- Comment 2: In the subcommunity r/Careers, the user replied to CypherMindX 2 months ago. The text of the reply is: "My son is putting in hours for his journeyman while taking classes. He will do the standard residential stuff for about a year. He'll then apply to crews that specialize in charging stations. Most hot spots are the South like Louisiana weirdly. Landscape lighting is same. Find a crew then work towards control panels. I know guys in their 60s making 1k per visit to reprogram a panel. Little labor and they can do it for a long time. Become friends with landscape crews. They know the best lighting crews." The comment has 2 upvotes and includes 'Reply' and 'Share' options.
- Comment 3: In the subcommunity r/Careers, the user commented 2 months ago: "Specialize. Pays more, less hard on body plus more in demand. Like landscape lighting, EV charging stations." The comment has 2 upvotes and includes 'Reply' and 'Share' options.
- Comment 4: In the subcommunity r/UnethicalLifeProTips, the user commented 5 months ago: "ULPT : What is a good side gig while at work".

The Utah Blaze is a franchise primarily recognized by the Arena Football Team. The original Utah franchise lasted from 2006 to 2008 in the AFL, when their organization announced that they would be leaving the AFL to move to the American Indoor Football Association under the name Utah Valley Thunder. After only one year, Utah decided to return to the AFL under their original name. The team folded after the 2013 season.

Original Franchise and Departure (2006-2008)

The Utah Blaze entered the AFL in 2006 and were coached by former NFL quarterback and Arizona Rattlers head coach Danny White. Their first game came against the San Jose SaberCats, whom they defeated 48-35. After an impressive debut, the Blaze would lose their next three games. This could be due in part to the uncertainty at the quarterback position, in which three different quarterbacks started for the Blaze at some point in the season. The Blaze would go 2-1 the following three weeks, bringing their record to 3-4. The Blaze's season took a turn for the worse when they suffered a four game losing streak. Then it started to look up as they won three games straight after that, putting their record at 6-8. Utah would go on to lose against the Chicago Rush the following week, needing a win to make the playoffs, despite having a losing record. In the final week of the regular season, Utah pulled off a 55-54 victory against the Kansas City Command, projecting them into the playoffs in their first season in the AFL with an overall record of 7-9 for the 2006 season. Utah would go on to face coach White's former Rattlers team in the playoffs, where the Blaze were crushed 34-57.

Going into the 2007 season, the Blaze were complacent with Joe Germaine as their starting quarterback, hoping that would create some stability for the team and keep them consistent. The Blaze opened the season with a two game winning streak. Their first loss came at the hands of the Nashville Kats in week three. After their first loss, the Blaze went 3-1 in the next four weeks, bringing their record up to 5-2. Unfortunately, consistency did play a key in the Blaze's season, because beginning in week eight, they would go on to lose five games in a row. At 5-7, things weren't looking good for the Blaze's season. Fortunately for the Blaze, they came back for one last playoff push, going 3-1 in the final four weeks of the season, finishing the 2007 regular season with a record of 8-8 and were heading back to the playoffs for a second straight season. The Blaze would face the divisional rival Los Angeles Avengers in the first round of the playoffs, where they suffered the same fate against the Rattlers last season, losing the game 42-64.

With their third season in full view, the Utah Blaze were expected to perform better and more consistently than in previous seasons under head coach Danny White. To begin the 2008 season, the Blaze would face the divisional rival Arizona Rattlers, losing in a close bout, finishing 62-63. The Blaze would go on to lose the next three games by a combined 14 points in that time-span. The losing didn't end there, as Utah would continue to lose until week ten with a 67-50 win over the Kansas City Command, putting their record at 1-9. Despite their record, the Blaze still had a minimal chance to make the playoffs, and this seemed to play a part in the second half of the season, as the Blaze would finish the season 5-1. The Blaze finished the regular season with a record of 6-10, amazingly making the playoffs for the third straight season without a winning season. Although, as if fate intended it, the Blaze would go on to lose in the first round of the playoffs against the Colorado Crush.

Prior to the 2009 season, the Utah Blaze announced that they would be withdrawing from the AFL to join the AIFA under new title Utah Valley Thunder. The team then fired head coach Danny White.

Returning to the AFL (2010-2012)

After one year with the AIFA, the Utah Valley Thunder announced that they would be returning to the AFL under the former Utah Blaze name and franchise. The team hired Ernesto Purnsley as head coach of the Blaze, but were unable to acquire Joe Germaine back at starting quarterback. In their first season back in the AFL, Utah would start with a three game losing streak, losing by a combined 66 points in that time span. The Blaze would get their first win over the since-merged Bossier-Shreveport Battle Wings. The next week, the Blaze would lose in an overtime game against the Milwaukee Mustangs, with the final score being 55-56. This loss would spark a massive slump faced by the Blaze for the remainder of the season. The Blaze would lose the next nine games, allowing opponents to score an average of an astounding 71 points per game. During this time, after a loss to the Arizona Rattlers, the Blaze fired head coach Ernesto Purnsley and hired Ron James to replace him. Purnsley recorded a 1-6 record with the Blaze. Under head coach Ron James, the Blaze didn't fare much better. After the nine game losing streak, the Blaze picked up their second win of the season against the Dallas Vigilantes. The Blaze would lose the final game of the season, putting their record for the 2010 season at 2-14.

After a troubling season, the Utah Blaze acquired former Oklahoma City Yard Dawgz quarterback Tommy Grady and decided to stick with head coach Ron James. With explosive receivers already in place, the Blaze hoped that the fresh hands at quarterback would vitally improve their team effort. The team opened up the 2011 season with a thrashing victory over the Tampa Bay Storm, winning 72-36. The win would only be the start of a frustrating lack of consistency going through week ten, when the Blaze went 4-5 during that stretch, putting them at 5-4 midway through the season. The Blaze began to burn out as they would lose three straight games by a combined 77 points. The Blaze would finish the season going 4-2 in the final weeks of the regular season, giving them an overall record of 9-9 for the 2011 regular season. They did not make the playoffs.

With a drastically improved record, the Utah Blaze prepared for the 2012 season with minimal changes to the team. The Blaze began the 2012 season with a loss to the San Antonio Talons. The loss meant little to the Blaze's production as they would go 6-1 through week eight. Despite an explosive offense, the Blaze suffered a three game losing streak midway through the season, losing to all other members of their division. The Blaze came roaring back, however, as they ripped through a six game winning streak to improve their record to 12-5, securing a playoff spot. With the final game all but meaningless, the Blaze lost the final game of the regular season to the Philadelphia Soul, putting their overall record for the 2012 regular season at 12-6. During this time, quarterback Tommy Grady had set a single-season record for most passing touchdowns in a single season with 142. This performance would later give him the title of League MVP and Offensive Player of the Year. With a hot streak going, the Utah Blaze's offense fizzled out in the playoffs by barely winning over the divisional rival San Antonio Talons in a 34-35 win. Their offense returned in the National Conference Game, but it would prove meaningless as the Arizona Rattlers defeated the Utah Blaze to advance to Arena Bowl XXV.

Athletic Training Innovations LLC v. eTAGZ, Inc.

Doc. 42

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

ATHLETIC TRAINING INNOVATIONS, LLC	CIVIL ACTION
VERSUS	NO. 12-2540
eTAGZ, INC.	SECTION: "G"(2)

ORDER AND REASONS

Before the Court is Defendant eTagz's ("Defendant") Motion to Dismiss,<sup>1</sup> wherein it moves this Court for dismissal based on a lack of personal jurisdiction over Defendant and for Plaintiff Athletic Training Innovations, LLC's ("Plaintiff") alleged failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Having considered the complaint, the motion, the opposition, the reply, the record, and the applicable law, for the following reasons, the Court will grant the pending motion and dismiss this action without prejudice.

