cinotti applied to become a volunteer for the local fire department. The 20-page packet includes a lengthy resume, several letters of recommendation, certifications, and military awards.

Below: Cinotti's application packet

South Hackensack Fire Department application materials by Ben Schachtman on Scribd

The contents in the packet are similar to what appeared on Cinotti's LinkedIn page before it was taken down.

The packet contains a 2015 letter from the fire department that outlined their attempts to contact Cinotti for his failure to appear at calls, mandatory meetings, and drills.

The letter requests Cinotti to return "personal protective equipment" including "turnout coat and pants, Nomex hood, fire gloves and boots, department issued helmet" and "personal accountability tags bearing gear number 29." It also notes that Cinotti had been given and needed to return "dispatching and communication equipment such as a pager or radio," "all department issued uniform regalia such as badges and collar brass," and "keys to department buildings and the closets and cabinets."

The Township of South Hackensack Municipal Clerk Donna Gambutti said that there was no "outstanding" gear but did not confirm it had been returned to the department when asked if it was returned or just discharged off the inventory.

The Township of South Hackensack Municipal Clerk Donna Gambutti said that there was no "outstanding" gear but did not confirm it had been returned to the department when asked if it was returned or just discharged off the inventory.

Forged Letter of Recommendation

Contained within the volunteer packet is a letter dated April 1, 2008. It has a Headquarters New Jersey National Guard header, the Department of Defense and National Guard seal, and is signed by Sgt. 1st Class Robert Barea.

Barea told WHQR in a Facebook message, "the letter you are referring to was a result of him forging my signature. I have cut all ties with him when that occurred."

When asked how long he thought Cinotti had been doing this type of thing, Barea said, "A long time, well before I met him."

Cinotti denied knowing Mr. Barea during a phone call with WHQR.

It is unclear why Cinotti was discharged from the New Jersey National Guard, the document received with the FOIA states "for the convenience of the government."

"I do not know why Cinotti was separated... but you see what he is capable of so you can make your own assumptions," said Barea.

WHQR could not confirm the authenticity of the other letters either due to the death of the signor or inability to reach the letter writer because they no longer worked at the organization or did not respond to request for comment.

Claimed work history

The resume contained in Cinotti's packet says that in 2010 he was working as the "Senior Law Director and Chief Defense Analyst," at the now defunct Project Freedom Fund.

New Jersey Attorney General Paula Dow prosecuted Project Freedom Fund for masquerading as a non-profit who assisted prisoners with legal advice. The case found that Project Freedom Fund defrauded the public by providing "faulty" legal advice by disbarred or non-lawyers.

Though several employees were named in the case, Cinotti was not one of them, said Essex County Courthouse spokesperson Sabrina Habibulla.

The resume also states Cinotti was awarded a Ph.D. in 2010 from Rochville University in 2010, which was identified as fake diploma mill where students could purchase degrees without having to attend courses, according to a 2015 New York Times investigative piece.

The resume states Cinotti was the "Chief of Investigations and Senior Law Clerk at The William J. Jeffery Law Firm. When WHQR contacted Jeffery, he said he employed Cinotti as a paralegal on a per diem basis but that he did not have the title of "Chief of Investigations and Senior Law Clerk."

court clerks and clients and ensuring that clients knew to make their court appearances," Jeffery said.

In a review of the items Cinotti listed as job responsibilities, Jeffery said, "he did not analyze crime scene data and review all related evidence and testimony" for me. While he did interview prospective clients for me, he never "appear[ed] on behalf of the defendant in court."

Jeffery says he ended his working relationship with Cinotti because he "found that he often overstepped his bounds" and gave this example:

"During one of the [court] appearances, Eric decided to stand next to me at counsel's table. The Judge stopped me and asked who Eric was. I advised the Court that he was my paralegal. The Judge asked that he take a seat in the gallery since he was neither an attorney nor a defendant. Eric then began arguing with the Judge about whether he was allowed to sit as 'second chair' at counsel table in Court. I had to ask the Judge for a brief recess, pull Eric aside, and tell him in no uncertain terms that when a Judge tells you in Court to sit in the gallery, then you sit in the gallery. You don't argue with the Judge, especially when he is the one who will be trying your client's case."

Overstepping the boundaries and responsibilities given to him by his employers seems to be a pastime of Cinotti's; as has been his ability to get websites that are, or seem to be, official to list him as a professional in whatever field he decides he wants to impersonate.

A lawyer?

In the winter of 2017-2018, Cinotti was briefly employed by Julia Olson-Boseman as an investigator. Cinotti represented himself as an attorney to several people, but was not hired in that capacity at Olson-Boseman's firm. He was let go after a short period of time.

Before it was taken down, Cinotti also operated a website for The Cinotti Group which advertised that he was an accredited lawyer who could represent clients in North Carolina even though the North Carolina or New Jersey Bar has no record of him and he does not appear to be a licensed attorney.

Again, Cinotti declined to comment on this point.

When WHQR asked the American Bar Association (ABA) about his membership, a representative stated in an email, "The ABA is a voluntary membership association for legal professionals and members of the general public with an interest in the Rule of Law" and to contact the local state chapter for confirmation of his license. Cinotti is not now or in the past been a licensed attorney according to the North Carolina Bar Association's website.

Lawyers.com had Cinotti listed as an attorney until June 2, when it was removed.

The Federal Bar Association still has Cinotti listed as a Prof Eric Cinotti MPA JD, Government Confidential, though he no longer works for the government. The FBA has not responded to WHQR's emails.

It is a federal offense to impersonate a government official "acting under the authority of the United States" in order to "obtain any money, paper, document, or thing of value," though it is unclear whether Cinotti ever represented any clients.

The Department of Justice Eastern Division said they do not have an open investigation on Cinotti, and the federal and state investigation agencies have not returned our requests for comment on this matter. In the meantime, Cinotti now appears free to continue his pattern of harassment and impersonations, unfettered.

After DOI: "My pre-Saturday night evening thought clearly to be followed up with a post Saturday night thought... Where to begin... " Never underestimate a lifelong learner someone who has five college degrees leading all the way up into the doctoral level currently and working on number six; never underestimate that very person with a 160+ IQ and the GRIT and determination to survive anything that has been thrown their way. Survival is not a luxury, a sport, a recreation or A fancy way to describe yourself in a bio running for office; BUTFOR, survival is a way of life for so many; NOT everyone was just handed the keys and given a job, power, money MOST require intestinal fortitude and determination to reach into success; the real question is do you have what it takes to survive In an ever-changing society or a world where you can no longer hide behind a veil and you can pretend to be something that you're not; that you're not nearly qualified to be doing in the first place. This is a whole new realm there's a whole new set of rules, values, morals, morales, and ethics. Sometimes it's just easier to hide behind positions, authority, and persons or friends of influence than just confront the true meaning of what survival really means.... it's more than just fancy words it's a way of life and survival is not just life or death, as that would be just simple minded and rudimentary thinking, survival is having a mental fortitude the GRIT, GUTS, and perseverance to face those with dignity and honor with whom have dishonored you yet not pity them but in some small way have empathy for their lack of self awareness and true intellect for they are unable to sit at your table and hold a real conversation; it's like the man with everything to say but has nothing really to say at all. The man with no voice who everybody hears but sure we never heard. The true meaning of who you and your cohorts and all you surround yourself may, in fact, be the measure of a man, in your world, but is not the measure of a true man it's the measure of a wolf in sheep's clothing. GRIT, GRIT, can we afford me this moment to enlighten you, GRIT is when you get up and you keep going forward no matter how hard you get hit no matter what is thrown at you when it's feels the weight of the world is on you and all those who think they are mighty throw everything they have at you you, YET, you still prevail and you still charge forward and ultimately you charge and step right over the very source of what was attempting, I'll repeat attempting, to hurt you, the family, friends with complete and utter distortion due to some peoples clear and convincing manner of fear for what they know is true and have zero control over and lay in bed waiting what is next.....anticipation is a funny thing it can create emotions one never thought existed. It takes a lot more than fancy LOCAL news stories, garbage blogs and public Facebook posts to destroy a WARRIOR A Warrior knows honor and a warrior never backs down and a warrior never ever turns their back and as a warrior is an intelligent individual and there's never thoughts of revenge or getting even for that is of a lowly man; the warrior will never forget for every warrior they have their moment that makes them a warrior and that cannot be taken away. Let me comclude this little post with a quote from one of my favorite historical figures and one who I believe is the most influential elected official of all time and who will never be replaced nor could ever be compared to anyone; no one in office could hold a candle or shine his shoes. Lincoln said: "Nearly all men can stand adversity, but if you want to test a man's character, give him power." If you don't know how you feel or should you feel uncomfortable after reading this quote then maybe the quote is speaking to you. "

Under North Carolina defamation law, for a defamatory statement to be actionable, "they must refer to some ascertained or ascertainable person and that person must be the plaintiff." Arnold v. Sharpe, 296 N.C. 533, 539, (1979).

