Haylee Moore's post

Borderline Personality Disorder (BPD)

This disorder is difficult. Everyday is a battle in your head. Fighting your emotions, reminding yourself that you are good enough and your friends don't hate you.

One wrong word, one look, anything that feels like rejection, IS rejection. Then you obsess about it. You pick things apart. It is a war zone in your own mind. Trying to control everything in your head is pain staking. Exhausting.

You want to be alone but you don't want to be lonely. When you do make a connection, you attach yourself. You obsess because that is what you do. No calls, no messages, no dates = rejection. It doesn't matter the reason. You become overbearing, annoying. Bad enough that you push people away. Then you are alone.

How many people are standing on the bridges you burn?

Some days it feels like you don't have a heart. Other days it feels like it is going to explode out of your chest.

Some days suck, some days are great but you never know what each day holds. You never know who you will be in the morning.

Always exhausted but never able to sleep. There is no end. This disorder is a prison and learning to live with it is the only way to survive it.

The image shows two identical side-by-side photographs. In each, a woman with long dark hair, wearing a white dress with a fringed hem and a pearl necklace, holds a large, ornate fan. Next to her is a young boy in a brown suit and hat, holding a rifle. They are in a rustic, western-themed setting with wooden paneling and a large feathered headdress in the background.

Facet joints are little joints situated through out the spinal column. They can be a common source of back pain. A facet joint injection can be helpful in diagnosing and alleviating back pain associated with facet joints. The procedure is done under local anaesthetic. The doctor will initially numb the skin and deeper tissues with a numbing medicine. He will then use a special x-ray machine called a fluoroscope to guide the needle accurately in to the facet joint. A mixture of local anaesthetic and steroid is injected slowly in to the joint. The local anaesthetic can provide immediate pain relief but the steroid can take a few days to work. Pain relief from facet joint injections can last several months though this may not always be the case.

I had it done yesterday and it wasnt that bad. Had L3-L4,L4-L5 and L5S1 facet joint injections. Feeling pretty good. Right after the procedure i drank a hot black coffee to stave off anesthesia effects. Went for a 3 mile walk later in the evening. Havent felt this good in years. I will be getting Si Fusion this upcoming year. Going thru the hoops right now. Si injection i had about month and a half ago _