I. Background

A. Factual Background

Plaintiff is a Louisiana limited liability company that sells athletic equipment and specially designed training shoes "almost exclusively on the internet and by phone."<sup>2</sup> When Plaintiff ships shoes to a purchaser, it accompanies the product with a DVD that demonstrates how to perform certain exercises. This film was produced by Plaintiff's predecessors since as early as 1991.<sup>3</sup>

Defendant, a Utah corporation with its principal place of business in Provo, Utah, owns U.S. patents nos. 6,298,332, 7,503,502, and 7,703,686 ("the patents"). These patents concern the use of a hangtag having a computer-readable medium that is attached to a product by a vendor and removed therefrom by purchaser.<sup>4</sup> According to Plaintiff, the "broadest claims of aforementioned patents limit Defendant's scope of protection to: 1) hangtags or labels that are secured to and removed from a vendor's product; 2) the hangtag or label including a computer-readable medium thereon and 3) the medium including computer-readable instructions executable on a purchaser's computer."<sup>5</sup> Plaintiff claims, therefore, that its practice of placing a DVD in the shipping container does not infringe on the patents.<sup>6</sup>

However, on September 7, 2012, Plaintiff received a letter from Defendant, alleging that it believed Plaintiff's products infringed the patents, and that it might take legal action.<sup>7</sup> Plaintiff claims that after receiving this letter, it discovered on Defendant's website that it has made many other similar threats against other companies that have included CDs or DVDs with their products.<sup>8</sup> In addition, Plaintiff avers that Defendant's website claims that its patents encompass the attachment of media for products at retail, and that "attachment" is defined as mere "inclusion." Plaintiff argues that these statements essentially make infringement allegations against Plaintiff that are objectively false and in bad faith.<sup>9</sup> Therefore, Plaintiff brings six causes of action in the original complaint: (1) a declaratory judgment of non-infringement of the patents; (2) a declaratory judgment of invalidity of the patents; (3) a judgment that Defendant has violated the Sherman Antitrust Act; (4) relief for violations of Louisiana's antitrust statutes; (5) relief for violations of Louisiana's unfair competition laws; and (6) patent misuse.<sup>10</sup>

In Plaintiff's First Supplemental and Amending Complaint,<sup>11</sup> Plaintiff requests to "supplement and amend its original Complaint ... to further include the following allegations."<sup>12</sup> Plaintiff claims that on September 7, 2012, Defendant sent it a letter alleging that Plaintiff's product "utilized the invention embodied in the eTAGZ Patents."<sup>13</sup> However, Plaintiff contends that "merely including a video with a product" is unpatentable under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b), the on-sale bar, because "informational videos have accompanied products in commerce for decades."<sup>14</sup> Therefore, Plaintiff maintains that the September 7, 2012 letter was meant to "intentionally misrepresent the scope of Defendant's patents to coerce, intimidate and manipulate Plaintiff into settlement," and further, that the letter was also "part of a conspiracy by Defendant to injure Plaintiff's sales and marketing efforts."<sup>15</sup>

After this letter, Plaintiff alleges that a representative and/or employee of Defendant "initiated at least three telephone calls to Plaintiff's employees located in the State of Louisiana in a further attempt to coerce a quick settlement based upon a frivolous claim of patent infringement."<sup>16</sup> Plaintiff claims that on at least one of these alleged calls, Defendant pretended to be a potential customer in order to "extract information from [Plaintiff's] employee."<sup>17</sup> However, Plaintiff contends that Defendant's employee eventually identified himself, and boasted that Defendant had already derived "millions of dollars in revenue" from other accused infringers.<sup>18</sup> According to Plaintiff, Defendant indicated that if Plaintiff paid a "lump-sum fee" this matter would be resolved, and on one occasion Defendant sent an email to one of Plaintiff's employees located in Louisiana, requesting an "immediate, lump sum payment in lieu of litigation."<sup>19</sup>

In addition to these factual allegations, Plaintiff adds two new causes of action. Styled as its seventh cause of action, Plaintiff seeks to hold Defendant liable in tort under Louisiana Civil Code article 2315.<sup>20</sup> Finally, styled as its eighth cause of action, Plaintiff seeks to hold Defendant liable for extortion under Louisiana Revised Statute §14:66 and 18 U.S.C. § 1951.<sup>21</sup>

B. Procedural Background

Plaintiff filed the initial complaint in this matter on October 18, 2012, invoking this Court's federal question and diversity jurisdiction.<sup>22</sup> On January 9, 2013, Defendant filed its first motion to dismiss,<sup>23</sup> seeking dismissal under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(2) and 12(b)(6), claiming that this Court does not have personal jurisdiction over it and that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim. On January 22, 2013, Plaintiff made two filings. Plaintiff filed a first supplemental and amending complaint,<sup>24</sup> and then an opposition to the Defendant's first motion to dismiss.<sup>25</sup> On January 20, 2013, the Court denied the first motion to dismiss as moot, based on the filing of the supplemental and amending complaint.<sup>26</sup>

<sup>22</sup> Rec. Doc. 1 at ¶ 4. The Court notes that while Plaintiff has invoked this Court's diversity jurisdiction, it has not properly alleged its own citizenship. Plaintiff claims it "is a Louisiana Limited Liability company authorized to do business in the State of Louisiana with its principal place of business in Kenner, Louisiana." Id. at ¶ 1. However, the citizenship of a limited liability company is determined by the citizenship of each of its constituent members. See Harvey v. Grey Wolf Drilling Co., 542 F.3d 1077, 1078 (5th Cir. 2008). However, because Plaintiff has also invoked federal question jurisdiction, this deficiency is inconsequential at this time, as the Court has an alternatively sufficient ground for subject matter jurisdiction.

On February 4, 2013, Defendant filed a motion to reconsider the denial of its motion to dismiss.<sup>27</sup> On February 5, 2013, Defendant filed the pending motion to dismiss asserting the same grounds for dismissal as in its first motion to dismiss, but also addressing claims and allegations added in the supplemental and amending complaint.<sup>28</sup> On February 19, Plaintiff filed an opposition to the pending motion to dismiss.<sup>29</sup> With leave of court, Defendant filed a reply on March 4, 2013.<sup>30</sup> On June 24, 2013, this Court denied Defendant's motion to reconsider the order denying Defendant's first motion to dismiss, ruling that it did not meet the standard for reconsideration and that Defendant's substantive grounds for dismissal would be more properly addressed upon its second

II. Parties' Arguments

In support of the pending motion, Defendant argues that this Court does not have personal jurisdiction over it, and notes that the law of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit governs this matter as it pertains to patent law.<sup>32</sup> Defendant also notes that when a defendant disputes personal jurisdiction and the parties have not yet conducted discovery, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction.<sup>33</sup> Regarding specific jurisdiction, Defendant argues that the Federal Circuit employs a three-prong test to determine whether: "(1) the defendant purposefully directed activities at residents of the forum; (2) the claim arises out of or relates to those activities; and (3) [the] assertion of personal jurisdiction is reasonable and fair."<sup>34</sup>

Defendant argues that in a declaratory judgment action for non-infringement and/or patent invalidity, the relevant inquiry regarding specific jurisdiction is "to what extent has the defendant patentee 'purposefully directed [such enforcement activities] to residents of the forum,' and the extent to which the declaratory judgment claim 'arises out of or relates to those activities."<sup>35</sup> Defendant claims that "[o]ther than maintaining a general informational website on the Internet, [Defendant] has never advertised, marketed or offered to license or sell its patents in Louisiana, and it has never sold, done business with or entered into a licensing agreement with any Louisiana company or resident (except for its engagement of legal counsel in this matter)."<sup>36</sup> Further, Defendant avers that "[t]he only purposeful activity of [Defendant] directed to residents of Louisiana identified by [Plaintiff] was the September 7, 2012 letter sent to [Plaintiff] offering to meet with [Plaintiff] to discuss licencing [Defendant's] patent portfolio, and three follow-up phone calls and an email."<sup>37</sup>

However, Defendant argues that this activity is insufficient as a matter of law to establish personal jurisdiction, because under Federal Circuit precedent "[s]tandards of fairness demand that [the patentee] be insulated from personal jurisdiction in a distant forum when its only contacts with that forum were efforts to give proper notice of its patent rights."<sup>38</sup> Therefore, Defendant argues that the Federal Circuit has required more than "letters threatening an infringement suit" to establish personal jurisdiction.<sup>39</sup>

In the alternative, Defendant claims that Plaintiff has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.<sup>40</sup> Defendant reiterates its argument that the supplemental and amending complaint is the only operative complaint, and therefore only the two state law causes of action asserted therein remain.<sup>41</sup> As the Court has already rejected this argument, and held that Plaintiff properly incorporated by reference all allegations and causes of action asserted in the original complaint in the supplemental and amending complaint, it declines to address Defendant's argument on that issue again.