Article 12.

Libel and Slander.

§ 14-47. ♦ Communicating libelous matter to newspapers.

If any person shall state, deliver or transmit by any means whatever, to the manager, editor, publisher or reporter of any newspaper or periodical for publication therein any false and libelous statement concerning any person or corporation, and thereby secure the publication of the same, he shall be guilty of a Class 2 misdemeanor. Elements of Defamation

The elements of a defamation claim in North Carolina are essentially similar to the elements discussed in the general Defamation Law section, with the following exceptions and clarifications:

Defamation Per Se

North Carolina has a broad definition of libel per se. This term refers to statements so egregious that they will always be considered defamatory and are assumed to harm the plaintiff's reputation, without further need to prove that harm. In North Carolina, a statement that does any of the following things amounts to libel per se:

charges that a person has committed an infamous crime;
charges a person with having an infectious disease; TENDS TO IMPEACH A PERSON IN THAT PERSON'S TRADE OR PROFESSION; or otherwise tends to subject one to ridicule, contempt, or disgrace.

The best way to hide the truth, lies and self preservation is to discredit those that can see you what you really are and can have the ability, intellect and GRIT to stand TALL and let everyone know what is hiding behind the veil.....so, what does a weak person running in fear do instead of facing what they, and OTHERS, have done and continue to do is to be a coward and do everything anything to ATTEMPT to discredit the very person that you know isn't afraid of you and you know our smarts you so when AND when they do tell and show everyone you use every tool, including manipulating the media, discredit and destroy their character so no one will believe what they say later.....READ A BOOK, GET A DEGREE THIS IS WRITTEN RIGHT IN THE BOOK "THE ART OF WAR" discredit your enemies, they even did it to Jesus.

Only, a true fool sees the same 1-3 garbage google links on the first page just piggybacked over and over again to make it seem something it's not. Google is a "guide" to assist in locating reliable information from credible sources it's NOT research. These are the same clowns that use Wikipedia to write a research paper.

Don't fear what you knowFEAR WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW AND CANT CONTROL. #google #media #research

Here is a screenshot of the academic content of the previous listed link. A very good read and thought provoking.

(A suggested reading for students)

The Report describes many varieties of misconduct in investigations and prosecutions. Some are always deliberate, some are rarely or never deliberate, and some may or may not be deliberate.

The Report organizes the myriad of types of misconduct into five general categories, roughly in the chronological order of a criminal case, from initial investigation to conviction: Witness Tampering; Misconduct in Interrogations of Suspects; Fabricating Evidence; Concealing Exculpatory Evidence; Misconduct at Trial.

Most of the misconduct we discuss was committed by police officers and by prosecutors. We also report misconduct by forensic analysts in a minority of cases, mostly rapes and sexual assaults, and by child welfare workers in about a quarter of child sex abuse cases.

they're not appreciating that too much and this last one really resonated with the council, but I can't say for sure that that's the reason they did what they did."

Brunswick District Attorney Jon David and former council member Thurman Everett have both blamed Navassa's comparatively low salaries as a reason for low police staff retention. Navassa offers police officer candidates a maximum of $37,500 to $40,000 per year plus benefits. Neighboring Northwest offers law enforcement positions $40,462 to $50,200.

After Howell resigned in May 2021, Stephen Conrad served as his interim replacement. Conrad then resigned shortly after him in July 2021.

A day after Conrad's resignation, the police department faced scandal. Leland resident Eric Cinotti, a volunteer without formal police certification, was arrested for impersonating an officer in Navassa. He was later convicted in a Brunswick County court on two felony counts of operating a vehicle with blue lights.

Brunswick District Attorney Jon David criticized town officials for failing to verify Cinotti's law enforcement credentials. He described the blunder as symptomatic of broader structural and leadership problems with the town's police department.

Daryll DeCotis then took over as police chief from November 2021 until May 2023. Solari told Port City Daily that medical issues contributed to DeCotis' retirement.

Solari rejoined the Navassa force as interim lead officer in August 2023 after spending three years with the Northwest Police Department. He previously worked for Navassa from February 2014 to August 2020.

Does that mean Colorado thinks Biden's done a bang up job? I'd rather see Biden and those like him barred from the ballot.

Let's take a complex-nosed look and provide a comprehensive examination of the shortcomings within the child welfare system, highlighting the urgent need for reform. By delving into the intricacies of this complex issue, we seek to shed light on the systemic failures that have resulted in the system's inadequacy in safeguarding the well-being of vulnerable children. This analysis serves as a clarion call for immediate action to rectify the deficiencies and ensure effective and equitable care for all children.

Child welfare systems play a vital role in ensuring the well-being of vulnerable children by offering them essential safety, security, and care. Nevertheless, an increasing body of evidence suggests that these systems, manifestations, encompassing the excessive workload experienced by caseworkers, inadequate funding allocated to programs, and a lack of cultural awareness. This article examines the various aspects of these shortcomings, presenting a critical analysis and proposing alternative remedies.

The primary issue pertains to caseworkers forced to work ridiculous hours, have very little supervision, and very little specialized training, if any. Most have zero life experience, and this might be their first job post-college. Moreover, the pay rate is subpar, and they are railroaded with excessive cases (i.e., children and families), thus creating an overbearing workload and hostile environment. The turnover rate speaks for itself.

One of the most prominent challenges afflicting child welfare systems is the substantial workload imposed on social workers and caseworkers. Based on established professional guidelines, it is recommended that caseworkers manage a workload consisting of around 12 to 15 cases concurrently to ensure effective management. Nevertheless, it is not unusual for caseworkers to handle twice or even three times the above quantity.

The ramifications of such an excessive burden are significant. The occurrence of rushed visits, insufficient assessments, and considerable oversight errors may ensue. Regrettably, in certain instances, this disproportionate burden has resulted in the demise or significant maltreatment of children who may have Process seemingly places the organization at the disadvantage of gaining the “personal effect” that “In recent years, technology has significantly transformed various aspects of our lives, including how organizations conduct their hiring processes.

Resolving this issue requires the implementation of both immediate and enduring measures. The immediate priority is recruiting highly skilled caseworkers to handle the workload effectively. Nevertheless, implementing this approach would be impractical unless there is a significant augmentation in financial resources. Over an extended period, technology can potentially optimize administrative responsibilities, enabling caseworkers to allocate more time toward effective case management.

Critiquing the Limitations of the Foster Care System, this analysis examines the inherent flaws and shortcomings within the foster care system. By scrutinizing its limitations, we aim to shed light on the areas that require improvement to enhance the overall effectiveness and outcomes to ensure the public is aware of what exactly is going on with our children right in our neighborhoods using our tax dollars.

Originally designed as a short-term intervention to support children in vulnerable circumstances, the foster care system frequently evolves into a protracted experience characterized by many relocations. The relocation of children from one residence to another results in a diminished perception of permanence and stability, impeding their emotional and psychological maturation.

It is recommended that foster parents receive supplementary training to effectively address the intricate challenges frequently encountered when effectively address the intricate challenges frequently encountered when caring for foster children, a significant proportion of whom have experienced traumatic events. In addition, it is imperative to allocate more resources toward preserving sibling unity and placing children in households that can adequately address their long-term needs.

Insufficient financial resources pervasively impact all facets of the child welfare system. Inadequate financial resources give rise to staffing inadequacies, limited training opportunities for foster parents, poor provision of psychological services for children, and low efforts towards preventive interventions to preserve family cohesion before reaching a critical juncture.

Public-Private Partnerships. With this in mind, let's explore and discuss the idea of public-private partnerships (PPPs) to address various challenges governments face. PPPs involve collaboration between government entities and private sector organizations to undertake projects or provide services that benefit the jointly

The augmentation of financial resources necessitates a collaborative endeavor from the public and commercial sectors. Public-private partnerships have the potential to offer the financial resources needed for enhancing services, ensuring sufficient staffing levels, and implementing proactive measures.

Another restraint on the system is Cultural Insensitivity and Bias in Society. Cultural insensitivity and bias are prevalent issues in contemporary society. These phenomena refer to the lack of awareness, understanding, and respect towards different cultures, as well as the presence of prejudiced Children from marginalized ethnic and racial backgrounds are disproportionately in child welfare data. Numerous scholars contend that overrepresentation can be attributed to systemic bias and cultural insensitivity, which give rise to unwarranted separations and inadequate support for maintaining family unity.