Concerning the seventh cause of action styled as "Tort Liability Under Article 2315," for alleged harassment, Defendant construes the claim as one for intentional misrepresentation, arguing that a cause of "harassment" does not exist.<sup>42</sup> Citing precedent from the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, Defendant argues that to succeed on a cause of action for intentional misrepresentation, a plaintiff must prove: (1) a misrepresentation of a material fact; (2) made with intent to deceive; and (3) causing justifiable reliance with a resultant injury.<sup>43</sup> Defendant maintains that Plaintiff "has failed to, and cannot, allege that [Plaintiff] justifiably relied on [Defendant's] alleged misrepresentation, or suffered any injury therefrom," and therefore this cause of action should be dismissed.<sup>44</sup>

With regard to Plaintiff's eighth cause of action for "extortion," Defendant notes that Louisiana Revised Statute § 14:66 is a criminal cause of action, not a civil cause of action. Likewise, 18 U.S.C. § 1951 is a criminal statute that does not provide a private cause of action.<sup>45</sup> Therefore, Defendant seeks the dismissal of this claim.

Defendant also seeks the dismissal of Plaintiff's six original causes of action raised in the first complaint. Regarding Plaintiff's claim for a declaratory judgment of non-infringement, Defendant argues that Plaintiff's claim "does not distinguish between direct or indirect infringement, and thus does not provide a short and plain statement showing entitlement to relief."<sup>46</sup> Defendant also posits that Plaintiff's claim for a declaratory judgment of invalidity fails to state a claim, because the complaint "does little more than cite generally to a patent statute."<sup>47</sup>

Turning next to Plaintiff's Sherman Antitrust Act claims, Defendant argues that the complaint generally refers to the act without specifying which section or sections Defendant has allegedly violated.<sup>48</sup> Moreover, Defendant claims that actions seeking to enforce patent right are generally immunized from antitrust liability under the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.<sup>49</sup> Likewise, Defendant contends that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine bars Plaintiff's state law claims for unfair competition.<sup>50</sup> Defendant further contends that Plaintiff's complaint is devoid of any factual support that Defendant "purposefully harmed the marketing efforts and sales of [Plaintiff's] training shoe."<sup>51</sup> Finally, Defendant argues that Plaintiff's cause of action for "patent misuse" should be dismissed, because patent misuse is not "an affirmative cause of action," but rather "results in rendering a patent unenforceable until the misuse is purged."<sup>52</sup>

In opposition, Plaintiff avers that this Court has specific jurisdiction over Defendant.<sup>53</sup> Plaintiff highlights that Defendant sent a cease-and-desist letter to Plaintiff in Louisiana, and initiated three phone calls to Plaintiff.<sup>54</sup> Plaintiff also argues that "one of the Defendant's telephone calls was perpetrated under false pretenses and was clearly a deceptive business activity prohibited by LUTPA."<sup>55</sup> Plaintiff further notes that Fifth Circuit precedent has held that a single phone call to a forum state can be sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction.<sup>56</sup>

Without citing authority, Plaintiff argues that "jurisdiction should be applied to protect a Louisiana business from a non-resident company voluntarily entering Louisiana commerce to deceptively attempt to coerce a settlement by knowingly articulating false statements as to the scope and attributes of its patent."<sup>57</sup> Further, Plaintiff states that Defendants conduct imposes tort liability under Article 2315, and when one commits a tort within the state, or an act outside the state that causes tortious injury within the state, that conduct establishes minimum contacts to permit personal jurisdiction.<sup>58</sup>

Plaintiff also contends that this Court may also have general jurisdiction over Defendant, because it may have "continuous and systematic contacts" with Louisiana.<sup>59</sup> Plaintiff notes that it served written discovery requests upon Defendant on January 31, 2013, seeking information relative to general jurisdiction, but that Defendant has refused to respond, and has specifically ignored requests for 30(b)(5) and 30(b)(6) depositions.<sup>60</sup>

Plaintiff also refutes Defendant's contention that it has failed to state a claim. Concerning its seventh cause of action, Plaintiff notes that it alleged in the the original and supplemental complaint that "threatening [Plaintiff] with frivolous and baseless allegations of patent infringement knowing that its patents do not have the broad scope that Defendant purports subjects Defendant to tort liability under La. Civ. Code Article 2315" and "Defendant has purposely misrepresented the claim scope of its patents to purposely harm [Plaintiff's] marketing and sales efforts in Louisiana and elsewhere, which subjects Defendant to tort liability under La. Civ. Code Article 2315."<sup>61</sup> Therefore, Plaintiff argues that "[s]uch allegations of knowingly and purposely misrepresenting the scope and attributes of patents in order to purposely inflict harm upon plaintiff clearly invokes La. C.C. art. 2315 as well as LSA-R.S. 51:1407, et seq., Louisiana Unfair trade Practices Act."<sup>62</sup> As such, Plaintiff argues that Defendant's alleged attempt to "extort" is encompassed in Article 2315. Further, Plaintiff does not refute that under its extortion and antitrust causes of action it cited criminal statutes that do not confer a personal cause of action, but rather argues that "under Louisiana law, criminal statutes may provide the standard of care for a tort action when other fundamental elements of a tort are present."<sup>63</sup>

Plaintiff also challenges Defendant's assertion that its pleadings are deficient because it does not distinguish between direct and indirect infringement. Plaintiff states that "[t]his case has absolutely nothing to do with indirect infringement and, therefore, was not mentioned in the original Complaint."<sup>64</sup> Further, Plaintiff argues that it has stated a claim for its patent invalidity cause of action, because it expressly alleged that some of Defendant's patents were anticipated by the prior art, or were invalid due to the on-sale bar.<sup>65</sup>

Concerning its antitrust claims, Plaintiff argues that the United States Supreme Court has specifically held that the Noerr-Pennington doctrine will not apply to immunize a defendant when "the enforcement of a patent procured by fraud on the patent office could form the basis for a lawsuit under the Sherman [Antitrust] Act provided the other elements of monopolization under Section 2 are established."<sup>66</sup> Moreover, Plaintiff argues that the "sham litigation" exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine is applicable, because Defendant's assertion of patent rights is "objectively baseless in the sense that no reasonable litigant could realistically expect success on the merits," and the baselessness of the lawsuit is intended to "interfere directly with the business relationships of a competitor."<sup>67</sup> Plaintiff argues that the cease-and-desist letters sent by Defendant and patent infringement lawsuits are sham litigation.<sup>68</sup>

Lastly, Plaintiff argues that Defendant has not addressed or challenged its LUTPA claims in the pending motion to dismiss.<sup>69</sup>

In reply, Defendant argues that in discussing personal jurisdiction, Plaintiff has failed to address the binding Federal Circuit precedent cited by Defendant, but instead relies on Fifth Circuit precedent which is not controlling in this dispute.<sup>70</sup> Defendant also addresses Plaintiff's argument that Defendant has ignored discovery requests in an effort to hide or obscure jurisdictional facts. Defendant notes that there has been no court order permitting early discovery in this matter.<sup>71</sup>

Defendant reiterates many of its arguments urging dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6).<sup>72</sup> Further, Defendant avers that Plaintiff's opposition to the pending motion now purports to bring a cause of action for "intentional misrepresentation," but that under Louisiana law, this is a very restrictive claim, which Plaintiff has not adequately pled.<sup>73</sup>

Concerning Plaintiff's eighth cause of action for "extortion," Defendant notes that Plaintiff did not dispute that the statutes it cited do not provide a cause of action; however, Defendant expresses confusion as to whether Plaintiff "maintains this claim as a separate cause of action," or incorporates it into its Article 2315 claim for general tort liability.<sup>74</sup>

Next, Defendant claims that Plaintiff's argument that it is asserting a Walker Process claim fails, because such a claim requires "that a patent has been procured by fraud upon the patent office."<sup>75</sup> In addition, Defendant claims that like most fraud claims, Walker Process claims must be pled with particularity.<sup>76</sup> Further, Defendant argues that Plaintiff has failed to sufficiently plead that the "sham litigation" exception to the Noerr-Pennington doctrine applies.<sup>77</sup>

Moreover, Defendant argues that Plaintiff is incorrect to state that Defendant has not challenged its LUTPA claims, because Defendant expressly stated its position that these claims were barred by the Noerr-Pennington doctrine.<sup>78</sup> Finally, Defendant avers that Plaintiff "appears to have abandoned its claim for patent misuse," and therefore it should be dismissed.<sup>79</sup>

III. Law and Analysis

A. Applicable Standard: Prima Facie Showing of Personal Jurisdiction

As Defendant has correctly acknowledged, because this case involves patent law, Federal Circuit precedent controls the analysis of personal jurisdiction.<sup>80</sup> Even when there are non-infringement claims in the suit, the Federal Circuit will "apply [its] law [of personal jurisdiction] to all of the claims where 'the question of infringement is a critical factor in determining liability under the non-patent claims."<sup>81</sup>

Before discovery, a plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction.<sup>82</sup> Therefore, "the pleadings and affidavits are to be construed in the light most favorable to [the plaintiff]."<sup>83</sup> "[W]here the district court's disposition as to the personal jurisdictional question is based on affidavits and other written materials in the absence of an evidentiary hearing, a plaintiff need only to make a prima facie showing that defendants are subject to personal jurisdiction. In the procedural posture of a motion to dismiss, a district court must accept the uncontroverted allegations in the plaintiff's complaint as true and resolve any factual conflicts in the affidavits in the plaintiff's favor."<sup>84</sup> Personal jurisdiction is a question of law that the Federal Circuit will review de novo.<sup>85</sup>

B. Personal Jurisdiction Inquiry

Determining whether jurisdiction exists over an out-of state defendant involves two inquiries: (1) whether a forum state's long arm statute permits service of process and (2) whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction violates due process.<sup>86</sup> "Louisiana's long-arm statute, La. R.S. 13:3201(B), provides that a Louisiana court 'may exercise personal jurisdiction over a nonresident on any basis consistent with ... the Constitution of the United States.' Because the limits of Louisiana's long-arm statute are co-extensive with the limits of constitutional due process, the inquiry is simply whether this Court's exercise of jurisdiction over [the defendant] would offend due process."<sup>87</sup>

1. General Jurisdiction

General jurisdiction requires that a defendant have "continuous and systematic" contacts with the forum state, and confers personal jurisdiction, even when the cause of action has no relationship to those contacts.<sup>88</sup> Sporadic or insubstantial contacts with a forum state are insufficient to establish general jurisdiction.<sup>89</sup> The United States Supreme Court and the Federal Circuit have acknowledged that when a defendant does not have a place of business in the forum state, or has never been licensed to do business in the state, this weighs against a finding that general jurisdiction is present.<sup>90</sup>

The Court notes that here, Plaintiff has not affirmatively alleged that this Court has general jurisdiction over Defendant, but rather stated that it is not sure because it has not received discovery responses from Defendant on this issue.<sup>91</sup> As noted above, because discovery has not commenced, Plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, where the Court accepts all uncontroverted assertions and affidavits as true, and resolves all disputed assertions and affidavits in favor of Plaintiff. However, Plaintiff has submitted no such evidence or assertions regarding general jurisdiction, but merely posits the possibility that Defendant has "continuous and systematic" contacts with Louisiana to confer general jurisdiction. In contrast, Defendant has submitted the unrefuted affidavit of Isaac Jacobson, who states that Defendant is not a Louisiana corporation, does not conduct business in Louisiana, and has never "advertised, marketed offered to license or sell its patents in Louisiana, and it has never sold, done business with or entered into a licensing agreement with any Louisiana company or resident (except for its engagement of legal counsel in this matter)."<sup>92</sup> Therefore, Plaintiff has not made a prima facie showing of general jurisdiction.

However, in a June 6, 2013 status conference, Plaintiff argued that Defendant had refused to respond to several discovery requests that could have a bearing on the issue of general jurisdiction.<sup>93</sup> While Plaintiff has not made a formal request for limited jurisdictional discovery, this Court notes that the Federal Circuit reviews "the district court's denial of discovery, an issue not unique to patent law, for abuse of discretion, applying the law of the regional circuit."<sup>94</sup> The Fifth Circuit has held that:

The district court, however, has broad discretion in all discovery matters. The decision not to permit depositions on a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is specifically one for the trial court's discretion, and "[s]uch discretion will not be disturbed ordinarily unless there are unusual circumstances showing a clear abuse."<sup>95</sup>

It is normally only when "the jurisdictional question intertwines with the merits of the case [that] some discovery on the merits may be necessary, and general discovery may be permitted."<sup>96</sup> As Plaintiff has not formally requested such discovery, and has not provided grounds other than the possibility that facts may exist to confer general jurisdiction, this Court would not be inclined to grant such a request, even if one were properly before the Court.

2. Specific Jurisdiction

Even when a defendant is not subject to general personal jurisdiction in a forum state, a district court may nonetheless exercise specific personal jurisdiction over the defendant if the defendant satisfies a three-prong test:

(1) the defendant purposefully directed its activities at residents of the forum, (2) the claim arises out of or relates to those activities, and (3) assertion of personal jurisdiction is reasonable and fair. With respect to the last prong, the burden of proof is on the defendant, which must "present a compelling case that the presence of some other considerations would render jurisdiction unreasonable" under the five-factor test articulated by the Supreme Court in Burger King.<sup>97</sup>

"The first two factors correspond with the 'minimum contacts' prong of the International Shoe analysis, and the third factor corresponds with the 'fair play and substantial justice' prong of the analysis."<sup>98</sup>

In the specific context of an action for a declaratory judgment of non-infringement, the Federal Circuit has expressly defined the relevant inquiry:

[I]n the context of an action for declaratory judgment of non-infringement, invalidity, and/or unenforceability, the patentee is the defendant, and the claim asserted by the plaintiff relates to the wrongful restraint [by the patentee] on the free exploitation of non-infringing goods ... [such as] the threat of an infringement suit. Thus, the nature of the claim in a declaratory judgment action is to clear the air of infringement charges. Such a claim neither directly arises out of nor relates to the making, using, offering to sell, selling, or importing of arguably infringing products in the forum, but instead arises out of or relates to the activities of the defendant patentee in enforcing the patent or patents in suit. The relevant inquiry for specific personal jurisdiction purposes then becomes to what extent has the defendant patentee

"purposefully directed [such enforcement activities] at residents of the forum," and the extent to which the declaratory judgment claim "arises out of or relates to those activities." This inquiry necessarily places greater focus in a declaratory judgment action on the differences, if any, in the meaning of the "arises out of" and "relates to" inquiries for personal jurisdiction.<sup>99</sup>

The Federal Circuit has further acknowledged that in declaratory judgment for non-infringement actions, the alleged injury arises out of the threat of infringement as communicated in an infringement letter:

While such letters themselves might be expected to support an assertion of specific jurisdiction over the patentee because "the letters are 'purposefully directed' at the forum and the declaratory judgment action 'arises out of' the letters," Silent Drive, 326 F.3d at 1202, we have held that, based on "policy considerations unique to the patent context," id. at 1206, "letters threatening suit for patent infringement sent to the alleged infringer by themselves 'do not suffice to create personal jurisdiction," id. at 1202 (quoting Red Wing Shoe, 148 F.3d at 1359-60) (emphasis added). This is "because to exercise jurisdiction in such a situation would not 'comport with fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. (quoting Red Wing Shoe, 148 F.3d at 1359-60). "Principles of fair play and substantial justice afford a patentee sufficient latitude to inform others of its patent rights without subjecting itself to jurisdiction in a foreign forum. A patentee should not subject itself to personal jurisdiction in a forum solely by informing a party who happens to be located there of suspected infringement. Grounding personal jurisdiction on such contacts alone would not comport with principles of fairness." Red Wing Shoe, 148 F.3d at 1360-61; see also Silent Drive, 326 F.3d at 1206. Thus, "[f]or the exercise of personal jurisdiction to comport with fair play and substantial justice, there must be 'other activities' directed at the forum and related to the cause of action besides the letters threatening an infringement suit." Silent Drive, 326 F.3d at 1202 (emphasis added); see also Calder, 465 U.S. at 788, 104 S.Ct. 1482 (noting that "[i]n judging minimum contacts, a court properly focuses on 'the relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation.'" (emphases added)(quoting Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186, 204, 97 S.Ct. 2569, 53 L.Ed.2d 683 (1977))).<sup>100</sup>