What if everyone were to be Culturally Informed Care in Healthcare Settings? This concept discusses the importance of implementing culturally informed care in healthcare settings. Culturally informed care refers to an approach that recognizes and respects the cultural backgrounds, beliefs, values

Implementing cultural sensitivity training for caseworkers has the potential to significantly contribute to resolving this matter. Furthermore, it is imperative to prioritize establishing culturally sensitive environments for children, which may entail placing them in kinship care placements or foster families that align with their cultural heritage.

The school-to-prison pipeline refers to the process by which students, particularly those from marginalized communities, are funneled from educational institutions into the criminal justice system. This pipeline is characterized by

There has been some discussion of School-Based Interventions. Still, there are not many documented statistics, nor does there seem to be a significant calling for funding to explore this potential solution. If such a plan were to implement school-based interventions to address various challenges, students face in the educational setting. School-based interventions refer to

Instead of relying on the child welfare system as a general solution for diverse problems, it is advisable to provide schools with on-site psychologists and counselors who can effectively handle minor issues before they develop into more significant concerns.

The topic of legal complexities is a multifaceted and intricate area of study that requires a comprehensive understanding of the legal system and its intricacies. Legal complexities encompass a wide

The examination and alignment of child welfare legislation is vital to ensure that the paramount consideration is given to the child's well-being, often necessitating the expeditious establishment of a stable and enduring residence.

Although the challenges faced by the child protection system may appear formidable, they are not insurmountable. The implementation of necessary changes can be achieved through a collaborative endeavor that engages various stakeholders, such as lawmakers, child welfare experts, and communities. Preserving human lives is paramount, and the consequences of not taking action are too significant for society to bear. Hence, it is necessary and a matter of moral significance.

Eric Andrew Cinotti Navigates the Juvenile Justice System

Eric Andrew Cinotti has earned an AAS in Criminal Justice, BA in Sociology & Criminology, Master of Public Administration, and a Juris Doctorate with a concentration on the US Constitution, currently working on a PhD. Additionally, he has dedicated more than 20 years in law and government service. In the following article, Eric Cinotti navigates the juvenile justice system, and the opportunities it provides for rehabilitation and improving the lives of troubled young people.

In a 2019 report by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, courts with juvenile jurisdiction handled an estimated 722,600 delinquency cases. Anyone under the age of 18 that is accused of committing delinquency (like truancy, shoplifting, or vandalism) or criminal acts (such as theft, assault, and murder) were subjected to the youth offender system.

Eric Cinotti explains that the juvenile justice system is like the adult criminal justice system in many ways, but it operates under the premise of delinquency cases. Anyone under the age of 18 that is accused of committing delinquency (like truancy, shoplifting, or vandalism) or criminal acts (such as theft, assault, and murder) were subjected to the youth offender system.

Eric Cinotti explains that the juvenile justice system is like the adult criminal justice system in many ways, but it operates under the premise of rehabilitation and correction rather than punishment, seeking to avoid incarceration whenever possible.

Eric Andrew Cinotti Explains the Complexity of Juvenile Incarceration

In a report by the National Center for Juvenile Justice, detained or incarcerated youth have a higher likelihood of being subjected to various negative circumstances, including:

- overcrowding
- physical and sexual violence
- risk of suicide
- death
- By keeping juvenile incarceration as a last resort, the negative circumstances of out-of-home placement can be mitigated.
- Instead of segregating the young person from their community, a successful case is the youth learning from the experience without being exposed to an adult prison, having no formal contact with the juvenile or criminal justice systems.

Criminal Justice Systems

- Youth Rehabilitation Through Diversion Programs
- Eric Cinotti says that diversion programs steer offenders away from the “deep end” of the legal process using programming, supervision, and support. This avoids labeling youth as a “delinquent,” which may actually increase future delinquency.
- Youth that undergo diversion are less likely to become delinquents in the future compared to formally detained youths. With that in mind, employing diversion programs and placing youth in a community rehabilitative setting is the preferred method of dealing with minor delinquency charges.
- Eric Andrew Cinotti notes that there are various types of diversion programs depending on how far along it's used during the juvenile legal process, but the overarching goal is the same: to informally rehabilitate delinquency as a means of preventing future offenses. Typical services provided for youth and families in diversion programs include one or more of the following:
 - Screening and assessment
 - Education and tutorial services
 - Victim awareness classes and activities
 - Service-learning programs
 - Substance use education and counseling
 - Job skills training
 - Mental health treatment

- For youth already involved or in danger of being involved with the justice system, diversion programs maintain a young person's connection to their community by keeping them in their environment. These programs typically occur on school premises, on community sites, or at the youth's home.
- Re-entry into the Community After Juvenile Incarceration
- The most severe sanction that a juvenile court can impose is restriction of a youth's freedom through placement in Non Secure Care, commonly known as Residential Placement.
- Eric Andrew Cinotti says that previously incarcerated youth transitioning from residential placement can face many concerns as they re-enter the community, home, and school or work force. When preparing for re-entry, these key issues must be addressed:
 - • A stable home environment, nurturing skills and healing of damaged relationships.
 - • Reducing or discontinuing substance use/abuse.
 - • Productive use of free time, and refraining from socializing with delinquent peers.
 - • Facilitating an environment that inspires educational achievements.

- • Facilitating an environment that inspires educational achievements.
- • A support system that addresses mental, social, behavioral, and health concerns.
- Most importantly, it is vital to be aware that a juvenile record can affect the youth's future, making it challenging to move on with life. Most states provide an opportunity to clear juvenile records. Others allow it to be expunged (other terms used are "seal," "delete," "destroy," or "expunct") making it inaccessible without permission from a judge.
- The process to get a juvenile record cleared is different in each state, a local lawyer or The Gault Center can provide specific information about personal circumstances for clearing a juvenile record.
- For the youth and their family, toolkits prepared by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, provides direction prior to reentry and steps to be done while still inside residential placement. Also included are common barriers the family can expect during reentry, along with the tools needed to overcome them.
- Eric Cinotti explains that regardless of where youth return after leaving Residential Placement, within the sphere of the youth criminal justice system, there is a firm belief that these formerly troubled young people can and will lead healthy and constructive lives if given guidance and the opportunity to grow.

Eric A. Cinotti, holding a JD and MPA, brings his legal and public administration expertise to an investigative editorial on U.S. Bail Reform. His background in law, military service, and journalism uniquely positions him to address failings in Child Welfare and Juvenile Justice, advocating for systemic change.

Justice,

The United States is currently facing a critical decision point, as the urgent matter of bail reform gains significant attention in broader talks on criminal justice reform. This critical movement seeks to eliminate the deeply rooted deficiencies in the pretrial system, which perpetuate socioeconomic inequalities and unnecessarily overcrowd prisons with individuals accused of minor offenses, many of whom are innocent UNIL PROVen guild by a jury of the accused peer;

moreover, bail is meant to secure a defendant to court, and to protect the general public if the accused is "Determined" to be a flight risk or a risk to themselves or the community at large. The core of this movement revolves around questioning the constitutionality and fairness of cash bail systems, which disproportionately harm individuals with low incomes, resulting in their imprisonment simply because they cannot afford bail. This is not a situation encountered by wealthy individuals.

Eric's Substack

An essential aspect of the case for bail reform revolves around the opposition to cash bail, which is seen as an unfair obstacle to freedom and worsens inequalities within the legal system. There is a strong demand for a fundamental change in how risk assessments are conducted, focusing on using objective variables rather than financial capabilities to predict the probability of a prisoner fleeing or committing another crime if freed before trial. This move holds the potential for a more fair and unbiased approach to making judgments about detention. It is reinforced by the increase in pretrial services that try to decrease the likelihood of reoffending by providing reminders for court dates, counseling for substance addiction, and other helpful tools.

The core of this effort lies in enacting legislative and policy reforms, which are being implemented extensively throughout several states and local governments. These modifications aim to reduce the dependence on cash bail and implement alternative conditions for release that do not include money. They provide judges with a structure that combines explicit standards do not include money; they provide judges with a structure that conforms to explicit standards with the ability to make individualized assessments for each case.

Although there is a lot of excitement about change, detractors express apprehension about possible dangers to public safety and an increase in failure-to-appear rates. However, proponents of reform present data from areas where bail reform has been put into effect, demonstrating the potential for promoting fair justice outcomes without compromising public safety.