These "other activities" necessary to impose specific personal jurisdiction "relate to the enforcement or the defense of the validity of the relevant patents."<sup>101</sup> "Examples of these 'other activities' include initiating judicial or extra-judicial patent enforcement within the forum, or entering into an exclusive license agreement or other undertaking which imposes enforcement obligations with a party residing or regularly doing business in the forum."<sup>102</sup>

Here, Plaintiff contends that this Court has specific personal jurisdiction over Defendant based on the cease-and-desist letter and the three phone calls and one email sent to Plaintiff's employees in Louisiana.<sup>103</sup> However, the case law cited above from the Federal Circuit holds that cease-and-desist letters are insufficient to establish minimum contacts with a state to confer specific personal jurisdiction; moreover, the Federal Circuit has found that emails and in-person communications are analogous to cease-and-desist letters, and are likewise insufficient to establish specific personal jurisdiction.<sup>104</sup> This Court finds that the three alleged phone calls are similarly analogous to a cease-and-desist letter and may not be considered independently sufficient as minimum contacts to establish specific personal jurisdiction. On the issue of specific personal jurisdiction, Plaintiff fails to cite Federal Circuit law, which is controlling in this case. Instead, Plaintiff has cited Fifth Circuit precedent for the proposition that a single phone call to a forum state can be sufficient to confer personal jurisdiction.<sup>105</sup> However, as detailed above, the Federal Circuit has held that in declaratory

Said eTAGZ CEO, Isaac Jacobson, "It is really fortuitous for eTAGZ to hire away a lawyer of Sean's caliber and acclaim from such a respected firm. I think it speaks to the strength of eTAGZ's patents and business opportunities. We are in the midst of a very aggressive campaign to enforce our patent rights against a legion of infringers. Sean is the perfect person to lead our crucial litigation efforts." Joe Pia, of the law firm Pia, Anderson, Dorius, Reynard & Moss, which has filed dozens of patent infringement cases on behalf of eTAGZ, states: "There is not a more highly regarded attorney than Sean that I know."

I'm not a Mormon, however, I leaped at the chance to have a short lunch and learn from a leader. He showed me the ease of connecting through a smile and a story. We talked Provo river fishing, and he even turned that into a lesson I'll never forget and have applied to all aspects of my business life and personal living. Thank you President Monson.

So I plug in my 2013 DS and it's not charging. The green light flashes for a few seconds then turns off. I can here a ticking in the bike if I leave it plugged in but zero charge (pun intended). Advise???

I had this happen on my 2018 DSR, it was the in board charger ...

A 2013 might be eligible for the onboard charger replacement, I think those were a known issue and recall no? ...

My teenager made her first sale today! Why it's such a big deal.

Isaac Jacobson

SVP @ Gabb | Strategic Partnerships and Services

July 1, 2020

My teenage daughter made her first sale today on Etsy! I cannot contain how excited I am, and in fact, I feel quite overcome by it. What has me so fired up?! Is it because we shared a business experience together? Is it my pride of knowing that a stranger in Kentucky loved her product?

I think it's because in this current land of lemons, our kids are selling lemonade! Our teenagers are still dreaming. They have goals and aspirations. Let's lift them up and acknowledge the work they are doing.

For the month of July, I am going to highlight one teen a week from my life. Teens that are out there working, and making things happen in this cloud-covered landscape. This generation is proving to be hard working, creative and resourceful. They are doing things ranging from hourly gigs, websites, neighborhood services and family businesses.

Instead of just patting them on the back, or giving them "Likes", let's show them support by making transactions with them! One of the prevalent emotions in this current world is that we are all in this together. In this inclusive LinkedIn community, let's "Like a LinkedIn Teen". Within this community of professionals, they will learn the value of business networking, hard work, inspiration, drive, and professional growth. I pledge to support both the teens I know and love, as well as the other teens within my LinkedIn network. Here we can show them that they are ONE OF US, and we can be a part of helping support a new generation of business leaders.

LinkedIn Working Teen of the Week

Isaac Jacobson

SVP @ Gabb | Strategic Partnerships and Services

July 8, 2020

Working Teen of the week: Zane Kite (16yrs).

Zane took his passion of photography to an entirely new level this year. Taking advantage of quarantine time, Zane further developed his craft into a beautiful business. Beyond his stunning wildlife shots, Zane has advanced his "fire" film plus Utah starry night photography. Congratulations Zane! I am going to your site and arranging for a large file download for print and frame. I urge my fellow LinkedIn network to "Like" my LinkedIn Working Teen of the Week and visit his site.

Learning Supply and Demand from Teen, Alexi Robledo.

Isaac Jacobson
SVP @ Gabb | Strategic Partnerships and Services

July 24, 2020

Alexi is my selection for Like a Working Teen. He manages and operates the Phantom Fireworks stand at: 1410 N. Redwood Road, Saratoga Springs, UT.

Honoring his diligence at taking on a franchise of his own I "Liked" him by transacting and purchased "Da Bomb!" pack and got a free one to boot! He will do the same for other LinkedIn members too!

This month Alexi learned the importance of reacting to Demand, like the pack I purchased, and managing ample Supply for his favorite customers, like me.

In talking to him, Alexi has also learned this season the importance of employee retention and motivation of his fellow teen workers, especially during quarantine times.

Good job Alexi!

Maybe you saw the movie Tangled- but this is the original! Yee Peng is the famous lantern festival that takes place in Chiang Mai, Thailand, on the full moon of the 12th lunar month in the Thai calendar. In 2021, it falls on Nov 20. By lighting your lantern and setting it free, you release all the misfortunes of the previous year, and wish for good fortune in the year to come. What year could POSSIBLY be better than to do that in 2021?!?! Except doing it this year, of course, but Thailand is not yet open for tourism. Who wants to join in on this good luck next year?! Message me, I'll be there saying farewell to 2020 forever.

A year ago, life was just about to change in a big way! I was in my favorite town, San Miguel de Allende, with my wonderful man, enjoying warm weather, spring rainstorms, and lots of amazing food. I remember being pessimistic about the virus, and thinking it could last for several months! Wow. This is still one of the first places that I want to go back to, when it becomes safe to travel.

Gabb Wireless Raises $14M Series A Funding

The screenshot shows the article page on the website techbuzznews.com. The browser address bar displays the URL: techbuzznews.com/gabb-wireless-raises-14m-series-a-funding/. The website header includes the 'techbuzz' logo with the tagline 'utah tech news' and a search bar. A navigation menu contains links for Home, About, Article Categories, Authors, Calendar, Data, Directory, and Subscribe. The article is categorized under 'Money' and has the title 'Gabb Wireless Raises $14M Series A Funding'. The author is identified as Austin Craig, with a publication date of April 20, 2021, and a 5-minute read time. The main image shows a person holding a tablet. A 'Featured Articles' section on the right highlights another article: 'Canopy Raises $70 Million Series C to Accelerate AI-Powered Accounting Transformation', dated April 23, 2025.

Gabb Wireless announced this week it has closed a $14 million round of funding. This Series A was led by Sandlot Partners and New Orleans Saints quarterback, Taysom Hill.

"We're excited to announce our partnership with Sandlot Partners and Taysom Hill, who share our passion to drive impact and provide solutions to the growing screen addiction among adolescents," said Stephen Dalby, Gabb Founder and CEO.

Stephen Dalby,
Founder of Gabb Wireless

"Sandlot Partners is investing and partnering with Gabb Wireless not only because of its impressive growth... but also because it is providing solutions to address the extremely important screen time addiction problem in our society," said Dave Jensen, Managing Partner of Sandlot Partners. Orem-based Sandlot is less than a year old, but has managed roughly $80 million of investment in nine months, most of that going to Utah companies. Last Fall they joined the $83 million series A round in Breeze Airways, the new airline from JetBlue co-founder David Neeleman.

"As an investor, Gabb checked all the boxes with its impressive growth, founding team, and total addressable market," said Taysom Hill. Gabb saw 471% growth in 2020. "I love the idea that we can help build something to help save kids in an area that has so much need and demand. My wife Emily and I try to be pretty selective of who we tie our brand to, and when considering the chance to invest and partner with Gabb, it was a no-brainer for us and something that we are extremely excited about."

Prior to becoming a critical part of the New Orleans Saints offense, Hill was a dynamic quarterback at BYU during their 2012 to 2016 seasons.

Gabb Wireless is a cell phone service provider aimed at offering kids their very first handset. The company operates as a Mobile Virtual Network Operator, meaning they offer wireless service by leasing service from major cellular carriers. Gabb also sells their own proprietary Android-based cell phone tailored to kids' needs. The Gabb Z2 handset has basic functions like phone, text, camera, media player, and even an FM radio. But the phone is deliberately kept minimal, with no Internet browser, no games, no social media, and no app store. The slimmed down smartphone allows kids to stay in touch with parents and friends, but makes it nearly impossible to venture into more damaging activities, like inappropriate images, games, apps, and addictive behavior.

Is the Gabb approach overkill? According to a 2018 Pew Research poll, two-thirds of parents express concern over their teen's screen time, but more tellingly, 54% of U.S. teens themselves say they spend too much time on their cellphones. The same poll found teens report a range of negative emotions associated with cellphone reliance, with "anxiety" topping the list.

Parents are concerned. Teens themselves are worried. Further, many of the world's leading technologists agree.

Taysom Hill, Quarterback with the New Orleans Saints

When Steve Jobs was asked by Nick Bilton of the New York Times in 2010 what his kids thought of the (then new) iPad, Jobs' answer was simple. "They haven't used it," he said. "We limit how much technology our kids use at home."

Tech luminary Bill Gates had a similar policy. In the UK's Mirror, he made it clear that his kids' use of smart devices was very limited.

"We don't have cellphones at the table when we are having a meal, we didn't give our kids cellphones until they were 14, and they complained other kids got them earlier."

Gates added, "You're always looking at how it can be used in a great way – homework and staying in touch with friends – and also where it has gotten to excess."

Gabb aims to provide a phone that teens can use in that "great way", for staying in touch with parents and friends, and away from addictive or harmful content. "One of our primary purposes is to give parents an opportunity to be put back in the driver seat," said Stephen Dalby in a promotional video for the company.

Dalby's commitment to that vision impressed prospective investors and now partners at Gabb.

"Here's a seminary teacher, no tech background, and he was moving his family to Palo Alto to network, all on the idea and the premise that there should be a smartphone for kids," said Isaac Jacobson, Gabb's VP of Product. Jacobson previously worked in venture capital, but was so taken with Dalby's mission and progress that he joined the company full time last year. Dalby is the father of eight, so a move for the family was no small matter. They "crammed themselves into a [small] house to network and make tech connections," said Jacobson. "And I told my partners, 'Guys, we need to keep an eye on this:'"

Dave Jensen, Managing Partner at Sandlot Partners

Dalby saw the need for a youth-focused smartphone personally as a father and teacher. When purchasing a smartphone for his own 12 year old son, Dalby was shocked there were only fully featured, fully connected phones to choose from. Prices were closer to $1000, rather than his budget of $100. As a seminary teacher, over just a few years Dalby saw students who needed to be reminded to talk less during class, to students who wouldn't talk to each other at all before, during, or after class. They were looking at their cellphones. Anecdotally, he also saw that teen depression was worsening.

"Big tech is the next big tobacco," said VP Jacobson. "Back in the day when people would smoke when I was a kid, you might think, 'Oh, that's a bad habit, but okay.' Today if you see someone smoking, you think, 'What are they doing!?' If I were to look in my crystal ball, in the future when someone is on social media for hours on end, we're going to look and go, 'What are they doing?!'"

The company is mission driven, but it isn't a charity. Dave Jensen of Sandlot Partners says the market for smart phones for kids is roughly $30 billion domestically. Commuters along I-15 might see the numerous Gabb billboards and conclude the company is a local phenomenon, but company representatives say that isn't the case. The vast majority of Gabb phones are used by kids living outside Utah, with customers in every state. Growth is overwhelmingly organic, with word passing from parent to parent. The company isn't disclosing specific revenue numbers, but has seen rapid growth in only 18 months of operation

Gabb will use the proceeds from the Series A financing to accelerate efforts to provide safe phones for kids and expand its product lines, increasing Gabb's total addressable market with these safe alternatives for parents of kids ages five to 15.

One law firm is looking to take social media platforms head-on.

As teens connect via social media there has certainly been an uptick in cyberbullying resulting in long-term mental health effects. The debate remains whether social media platforms have done enough to address the issue of cyberbullying.

Made it Granada! Our cute little hotel has the nicest view of the Alhambra, right from our windows. We even had an amazing lunch with 6 month dry aged ox! I've never had that before.

The other half of our Alhambra visit from a few days ago! Look at the detailed stonework- it's perfectly uniform, as though one person carved everything, there's just zero variation to be found anywhere. Incredible!!

We had a great couple of days in Malaga, Spain! On a hillside above town is the Alcazaba, sort of a mini-Alhambra in a way. There's a beautiful promenade along the bay filled with restaurants, and the entire downtown area is pedestrian only streets! Very walkable and pleasant.

We spent a few days in Malaga, and to be honest, this was not a town I knew much about! It's a hidden gem, and we'll worth a stop for a few days. It's a port city, and frequent stop for cruise ships. The long promenade along the water is filled with restaurants, bars and shops. The entire downtown area is almost completely pedestrian only, making it super walkable. It also has the Alcazaba on the hillside- sort of a mini Alhambra, although that isn't really accurate. It's an old Palace and fortress, from the 1200-1300's mainly. Nice weather, lots of sunshine and parks, and of course good food and wine!

This is what I joined Gabb for! It's finally here, Gabb Music!

The screenshot shows a LinkedIn post from Isaac Jacobson, SVP at Gabb. The post text reads: "This is what I joined Gabb for! It's finally here, Gabb Music!" Below this, a quote from Nate Randle, CEO at Gabb, is displayed. Nate's quote discusses the need for clean music for kids and teens, contrasting it with current adult-oriented streaming services. He mentions that Gabb Music partners with top record labels to scan millions of songs, removing explicit language and drug references. He concludes by saying, "Let's turn it up again!" and "Available today." The post includes the hashtags #GabbMusic, #Music, and #TechForGood. At the bottom of the post is a promotional image with the text "Stream hits. Not explicit." and a stylized, glowing red and orange logo that resembles the letters 'M' and 'G'.

The 4 of us visited one of my favorite landscapes from 3 years ago this afternoon. The roses are perfect!!

instagram.com/p/CfNnXxBRaq/?img_index=1

The screenshot shows an Instagram post by Juliepalasma. The main image is a vibrant garden scene featuring a central stone fountain with a tiered top and a spherical finial. Water flows from two side spouts into a circular basin. The fountain is surrounded by lush greenery, including a large rose archway in the background and various flowering plants in the foreground, such as purple flowers and white roses. The sky is bright blue with scattered white clouds, and mountains are visible in the distance. To the right of the image is the Instagram interface, including the user's profile (Juliepalasma, Alpine, Utah), the caption, and two comments. The caption reads: "The 4 of us visited one of my favorite landscapes from 3 years ago this afternoon. The roses are perfect!!". The first comment, from user rskiffy, says "Wow! It's incredibly beautiful Julie." with three red heart emojis. The post has 21 likes and was posted on June 24, 2022. At the bottom, there is a text input field for comments.

I'm guessing we're the only inpatient behavioral health org (at our level of acuity) who provides cell phones to their teen clients.

The idea probably puts shivers down most program director's spines.

But thanks to Gabb's parent controls and some great staff culture, we're safely doing this at Havenwood Academy.

We're currently beta testing a program where we give Gabb wireless phones to our clients as they near graduation.

We have three watch-phones deployed as I type.

App limitations, absence of a camera, contact controls, and permitted hours of use windows are making this possible.

Our hope is that this will help our teens and their parents to transition back into home life more gradually; giving them better odds of sticking the landing after treatment.

UPDATE: Cora got her first Gabb Phone Plus last night! She also got a Gabb watch and a free year of service!! Not to mention the AWESOME swag kits that were waiting for Cora and her 4 siblings. A special thank you to Nate Randle, Lance Black, Kristen (Kwin) Goodwin, Brooke Shepard and Russ Hannig and all the others for treating our whole family like royalty. This was hands down the best customer service experience I've ever witnessed.