The discussion regarding bail reform explores profound inquiries regarding justice, the impact of wealth on legal results, and the intricate equilibrium between protecting individual rights and guaranteeing community safety. As this discourse progresses, it represents a crucial chance for the criminal justice system to self-reflect and experience significant and positive reform. The shared objective is evident: to provide a path towards a future in which the principles of fairness, equity, and justice form the fundamental basis of our legal system, mirroring the enduring commitment of the 8th Amendment. This purpose requires a collective dedication to confront shared objective is evident: to provide a path towards a future in which the principles of fairness, equity, and justice form the fundamental basis of our legal system, mirroring the enduring commitment of the 8th Amendment. This purpose requires a collective dedication to confront and tackle these urgent concerns, aiming for a restructured bail system that better conforms with America's fundamental principles of justice for everyone.

I confronted him about his credentials in May 2020. Almost immediately after I called him out and said I was going to report him to the state bars for indicating he was an attorney, he removed his Harvard LL.M degree from his profile.

I recently found him back online hosting some crazy video podcast and posted screenshots. He replied with unintelligible nonsense and turned off the comments feature. Crazy!

Leland Police educates community in response to man impersonating Navassa officer

July 28, 2021 by Peyton Furtado

LELAND, NC (WWAY) — After a man was caught operating blue lights on an unmarked Navassa police car, Leland Police said many in the community are concerned about their safety on the road.

LELAND, NC (WWAY) — After a man was caught operating blue lights on an unmarked Navassa police car, Leland Police said many in the community are concerned about their safety on the road.

Leland Police say they want to make it clear their officers go through rigorous training, education, and background checks before being sworn in.

According to Lieutenant Dallas Warren, Eric Cinotti's use of blue lights made his impersonation of an officer a felony.

"He was charged with the impersonation of a law enforcement officer statute. It's that subsection that makes the crime either a misdemeanor or a felony," said Warren.

Members of the community have reached out to Leland PD since then, worried the same could happen in Leland.

Warren said all Leland officers are so clearly marked, it would be almost impossible to impersonate a Leland officer. You can tell an officer by their cars or their clothing.

Detectives clearly display their badge and ID, while patrolling officers wear a uniform.

"They're going to be wearing a full, what people would call police uniform. It's going to have our patches on the sleeves, and its either going to have a hard medal badge, or a sewn on badge like this one."

If drivers ever have doubts, get pulled over late at night, or are pulled over in an isolated area, Warren says they should stay safe.

"We encourage them put on their flashers, slow down to a safe speed, and they're welcome to call 911 and verify whether or not they're being pulled over by a law enforcement officer."

If they run into someone impersonating an officer, call 911 immediately.

If they run into someone impersonating an officer, call 911 immediately.

Though Leland PD would not comment on any specific facts of Cinotti's case, they are asking anyone who has interacted with him in the past week to call them.

The Town of Navassa has also not explained how Cinotti had an unmarked patrol car in the first place.

ISIS Terror Plot Foiled in NYC: Feds Thwart Major Attack on Jewish CommunitiesIn a sobering reminder of the ever-present threat of terrorism, federal agents, acting on cooperation from north of the border, have been able to disrupt a major ISIS-inspired plot that targeted New York City. The plot was related to Jewish communities and had ties with significant dates this October 2024. Let's break down the information on the plot, arrest, and what that means for this ongoing global fight against terrorism.Major Plot Terror Unveiled: What We Know So FarOn September 4, 2024, one 20-year-old Muhammad Shahzeb Khan of Pakistan was arrested in Canada for masterminding a coordinated terror attack on Jewish communities in New York. The attack pertained to early October this year, on October 7, upon the anniversary of the 2023 Hamas invasion of Israel. Khan planned to make several simultaneous attacks on Jewish centers around New York, mainly Chabad synagogues, with the intention of inflicting mass casualties in support of ISIS.Online Radicalization and the Rise of Digital ExtremismKhan's radicalization took hold online, in late 2023. It is a disturbingly too-familiar story of youthful minds being sucked into the dark vortex of extremist ideologies, courtesy of the internet, where one finds comradeship and consumes propaganda on any number of platforms. propaganda on any number of platforms. Khan communicated extensively with undercover FBI agents, discussing his desire to form an "offline cell" of ISIS supporters to execute his violent plans. If anything, the plot underlined the growing threat of Web-based radicalization as terrorist outfits continued to exploit digital spaces to inspire, recruit, and incite acts of violence. The defeat of ISIS, having lost its territorial control, does nothing at all to lessen the very formidable challenge that its ability to influence and inspire through digital networks presents to law enforcement. Khan's case underlines dramatically the fact that, with online forums continuing to breed this extremism, the fight against homegrown extremism will never truly be over.

Weapons, Tactics, and the Planned Execution The assault method of Khan had been brutal, artfully executed. He conceptualized a military-style, AR-15-staged, coordinated mass shooting across multiple Jewish centers. The aim? To "slaughter" as many Jewish people as possible in solidarity with ISIS. It was to be simultaneous to maximize destruction and loss of life. Thankfully, law enforcement caught up with Khan before he could do what he wanted to do. He was arrested in Ormstown, Canada, just minutes before attempting to cross into the United States to finalize his preparations. It involved U.S.-Canadian cooperation in preventing perhaps one of potentially the deadliest terror attacks to have hit American soil in recent years.

Arrest and Legal Consequences Khan was arrested before he could accomplish his intended massacre. He faces a few pretty serious charges, including attempting to provide material support to a foreign terrorist organization—a conviction could mean as many as 20 years in prison. The arrest underlines not only the efficiency of international intelligence cooperation but also brings into limelight important legal questions revolving around cases of online radicalization and homegrown terrorism.

A Broader Look at National Security Concerns The foiled plot serves as a grim reminder that the international terrorist outfits, along with lone-wolf actors radicalized by propaganda online, continue to pose a very serious threat. Indeed, ISIS has been defeated on territorial grounds, but its ideological sway continues to manifest in individuals hailing from various parts of the world. Digital radicalization is already picking up

Look at National Security Concerns The foiled plot serves as a grim reminder that the international terrorist outfits, along with lone-wolf actors radicalized by propaganda online, continue to pose a very serious threat. Indeed, ISIS has been defeated on territorial grounds, but its ideological sway continues to manifest in individuals hailing from various parts of the world. Digital radicalization is already picking up steam because provocative extremist communication is spreading unchecked across different online platforms, which generally increases risks of homegrown terrorism. This arrest of Muhammad Shahzeb Khan underlines how very important it is to be vigilant in monitoring online spaces, to have intelligence sharing across nations, and to invest in proactive counterterrorism efforts. It serves as a reminder that even though we may cripple ISIS on the battlefield, its reach goes far beyond the lines of any physical territory into the digital realm. Conclusion: The Fight Against Terrorism is Far From Over This plot by terrorists, had it succeeded, would have left a scar on New York City and the world Jewish community that would never have healed. The fact that plans were aborted says a lot about the hard work of law enforcement and intelligence agencies but also serves as a reinforcement for continued vigilance. As we reflect on this close call, it remains crystal clear that our fight against terrorism is ongoing. Radicalization—whether online or offline—continues to be a potent threat, and our guards should never come down. Our battle is just not against terrorist organizations but also the ideologies that fuel them. And so, in that fight, there's no room for complacency. As always, remember Cinotti's mantra: 360x365, keep your head on a swivel, 180 degrees each direction, 365 days a year. Danger never takes a day off, and neither can we.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

1. Who is Muhammad Shahzeb Khan? Muhammad Shahzeb Khan, 20, is a Pakistani national arrested for plotting a terror attack against New York City Jewish communities. Precisely, he got radicalized from ISIS propaganda online and since then had plans for an attack that aimed to involve a mass shooting.
2. What was the target in the plot of terror? The Khan target was to have been the Jewish communities in New York, specifically the Chabad synagogues, where he planned a mass shooting with military-type weapons.
3. How was the plot foiled? The plot was foiled in a joint operation by U.S. federal agents and Canadian authorities. An arrest was made in Canada before Khan could cross into the Canadian authorities. An arrest was made in Canada before Khan could cross into the U.S. to execute his plans.⁴ What charges have been brought against Khan? Khan has been also accused of attempting to provide material support to a foreign terrorist organization, if so convicted can be sentenced up to 20 years in prison. ⁵ This plot shows the danger of online radicalization. It was on the Internet where Khan's radicalization started, a place where terrorist groups like ISIS continue to use to recruit and inspire people to commit terrorism. ⁶ What does this incident say about the state of global terrorism today? This incident has brought into light the fact that while different groups, such as ISIS, may have lost their strongholds physically, ideologically this effect is still new and more so in the virtual world. The fight against terrorism is not just about physical battles.