I mean... it's not every day that the CEO personally helps you set up your new phone, and walks through all of the cool features :)

Thank you to every Gabb employee for making such an amazing product possible! You're helping this father of 5 rest MUCH easier knowing there is an entire company dedicated to developing safe tech to help kids stay kids as long as possible. There couldn't be a nobler mission, and I applaud each one of you for your contributions.

To all you parents out there: check out Gabb! Their devices are an absolute game changer which are allowing me to stay connected to my kids, without any of the crap.

MAJOR BONUS: They've figured out a really cool way to gamify chores on the Gabb watch! Talk about next-level AWESOME! :)

If nothing else, check out the Family Resources section of their website: <https://lnkd.in/gVR9aJ7K> 🟢. It is completely full of helpful resources, research, and tips completely focused on helping parents access the information they need to keep their kids safe.

I'm absolutely blown away. Gabb has just earned the Spaulding family as customers for life!

A step in the right direction however, I'm betting Snap will see a slew of new accounts created by kids. Old one for the parent and a new one for the rest of their connections.

This launch comes on the heels of increased pressure on social networks to better protect minors from harm on the platforms.

While this is definitely a step in the right direction, it has been noted that the parental controls set in place give parents some insight into their kids' use of the app — but not enough to fully prevent abuse or exploitation, as it favors maintaining the kids' privacy.

Do you think by adding parental controls to Snapchat makes it safe for kids to use? Comment below! #BigTech #ParentalControls #DigitalParenting TechCrunch Smart kids. Smarter predators. Parents overwhelmed by controls and filters unique to each platform.

This picture is so powerful.

No, these are not just phones sitting on the side table in our kitchen. These are Gabb phones. (With their earbuds) They belong to my daughters.

I'm a father first, but also a school administrator. I see first hand the damage smart phones have on our kids.

When you've been in my shoes, sitting with a parent, who's child has been damaged by social media, online bullying, and changed by peer pressure online, it's an easy decision to hand your own child a Gabb Wireless phone.

Why did I choose Gabb wireless phones for my daughters?

1. No Internet Access
2. No Social Media Apps

What they do have:

1. Texting (limited by plan)
My older daughter can group text and send/receive pics. Younger daughter has single text option. Nothing good comes out of 12-13 year olds in a group text...
2. Gabb Music (look it up)
3. I have GPS tracking on their phones from my phone
4. A price tag far less than any other smartphone.
5. Most Important ~ My piece of mind know they are SAFE from EVERYTHING social media and internet.
6. Supporting an amazing company with an even better mission.
7. Way too many more to list...

So, I share this for the greater good. Yes, I am open with my girls about social media. They see the comedy, cat videos that keep you online for hours, and hair/makeup tutorials. They also understand the dangers. Cue up: Glow Kids, Social Dilemma, Screened Out.

Sure, the pressure to get your child the latest iPhone X is there, and I've even witnessed tantrums over kids wanting the newest iPhones, but who's the parent... not sorry, that was blunt. Speak to your local Sheriff if you need more details about

My house rule: when they have jobs and can afford their own phone, they can buy what ever they want. 😊 by then, they will be old enough to handle what ever social media throws at them...

I'm here to help if anyone needs support.

This is a back and forth subject for all my coparents out there. #parenting

We decided to take the dive and get one of our 3 daughters a smart watch. Due to the fact we have 3 girls, we did it for location purposes, emergency purposes etc etc. This watch all started when my 6 year old girl was at art class and got scared because the fire alarm went off and didn't have a way to reach us!

But let me tell you, there is so much out there and we literally took 3 months to research every single kid watch out there, and Gabb was by far the best choice. It hit all the check boxes we wanted and were able to "accessorize it" as my 6 year old daughter requested.... 😊

She has a cool Groggu band from The Walt Disney Company and a nice pink protection cover, because I mean she is 6 after all. We liked it so much we are going to buy 2 more for our other 2 girls.

Thanks Nate Randle for making my kid feel protected! Well.. I really mean thanks for making us parents not freak out all the time 😊

Highly recommended kids watch for any parent looking for one!

A big shout-out to Alex Denning, our Parent Experience Product Manager. Alex owns the strategy and execution of our web and mobile parent experience across the Gabb suite of products, which is incredibly important as we continually provide safe tech for kids. Alex is married and has two kids. He's an avid Jazz fan and a huge sneakerhead!

When asked about his work at Gabb, Alex said, "The people I work with are amazing, and I'm passionate about the challenges we're tackling – creating safe technology for kids. As a dad of two, I am particularly drawn to Gabb's mission of promoting healthy habits and offline activities for kids. The values we share keep me motivated and committed to this important work."

We appreciate all you do, Alex!

A very happy belated birthday celebration in St. George! After the snowiest winter that I can remember, it was wonderful to bask in the sunshine and warmth. Second year in a row, this might be becoming a tradition!

Gabb Wireless Expands AI-Powered Apps to Personalize Safe Phones for Kids and Teens

In keeping with Utah's decades-long concern with safe media consumption, Gabb Wireless (Lehi) is a cutting-edge mobile virtual network operator (MVNO) system offering "safe cell phones and watches" for kids and proprietary monitoring solutions for parents. As a technologist and thought leader on the negative impact of smartphones on mental health and social development, Gabb has its sights set on building and optimizing AI-powered systems for children and teens to maintain healthy boundaries with mobile technology.

Utah's startup community is no stranger to organizations focused on content filtering and community-centric media production. From Wetzel Whitaker's Brigham Young University Motion Picture Studio (established in 1953; now LDS Motion Picture Studio) to Robert Huntsman's CleanFlicks (2000) and Angel Studio's crowdfunded box office films, Utah offers a unique ecosystem for specialized media systems to grow and iterate.

Gabb Wireless is concerned with media exposure resulting from increased smartphone access among children. Since its founding in 2018, Gabb has devised a capsule of "safe tech" cell phones, watches, and software housed in its Verizon-powered 4G cellular network—completely free of internet and social media access while maintaining safe, specialized functions for kids and parents. These aim to deliver age-appropriate content apps, customizable device setup, GPS tracking, and a "culture platform" for kids to connect with each other in "positive and screen-free ways."

As screening and communications technology continues to advance rapidly, Gabb Wireless is focused on expanding its suite of comprehensive, AI-driven filtering interfaces for parents to adopt and personalize their children's access to media via Gabb-enabled devices. This system is proving to be a totally unique and sophisticated functionality—a nexus, it seems, that could only be built within the culture and expertise of the Utah tech community.

"As parents ourselves, our leadership team understands both the necessity and risk factors involved in giving smartphones to kids," explains Isaac Jacobson, SVP Product at Gabb Wireless. "Phones are useful tools for keeping in touch and accessing information, but they also open up a world of potential dangers, from online bullying to exposure to explicit content and unmonitored interactions with strangers. Parents are understandably concerned about what children are accessing on their phones. Gabb Wireless shares those values and wants to equip users with the best filtering technology and monitoring resources available."

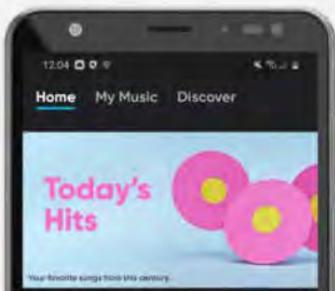

Isaac Jacobson,
SVP Product,

In its current iteration, Gabb Wireless deploys locked-down devices with no internet or social media access. Phones come equipped with proprietary app and system functionality, including Gabb Guard for SMS and call filtration, Gabb Cloud, Gabb Music, and Gabb Maps. The service also offers total privacy with no tracking, tracing, or transacting to any third party, using GPS to share location and tracking only to parents. But this is only the beginning, explains Jacobson. Under his leadership, the Gabb product team is building more sophisticated, responsive, and personalizable AI functionality for parents to manage their children's media consumption and device usage, expanding its app and design intelligence to learn and improve over time.

"As with any AI endeavor, one of the most significant benefits of an advanced filtering system is its ability to learn, adapt, and improve. By analyzing the content that children access, an AI-powered system can identify potential risks and adjust its filtering parameters accordingly," explains Jacobson. "So far at Gabb, I've focused these advancements to integrate safe use solutions for kids' mobile devices, i.e., the custom locked-down AOSP systems and proprietary services available on our website—all while preserving the communication and tracking benefits of a mobile device for kids."