In all, the surprise, sweeping action against Russian state media taken by the U.S. State Department on Friday was a gutsy move, zeroing in on the Kremlin-controlled RT with critical intelligence gathered by U.S. operatives on the ground. These sanctions go beyond accusations of mere propaganda to expose that RT is directly supporting Russia's military effort in Ukraine—an alarming development for field agents deeply embedded in the conflict zone.

According to high-level intelligence provided to Secretary of State Antony Blinken, RT actively participated in organizing clandestine fundraising campaigns to equip Russian soldiers with military hardware, including sniper rifles and body armor. Sources on the ground with firsthand knowledge of such operations have let the cat out of the bag on the extensive collaboration by RT with Russian military and intelligence networks. The sanctions reflect a growing concern within the U.S. government that RT is operating well beyond disinformation, playing a key role in Russia's war machine and covert destabilization campaigns against democratic nations.

For years, RT has faced sanctions for spreading Kremlin-backed propaganda, but new intelligence reveals how RT is now involved in launching cyber operations—through a

America, and with it, amplify its destabilizing influence internationally.

Secretary Blinken underlined how important that was when he stated, “Intelligence from our operatives on the ground has been pivotal in exposing RT’s clandestine actions.” He repeated, “Our most powerful weapon against Russia’s lies is the truth, and the intelligence community continues to shed light on these covert operations with precision.”

These new sanctions are part of the holistic approach supported by the U.S. Intelligence efforts of economically and politically isolating Russia for the continued invasion of Ukraine. Emphasis on field intelligence is assurance that the U.S. and its allies are attached to dismantling the networks of the RT, ensuring transparency, and countering Russia’s multi-pronged disinformation and destabilization campaigns globally.

Kim Jong Un Tours North Korea's Uranium Enrichment Facilities: What It Could Entail

ERIC A. CINOTTI (ERIC CINOTTI)

In a new move that drew the international community's attention to North Korea's nuclear capability, its leadership has visited a uranium enrichment facility. The visit by Kim Jong Un included a tour of a control room and a construction site, part of an ongoing project to expand the facility's capacity for the production of nuclear weapons, state-run media outlet Korean Central News Agency, KCNA, reported.

Takeaways of Kim Jong Un's Visits

North Korea has long pursued nuclear weapons as a form of equal deterrent. Kim's latest comments, along with imagery from KCNA, suggest intent to expand that capability. Key takeaways from the visit include:

1.Expansion of Uranium Enrichment Facility: As KCNA photos showed, the tour had Kim inspecting long lines of centrifuges-machines which enrich uranium into a key material needed to make a nuclear weapon.

material needed to make a nuclear weapon.

2. Increase Centrifuge Numbers: Kim explained that there is a dire need to increase the quantity of centrifuges in high priority for the production of weapons-grade uranium. He said that the nuclear weapons he is exponentially increasing in North Korea's arsenal are for "self-defense."

3. New Centrifuge Technology: Kim ordered officials to speed up the development and deployment of a new kind of centrifuge, probably an advanced model that significantly enhances North Korea's nuclear capability.

Context: Why Does North Korea Need More Nuclear Weapons?

Rhetoric from Kim Jong Un's regime can be seen to indicate that external threats, specifically those from the United States and South Korea, are justification for the pursuit of nuclear weapons by North Korea. The KCNA quoted Kim saying U.S.-led "vassal forces" have crossed the "red line" with their nuclear threats. This, for North Korea, is explicit provocation, while expanding its nuclear deterrents is in their eyes the best step toward security.

That is literally the core of the argument for North Korea's stance: nuclear weapons are to balance the use of aggression from higher powers. Whereas it is universally condemned and prohibited by international bodies like the United Nations, for the regime, it is survival.

International Reaction: South Korea Condemns

Eric's Substack

International Reaction: South Korea Condemns

Immediately following North Korea's revelations, the Unification Ministry of South Korea released a strongly worded statement labeling the North's pursuit of nuclear weapons as "illegal" in defiance of international bans. The ministry described furthering a North Korean capability against nonproliferation norms as a serious threat to world peace. It also warned that such investment in nuclear weapons development will not bring any political or economic good to the North.

A Brief History of North Korean Uranium Enrichment Efforts

North Korea unveiled its uranium enrichment program to the world by allowing a Stanford University delegation, led by nuclear physicist Siegfried Hecker, to visit their facility at Yongbyon in 2010. At the time, North Korean officials claimed 2000 operational centrifuges. That was a meaningful claim because weapons-grade uranium is the core material for nuclear warheads.

Satellite images in later years suggested that North Korea was expanding the enrichment plant at Yongbyon. It also produces plutonium, another key nuclear weapon material, from the same location. However, experts construe North Korea to have undisclosed enrichment facilities as well.

Eric's Substack

Estimating North Korea's Nuclear Arsenal

It is hard to discern just how much enriched uranium or plutonium North Korea has, though estimation varies. Some experts suggested that the country had already acquired enough fissile material to produce between 20 to 60 atomic bombs by 2018. Other estimates suggest that the North may now possess over 100 warheads. Recent reports by experts from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, among others, indicate that North Korea is becoming less constrained in its capabilities to enrich uranium. While North Korea still faces more significant hurdles toward the production of weapons-grade plutonium, it is apparently scaling up its uranium enrichment capacity, perhaps preparing to establish a capacity for making nuclear weapons more rapidly.

New Centrifuge Technology: What Does it Mean?

But perhaps most disturbing of all, Kim Jong Un ordered in a new type of centrifuge. According to Lee Choon Geun, a research fellow at South Korea's Science and Technology Policy Institute, the advanced centrifuges will use carbon fiber technology. The centrifuges have the potential to boost North Korea's production of highly enriched uranium fivefold to tenfold, making it easier for the country to add more bombs to its inventory in state.

If successful, North Korea might make a jump from producing roughly one nuclear more bombs to its inventory in state.

If successful, North Korea might make a jump from producing roughly one nuclear bomb per year to several more. Indeed, such a success would notably raise the threat of North Korea's nuclear programs first and foremost to its neighbors, but also to the rest of the world.

Larger Geopolitical Implications

A visit by Kim Jong Un and the possible nuclear expansion come amidst heightened tension on the Korean Peninsula. North Korea has been aggressively ramping up its weapons testing since 2022, firing nuclear-capable missiles at the United States and South Korea. Such a move, according to analysts, is part of a broader strategy aimed at modernizing North Korea's nuclear arsenal and at bettering its deterrence capabilities. Timing has meaning, too. With the U.S. presidential election in less than half a year, analysts speculate North Korea may conduct further tests-either a nuclear explosion or a long-range missile launch-to influence U.S. foreign policy and give the NoKos more "poker chips" in their future dealings with Washington.

Strengthening Ties Between North Korea and Russia

The nuclear ambitions of North Korea go in line with strengthening ties with Russia.

Eric's Substack

The nuclear ambitions of North Korea go in line with strengthening ties with Russia.

Recent reports indicate military cooperation between the two nations, where both the U.S. and South Korea accused North Korea of supplying arms to Russia, in dire need of military supplies with which to keep its war in Ukraine going. In return, North Korea is believed to be getting military and economic aid from Moscow.

Ties between Pyongyang and Moscow grow in light of a recent visit by a high-ranking Russian delegation led by Sergei Shoigu. Analysts warn that such partnership may make it more complex to seek the restriction of North Korea's nuclear program, since the regime could feel emboldened by support from Russia.

Conclusion: The Growing Nuclear Threat

A visit by Kim Jong Un to the North Korean uranium enrichment facility shows that the regime intends to increase production speed for nuclear weapons. Shopping around new centrifuge technology could only suggest that North Korea will soon be producing far more weapons-grade uranium than earlier estimated. This development poses a serious challenge to regional and global security, with North Korea showing no signs of slowing down its nuclear ambitions despite international pressure and associated sanctions. While North Korea is still expanding and modernizing its associated sanctions. While North Korea is still expanding and modernizing its nuclear arsenal, the international community, in particular the United States and South Korea, will have to remain concerned. The links with Russia are closer, and the rhetoric about pre-emptive strikes is louder than ever, so the stakes for diplomatic and security negotiations have never been higher.

Humanitarian Staff or Hostages? U.S. and NATO React as Venezuela Detains Relief Workers

Situation Report:

On September 15, 2024, the government of Venezuela, on various charges, arrested six foreigners, three of them citizens of the United States of America, on the grounds that they were conspiring to destabilize the South American country. The U.S. government outright denied the charges and surmised that the group was likely working on humanitarian projects. NATO backed this view, as well as intelligence sources in Caracas. As the situation continues to develop, the world watches with scrutiny, wondering how such volatile geopolitics will be disposed of.

Allegations and Diplomatic Efforts:

Venezuelan Interior Minister Diosdado Cabello said the detained included three Americans, two Spaniards, and one Czech, and accused them of conspiring to sabotage the country's infrastructure. Venezuelan officials presumed that detainees may have had links with foreign intelligence agencies. But sources in Washington and Caracas said they were private citizens or humanitarian workers without any connections to espionage or state-sponsored activities.

Other officials at NATO also confirmed that the U.S. citizens were not on any official mission, which only furthered the contention against the claims of Venezuela.

mission, which only furthered the contention against the claims of Venezuela.

Humanitarian operations in Venezuela:

Although their names have not been mentioned, the three were reportedly on a humanitarian mission in Venezuela, helping those in various communities affected by the constant political and economic crises that have rocked the country. About a score of U.S.-based groups has been involved in the active distribution of foods, medical supplies, and vital services to several needy people. A member of one of the detainees' families had this to say: "They went there to assist, not harm anyone. We worry about their safety every day."

U.S. Denies Involvement:

Immediately after the arrests, U.S. officials denied that it had anything to do with the alleged plot against Mr. Maduro's presidency. A senior State Department official reiterated, "The United States categorically rejects any claims of complicity in events that foment a coup or that endanger Venezuela's sovereignty." The U.S. remains concerned with diplomatic solutions, along with humanitarian aid. Military officials from NATO also said that detained Americans were carrying out no activity in the way of intelligence and did not have military functions in the country. Instead, they were reaffirming their mission as humanitarian.

Venezuela's Claims of a Broader Conspiracy:

Venezuelan authorities described it as part of a higher plot, with detainees planning to damage infrastructure in the country, and even preparing attacks against high-ranking government officials. It thus plays into the hands of the Venezuelan government's narrative of foreign interference being a threat. But U.S. officials and sources within NATO strongly denied these claims. A contact in Caracashipped, "It really does appear that Venezuela is trying to take the attention away from domestic ills by blaming external agents of influence."

blaming external agents of influence.

Detention Conditions and Monitoring:

The six detainees are being held in a Caracas military facility. Venezuelan authorities have told U.S. diplomats that the detainees are being treated in accordance with international legal standards. However, U.S. officials and human rights organizations continue to follow this situation closely, voicing continued concern about detainees' well-being.

Diplomatic efforts and operational status:

The annals of diplomacy are abuzz as the U.S. government strives elastically to have detained Americans released. Spain and the Czech Republic are also making effort toward the release of their nationals. NATO allies continue to show interest in the situation amidst the continued international pressure for a peaceful resolution. The diplomatic pressure has risen as efforts to address the situation escalate.

U.S. Humanitarian Assistance in Venezuela:

For years, American NGOs and volunteers have provided vital assistance to Venezuela, helping that country endure the economic and political crises that have beset it for some time. The detainees were presumed to have been doing no differently, therefore reinforcing the notion that detainees had been in Venezuela to offer humanitarian aid—a suggestion confirmed by a NATO source that dismissed any thought of covert activity.

Venezuela's Longstanding Suspicion of Foreign Influence:

Traditionally, Caracas viewed foreign presence as highly suspicious, especially that coming from the West. Current President Nicolás Maduro has accused Washington numerous times of trying to oust him. However, the U.S. has confined itself to diplomacy, not taking any more radical steps that could make tensions even higher than they are now.

Eric's Substack

Assessment of Regional and Global Dynamics

This incident can lead to further deterioration in the already tense relations between the U.S. and Venezuela. Still, there's a glimmer of hope for a diplomatic solution, with regional powers such as Brazil and Mexico perhaps intervening to mediate between both countries. Sources close to NATO have hinted that the international community views this situation warily, knowing full well that higher-order geopolitical implications ensue when peaceful resolution is not attained.

Strategic Communication and the Power of Public Narrative:

The US has been careful in framing the narrative of the situation, categorically saying that the detained Americans are humanitarian workers and not spies or saboteurs. In describing their mission as a charitable one, the US is working to dampen anti-American sentiment in Venezuela in order to avoid further escalation. Their families also joined in speaking well of their detained family members by mentioning their humanitarian work.

Global Reactions and Strategic Considerations:

The detentions have sparked an avalanche of rapid reactions from world leaders, who all asked for the unconditional release of the six men. Members of NATO started coordinating diplomatic efforts to try desperately to prevent further escalation in the situation. Venezuelan police insist that investigations must go on, while there are U.S. efforts and allies to prompt transparency and cooperation, which will also mean a peaceful outcome of the crisis.

Conclusion: Prioritizing Diplomatic Engagement:

This is a situation that could spiral out of control and become a full-blown diplomatic crisis or give both sides an opportunity to prove just how well peaceful negotiations

Conclusion: Prioritizing Diplomatic Engagement:

This is a situation that could spiral out of control and become a full-blown diplomatic crisis or give both sides an opportunity to prove just how well peaceful negotiations can work. Circumstances at this period test diplomacy, with the U.S. and NATO still set upon a diplomatic solution as a means of bringing about the safe return of the detained Americans. The world is watching to see whether the incident would lead to more dialogue or widen the rift between Venezuela and the Western world.

Tragic Mystery: Was Javion Magee's Death a Suicide or a Modern-Day Lynching? The Nation Demands Answers

 ERIC A. CINOTTI (ERIC CINOTTI)
SEP 29, 2024

Written By: Eric A. Cinotti, MPA, JD

The recent death of Javion Magee, a 28-year-old Black truck driver, has brought quite a lot of public discussion and speculation. Moreover, it has revived painful memories of racial violence in the United States. Given the disturbing nature of his death and the continued racist history of the country, there is a wide chasm between what the police say happened and what Magee's family and the Black community as a whole think happened. The big question remains: Was this truly a suicide, as the police say, or was this something much worse—a modern-day lynching?

Police account: the theory of suicide

The police say the body of Magee was found on September 11, 2024,

Police account: the theory of suicide

The police say the body of Magee was found on September 11, 2024, and that the circumstances point to suicide. The camera footage released by the police shows Magee buying the rope later found wrapped around his neck in a Walmart just hours before he died. The sheriff investigating the incident has eliminated the possibility of hanging. He pointed to the peculiar fact that the way the body was positioned—leaning against a tree with a rope around his neck—is not typical of the manner persons presumably killed themselves or were lynched in times past by hanging from a high place.

Authorities have also brought up Magee's mental health as a possible cause. They say there is no clear record of his mental state, but the recent things he had done, such as giving money to a homeless person, might mean that he was "tying up loose ends." But since we cannot say much about his mental health, the idea of suicide isn't that strong.

Family, community members speak out against claims of lynching

The official story is lies and omissions, so goes the narrative of many Black people, and also to his own family. A black man with a rope around his neck touches on an instinctive nerve much deeper than one single case. It recalls a time when this kind of imagery equated to death and terror to many black Americans. The Magee family, however, has been vocal in insinuations that something much more sinister is in play. His death falling on September 11th makes them even more and terror to many black Americans. The Magee family, however, has been vocal in insinuations that something much more sinister is in play. His death falling on September 11th makes them even more suspicious of some wild rumors claiming it may be race violence.

This group has every right to question authority after decades of unfair treatment and broken systems. They are extremely distrustful of the police, and it's this same lack of trust that has led many to question the whole probe. Was Magee's death a racial act cloaked under a suicidal note? Those familiar with the country's remnants of racial history might not think that suggestion is completely insane.

Doubts and questions that won't go away

The big doubt and question part of the case is the surveillance footage, yet many people remain unconvinced. The most chilling question, though—whether Magee was forced to buy that rope—remains between the tight walls of uncertainty. Though there is no concrete evidence that he was pushed, some still feel this may be the case since not everyone believes the official story. And why has the police been so secretive? The public still doesn't know key details, such as fingerprints on that rope and toxicology results that could alter the course of this case in a major way.

Outrage from the public: mistrust and action

Magee's death is but part of the worst nightmare that all too many have seen when people have been targeted for knowing too much about some wrongdoing that goes unpunished. Meanwhile, the sheriff hastily withdrew the lynching charge; that doesn't placate a town that has long lived with racial violence. Many called for justice on social media, and the conversation only grew louder as activists drew eerie parallels between Magee's case and previous lynchings.

Many would want the involvement of government agencies like the FBI, saying that this is the only outside oversight that can ensure an honest and complete investigation. In this case, because of the rapid ways of opinion changing in the digital era, many ideas ranging from racial conspiracy to cover-up have come up. Such claims, though more often than not unsupported by evidence, are very attractive to people who have been disappointed repeatedly by the system and had their trust in it broken time and again.

Investigation full of unknowns

Police are keen to label this as a case of suicide, yet there are too many question marks. Why can't the people see the autopsy or toxicology report? Could these stories confirm whether he was drunk or high before he died? Without these important details, an investigation looks woefully incomplete, which finds conspiracy ideas filling the gap.

The death of one man split the country in two

Yet, the death of Javion Magee is far from over. On one hand, the police have a consistent story of self-inflicted death backed up by video evidence and the demonstration of body presentation. On the other, a grieving family, supported by an angry community, does not believe this version due to past instances of race violence and general mistrust grieving family, supported by an angry community, does not deter this version due to past instances of race violence and general mistrust in government.

Whichever way this goes—be it believed to be a case of suicide or lynching—the issue is going to divide opinions until all facts are made public, possibly through autopsy reports, forensic analysis, or even a deeper federal investigation. The death of Magee is still a fresh wound that speaks to a sobering warning that America has a long way to go in facing its racist past. It's one man. It's about what we let be done as a society, and how we cope with the facts that we still don't want to talk about.

"U.S. Airstrikes in Syria: Critical Analysis of Iranian Proxy Impact, Rising Geopolitical Tensions, and Middle East Stability Threats"

In recent weeks, the U.S. has carried out a spate of airstrikes across Syria, the majority targeting Iranian-backed militias and extremist groups such as ISIS. The strikes were in retaliation for a sharp increase in attacks against the U.S. presence in Iraq and Syria, further inflaming an already volatile situation. But hostilities are also growing in the Middle East, increasingly at risk of turning into a wider battlefield as the war between Russia and Ukraine, and Israel's with Hamas, rages on.

Yet the question arises whether these airstrikes mark a necessary escalation in US military involvement or rather constitute the latest round in an endless cycle of violence.

The column looks at why the U.S. is striking, the military and political dynamics, and how these acts will further grease the conflicts.

What Triggers the Airstrikes?

Eric's Substack

Cumulatively, Iranian proxy militia forces have conducted over 200 rocket and drone attacks against all U.S. military installations in both Iraq and Syria in the last two weeks alone. The attacks culminated in targeting a base in Syria, Mission Support Site Green Village-arguably a key installation-in an attack that killed six Syrian Democratic Forces soldiers allied to the US military.

The U.S. responded with precision strikes on militias including Kata'ib Hezbollah, Asa'ib Ahl al-Haq, and Hurras al-Deen-all with close ties to Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps.

Iranian influence is growing, and its tendencies to use proxy militias to reach further have turned into a hotbed of tension between the U.S. and its allies in the region. What makes matters interesting is that Tehran has used such groups to pressure the U.S. forces added to the recent surge in attacks underlining dramatically the growing instability in Syria and Iraq.

Details of the U.S. Airstrikes

The retaliatory strikes targeted several facilities affiliated with these Iran-backed militias and affiliates of ISIS. According to the Pentagon, more than 40 militants were killed, which included key figures within Hurras al-Deen and Kata'ib Hezbollah. The strikes-carried out by F-35 fighter jets and MQ-9 Reaper drones-destroyed command centers, depots holding weapons, and training camps.

That precision targeting was to degrade both the residual capacity of ISIS and Iranian proxies. The destruction of key facilities has set back these groups' capability to conduct a coordinated attack, at least for the foreseeable future.

Casualty Count and Military Impact Whereas the U.S. confirmed that more than 40 conduct a coordinated attack, at least for the foreseeable future.

Casualty Count and Military Impact Whereas the U.S. confirmed that more than 40 militants were killed, the fallout arising out of these strikes has implications other than just immediate casualties. Other reports said that the attacks severely disrupted the operational capacity of such militias, weakening their capability to a large extent to plan and execute future assaults.

In the run-up to these airstrikes, about 50 U.S. personnel had been injured in recent drone and rocket attacks. The growing toll has put new pressure on the Pentagon not only to strike back but also to reconsider the broader U.S. strategy in the Mideast, where forces remain stretched thin across several active conflict zones.

The Strategic Role of US Forces in Syria

The U.S. maintains a force of around 900 troops in Syria, dedicated to two missions: preventing the reemergence of ISIS and countering Iranian influence via its militia proxies. Those missions have grown increasingly complicated. The fight against ISIS has become increasingly enmeshed in the larger U.S. mission of countering Iranian influence within the region. The airstrikes reflect a changing U.S. approach—striking at both ISIS cells and Iranian-backed groups as it seeks to prevent further destabilization.

But as the Biden administration navigates these dual threats, the broader question of how long U.S. forces will remain in Syria weighs in. As tensions in the region are higher than ever, keeping a military presence which is sustainable will be increasingly difficult.

Bombing and Global Geopolitical Tensions

These latest airstrikes do not occur in a vacuum; they form part of a wider-ranging geopolitical game of chess.

Bombing and Global Geopolitical Tensions

These latest airstrikes do not occur in a vacuum; they form part of a wider-ranging geopolitical game of chess.

The U.S. is sending a clear signal to Tehran, Moscow, and Ankara as regards its commitment to regional stability. It is not just that U.S. airpower started to push back against Iran's influence in Syria, Iraq, and Lebanon through proxy militias, but a coalition including most of Washington's most firm Western allies-the recent U.K. mission of striking Houthi positions in Yemen having been joined to the U.S. Meanwhile, Russia and Turkey have their own major stakes in the outcome of Syria's ongoing war. Russia, an ally of the Assad regime for many decades, has collaborated with Iran in trying to keep things as they are in Syria, while Turkey has focused its efforts on containing the Kurdish groups in northeastern Syria, very often at odds with America's support for the Kurdish-led SDF forces. The spate of interests created a battlefield where every player's move is likely to have farther-reaching consequences than meets the eye.

US Military Strategy Beyond

The recent strikes represent a significant tactical victory for the U.S., but the broader question remains: What comes next? Though the strikes have weakened both ISIS and Iranian-backed militias for the time being, U.S. officials warn the long-term presence of these groups presents a persistent threat to American forces and their regional allies. The Pentagon has already increased drone surveillance and air defenses across the region-a strong indicator that U.S. forces are preparing for a prolonged engagement.

But with all these successes, further escalation is precariously real. With Iran still capable of deploying its array of proxy forces across the Middle East, another round of retaliation feels very up in the air, with a great likelihood of the region engulfing itself in a wider conflict.

in a wider context.

Humanitarian Concerns during Military Operations

But these military operations are clearly not being counted in terms of the number of militants killed. While the airstrikes target militant positions, thousands of civilians have been forced to flee Syria. The Syrian War, which began entering its 13th year, has displaced millions of people so far and reduced whole cities to rubble. Ongoing U.S. and coalition operations are mindful of the devastating humanitarian consequences of continued military action.

International Implications of U.S. Airstrikes

These airstrikes are a strong message not only to Iran but to other international players in Syria, particularly Russia and Turkey. For both nations, the strategic interests run deep in what Syria is to become: Russian support of the Assad regime is critical for its standing in the region, while Turkey continues to battle Kurdish forces it sees as a threat to its sovereignty.

It is in these dynamics that U.S. strikes complicate, especially with Russia, which may look at American military action as a challenge to its regional authority. Besides, a war between Israel and Hamas has already caught worldwide attention toward the region, which in itself increases further potential for destabilization. Certainly, the potential does exist that any one miscalculation could turn a local skirmish into a full-scale regional war.

Conclusion

The recent U.S. airstrikes in Syria marked a significant escalatory turn in an already volatile region. They have achieved their objective of wiping out more than 40 militants and disrupting the operational capabilities of some key Iranian-backed groups. But the wider geopolitical landscape has been left little short of treacherous: tensions between Iran and the U.S. run higher than at any time in recent years, and tensions between Iran and the U.S. run higher than at any time in recent years, and global conflicts elsewhere continue to smolder—the risk of further entanglement in the Middle East growing by the day. As the world watches, the U.S. has to balance its military objectives with the diplomatic ways of averting the engulfing wider conflict in the region. Yet, with Iran proxies still active and extremist groups like ISIS regrouping, how long the U.S. can stay in Syria remains a critical issue before the policymakers.

"Arizona Officials Intensify Security Measures After Ballot Box Arson by 'K Dieter' Raises Election Integrity Concerns Weeks Before Election Day"

Breaking News by Eric A. Cinotti: Phoenix Ballot Box Arson by "K Dieter" Sparks Statewide Election Security Alert

By Eric A. Cinotti, MPA, JD

Phoenix, AZ – In a startling incident just weeks before Election Day, a ballot box arson in Phoenix has intensified election security concerns across Arizona. Dieter Bradford Klofkorn, also known as "K Dieter," was arrested on October 24, 2023, for allegedly setting fire to a U.S. Postal Service mailbox containing approximately 20 ballots. This attack highlights the ongoing struggle officials face in preserving voter confidence amid rising scrutiny of election integrity.

Suspect Background: Who is "K Dieter"?

Dieter Bradford Klofkorn has a notable history of criminal charges, including controlled substance possession, burglary, aggravated assault, and indecent exposure. Although Klofkorn is presumed innocent until proven guilty, his Phoenix address is shielded under Arizona's Address Confidentiality Program, designed for individuals in sensitive circumstances.

Public Safety Concerns: Suspect's Professional Background

Klofkorn's professional background is adding to public concern. According to his LinkedIn profile, he lists skills in security and emergency management, with experience in surveillance and physical security. In light of the alleged election-related crime, these details amplify concerns around the risks to Arizona's election security and voter trust.

Arizona's Response to the Election Security Threat

The October 24 arson caused significant damage to roughly 20 ballots, now under review by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. Phoenix Police are working closely with postal inspectors to determine the full impact of the damage and implement heightened ballot security measures to protect voter confidence and election integrity.

Ballot Replacement Options for Affected Voters

Maricopa County Recorder Stephen Richer and Secretary of State Adrian Fontes are actively reaching out to affected voters to arrange replacement ballots.

under review by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. Phoenix Police are working closely with postal inspectors to determine the full impact of the damage and implement heightened ballot security measures to protect voter confidence and election integrity.

Ballot Replacement Options for Affected Voters

Maricopa County Recorder Stephen Richer and Secretary of State Adrian Fontes are actively reaching out to affected voters to arrange replacement ballots. Voters who used the drop box at Seventh Avenue and Indian School Road are urged to check their ballot status online or request a replacement through the Maricopa County voting portal. In-person voting remains available until Election Day on November 5.

Nationwide Election Security Context

This Phoenix incident reflects a disturbing trend, with similar recent ballot box arson cases reported in Oregon and Washington. Election officials across the U.S. are ramping up security protocols to protect voting infrastructure, with Arizona's Secretary of State Adrian Fontes affirming that any attempt to compromise election integrity will result in swift legal action.

Arizona Voter Resources for Ballot Integrity

Arizona voters can check their ballot status through Maricopa County's online portal, which provides real-time updates. Resources are available to replace any damaged ballots, and in-person voting is open at local centers to ensure that all votes are counted securely.

Key Details in Brief

1. What Happened? On October 24, 2023, Dieter Bradford Klofkorn, known as "K Dieter," allegedly set fire to a mailbox containing about 20 ballots, heightening election security concerns.
2. How Are Officials Responding? Maricopa County officials are arranging replacement ballots and implementing new security measures to protect voters.
3. How to Check Ballot Status? Affected voters can verify ballot status online, request replacements, or vote in person at local centers.
4. What Are the Charges? Klofkorn may face charges under Arizona law, with specifics pending the investigation.

In-person voting remains available until Election Day on November 5.

Nationwide Election Security Context

This Phoenix incident reflects a disturbing trend, with similar recent ballot box arson cases reported in Oregon and Washington. Election officials across the U.S. are ramping up security protocols to protect voting infrastructure, with Arizona's Secretary of State Adrian Fontes affirming that any attempt to compromise election integrity will result in swift legal action.

Arizona Voter Resources for Ballot Integrity

Arizona voters can check their ballot status through Maricopa County's online portal, which provides real-time updates. Resources are available to replace any damaged ballots, and in-person voting is open at local centers to ensure that all votes are counted securely.

Key Details in Brief

1. What Happened? On October 24, 2023, Dieter Bradford Klofkorn, known as "K Dieter," allegedly set fire to a mailbox containing about 20 ballots, heightening election security concerns.
2. How Are Officials Responding? Maricopa County officials are arranging replacement ballots and implementing new security measures to protect voters.
3. How to Check Ballot Status? Affected voters can verify ballot status online, request replacements, or vote in person at local centers.

4. What Are the Charges? Klofkorn may face charges under Arizona law, with specifics pending the investigation.

Big News: A Dream in the Making!

Dreams are built on resilience, and this past year has been a testament to that. From the bustling streets of NYC and North Jersey to the national stage, the moment we've all been waiting for is here.

🌟 Something HUGE is about to drop. 🌟

Prime time. Five days a week.

The city that raised me just became my stage.

👂 Stay tuned—this is only the beginning.

When the Tables Turn...

It all started with lies.

Big, bold lies whispered in secret and spun into "truths" by people who thought they had it all figured out.

👮 A shady sheriff.

⚖️ A shady district attorney.

📁 A shady case.

They thought they could manipulate the system, bury the truth, and break me.

But guess what? The truth doesn't stay hidden. It breaks free—shining through the cracks, burning away lies, and leaving something stronger behind. 🌟

What they didn't see coming?

Their schemes didn't destroy me—they built me.

Their lies became the foundation for my resilience.

Their games gave me power.

And now, they've done something they'll regret:

They've handed me a platform bigger than I ever imagined. 🌍 ✨

👊 Here's the punchline:

A seven-figure contract isn't just a win—it's a weapon. A tool to shine a light into the darkness and expose the system's flaws.

They underestimated me. That's their biggest mistake.

On the farm, you learn to:

🌱 Plant seeds in tough soil.

🌩️ Weather the storms.

🌾 Reap a harvest bigger than anyone could imagine.

They didn't just poke the bear—they tilled the land.

And now? The cream rises to the top, while the trash heads to the dumpster.

Let this be your reminder:

🗣️ "Everything isn't always as it seems."

Eric Andrew Cinotti, born and raised in Northern New Jersey. He has an AAS in Criminal Justice, BA in Sociology and Criminology, Master of Public Administration, and a Juris Doctorate with a concentration on the US Constitution. Eric Cinotti is currently working on an additional degree granting doctoral studies. Eric has accumulated 30-plus years of experience in the federal/state and local governments, the military, nonprofit, educational, and private sectors. He has advanced expertise in juvenile and youth violence, detention, delinquency, and protection services.

Eric Cinotti is, among other things, a Board-Certified Mediator who helps formulate a resolution to many complex legal disputes in various areas. Eric was appointed and sworn in as a Mediator, and he was also appointed sworn as a City Mediator for several different municipalities. Eric had the distinct honor to serve as Chairman of the Juvenile Conference Committee where he conducted official legal hearings for juvenile delinquency matters. He would hear the case discuss all the evidence, take testimony, and render a decision that would be affirmed by the senior resident Judge.

Eric is highly experienced in complex legal research utilizing databases such as West Law, Lexis/Nexis and Fast Case, eDiscovery Document Review, litigation preparation, legal writing, and extensive experience in administrative law, process, and procedure. Eric has worked on some very high-profile cases. Eric currently has access to a Fast Case, which is a complex legal database utilized to cite laws, statutes, and case law that can later be used in hearings and other legal proceedings. Eric also served on the Juvenile Crime Prevention Council where he was part of overseeing juvenile crime prevention services for the citizens.

Eric had over 30 years in the volunteer fire & EMS service. He served on the Fire Oversight Committee where he took part in overseeing spending of public dollars used in the county to support the fire service. Eric has served in both the US Navy & the Army National Guard where he has deployed in support of Middle East Contingency Operations to include, but not limited to, Anti-Terrorism missions as well as other operations in various locations both in and out of the United States. Eric serves as a volunteer firefighter / EMS in his local community. Eric has the high honor to be appointed as an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) where he heard a complete docket of cases daily. He swore in witnesses, took testimony, ruled on the admission of evidence, and rendered decision which he later wrote as official legal opinions.

Eric was recognized for his outstanding work as an ALJ and, specifically, his knowledge and writing ability and he became recognized as a subject matter expert. From there, he was promoted as an Administrative Law Judge to serve as a Judge in the Office of Inspector General. He fought corruption and ensured public dollars were being allocated and spent with care and responsibility. It should also be noted that Eric is a Law Professor (Publisher), Continuing Legal instructor, and teaches in all areas and aspects of the law and all its complexities.