And as the team builds new apps with sophisticated monitoring and filtering technology, Jacobson explains, Gabb's ultimate goal is to empower parents to monitor and adjust how their kids use technology at any age. "Gabb is a great 'grow with them' phone for young kids and preteens, one that can be personalized as the child matures, as it's inevitable that children will develop different needs for digital consumption," says Jacobson. "We've seen this firsthand in building our apps: Users have different interests and behaviors, and a one-size-fits-all filtering approach will not be sufficient. With better AI, however, parents can set parameters based on their child's age, interests, and even specific apps and functionality they want to allow or block. This will facilitate more customized use cases for Gabb's technology, ultimately leading to safe yet nuanced online experiences for children over time."

A current example of this evolving filter technology is Gabb Music, an app that condenses the vast, ever-shifting world of popular music into a library that's safe for kids to browse on their Gabb phones. As the team tackles issues of AI management, data input, and content testing for these types of media apps, there's an ever-growing need for better learning thresholds, context mapping, and blocking mechanisms. "Any app or filtering system is only as good as its ability to accurately identify, block, or exclude potentially harmful content at scale," explains Jacobson. "This is where AI's ability to recognize patterns and analyze data—combined with a topnotch engineering and monitoring team made of flesh-and-blood humans—can be especially productive.”

By using algorithms to content and signal inputs for intent and context, an AI-powered filtering system can learn to determine if a song is appropriate for children, Jacobson explains. This can help to build and optimize media platforms like Gabb Music, build better development protocols, and ultimately prevent exposure to inappropriate content—intentional or otherwise—and ensure that children are only accessing what is safe and age-appropriate.

And as with any AI-powered system, design and maintenance require persistent and nuanced input from human experts. “Our AI learning meetings are interesting to say the least,” says Jacobson. “To accurately teach the system how to identify and filter objectionable content, we have to get comfortable with both explicit and implicit contexts in language, imagery, lyrics, and other forms of communication. Ideological dog whistles, sneaky emojis, predatory playbooks, double entendres—we’ve discussed it all.”

Despite the benefits of using AI to build a filtering system, Jacobson explains, it's important to note that it's not a foolproof solution. “No system can guarantee complete protection from all potential dangers online, and it's still essential for parents to monitor their child's digital activities and talk to them about online safety. We're here to equip parents with educational tools, a value-driven community, and powerful technology as that additional layer of protection and peace of mind.”

Gabb Wireless offers phones and watches in the $19 to $199 range, with unlimited text and talk plans from $14.99 to $29.99 a month. Phones come installed with safe Gabb apps and parent-enabled apps. More apps are arriving regularly in categories like Health, Finance, Spirituality, Travel, and more.

“Our goal is to give resources to parents while allowing kids to be kids,” says Jacobson. “We're realistic about families' needs to stay in communication while remaining steadfast against the dangers of excessive screen time, exposure to harmful content, cyberbullying, and sex crimes too easily facilitated by digital communication. Regardless of how our technology evolves, that mission will never change.”

A favorite hero of many of ours recognized as a top creator on LinkedIn - Nate Randle! Just in the last 3 days, his posts:

POST 1:

Giveaway for Gabb Wireless so a kid can have a new safe communication device (with paid service for a year!)

POST 2:

"There is a stigma surrounding single/solo working parents that needs to stop.

The false assumption that these moms and dads will be less devoted to their job just isn't true.

My angel mother was a single parent, working multiple jobs to make ends meet. She couldn't afford to coast in her job because everything depended on it.

It is already hard enough to raise a family on your own without fighting an uphill battle against all of the unnecessary narratives.

The United States has one of the highest rates of children living in single-parent households in the world. 1 in 4 kids live with a solo mom or dad.

We need their talent in our companies and on our teams. I can personally confirm that single moms and dads often get more done in a few hours that most do in an entire day.

Why? Because they know how to prioritize and maximize their time. Just because they can't stay late doesn't mean they aren't committed to their job.

These incredible parents need a chance! As they are in your companies, meetings and interviews this week — help flip the narrative. See them for everything that they are and you'll find that single parents are valuable contributors, teammates and leaders.

To these dear moms and dads — I will continue to use my voice to speak up for you. NEVER apologize for who you are. I see you and your efforts matter more than you know.

Keep going!
-Nate"

🔥 POST 3:

"Single/Solo Parents - I have an hour right now.
Who can I help with a job search?
Happy to jump on a call to discuss any of the following:
-Resume review
-Companies you are considering
-Reviewing my network with you to help make connections

In honor of Children's Mental Health Awareness Day I would like to take a moment to implore each and every parent or grandparent on this app to watch "Childhood 2.0", A documentary about child safety online and the affect technology/social media has on the mental health of a developing brain. Then tell all the parents you know about it! The documentary can be found free on Youtube (I will link in the comments)

Then follow these accounts on Instagram and LinkedIn for more resources, tips on delaying smartphones, and safe practices for when your kids do get a phone:

Long post but I sincerely hope you'll stick it out with me.

I spent 30 years working in construction, as a landscape designer and project manager for large residential projects.

Construction was not friendly towards motherhood- daycare hours were always shorter than my work day, and I often worked 60 hours a week even as an employee. "Work-life balance" was a total impossibility.

I recently started a new business in travel, which finally allowed me to make some positive changes for my life.

Fast forward to this spring: An old friend that I used to work with developed a severe illness, and spent 2 months in the ICU. I'll spare any private details, but let's say that severe is an understatement. It was absolutely caused and exacerbated by the high stress environment.

I'm well aware that all jobs have stress. What makes contractors a little different is that we work in 105 degree heat, or extreme cold, trying and failing to remain hydrated, miserable port-a-potties, the difficulty in keeping healthy food cool, so you resort to fast food, long hours in the elements, and very few Saturdays or holidays off. Although you didn't get any actual cardio exercise in, you're far too exhausted to go to the gym after work.

Many of my old colleagues know that I took over running this business while he was in the ICU. I've received a ton of phone calls from these old friends. One who was also hospitalized and nearly diabetic, another friend who was just diagnosed with congestive heart failure, and several others on a constant drip of anxiety meds or over-drinking. All caused by stress, overwork, and not taking care of ourselves.

The tipping point: a designer friend of mine is due to have a baby in a week. She is still placing plants in the field this week, and told me she hoped she would be back in the field by a week after delivery to help with projects. I did this foolishness in my own pregnancy, working in the field until I got preeclampsia. Last week, I developed an eye infection but was still placing plants and working with the crew because we had a deadline, despite the fact that I had fuzzy vision and was surrounded by machinery.

People, This is crazy. We should not have to switch careers in order to take care of ourselves. We shouldn't have to martyr ourselves for the sake of getting ahead, or the fear that we'll lose our businesses. We are giving up EVERYTHING for the sake of the job. I would love to say more but I'm running out of room. Can we please normalize focusing on health, sanity, marriage/relationships and our kids? There is no prize at the end of this path.

I'm jumping on a plane in a few minutes to go to Vietnam. Someone asked me a few days ago "I bet you're regretting planning this trip in your busy season!", NO. I am thrilled to be living my life, at least this week. I'd encourage everyone else to do the same. We don't have as much time as we think.

Long post but I sincerely hope you'll stick it out with me. I spent 30 years working in construction, as a landscape designer and project manager for large residential projects. Construction was not friendly towards motherhood- daycare hours were always shorter than my work day, and I often worked 60 hours a week even as an employee. "Work-life balance" was a total impossibility. I recently started a new business in travel, which finally allowed me to make some positive changes for my life. Fast forward to this spring: An old friend that I used to work with developed a severe illness, and spent 2 months in the ICU. I'll spare any private details, but let's say that severe is an understatement. It was absolutely caused and exacerbated by the high stress environment. I'm well aware that all jobs have stress. What makes contractors a little different is that we work in 105 degree heat, or extreme cold, trying and failing to remain hydrated, miserable port-a-potties, the difficulty in keeping healthy food cool, so you resort to fast food, long hours in the elements, and very few Saturdays or holidays off. Although you didn't get any actual cardio exercise in, you're far too exhausted to go to the gym after work. Many of my old colleagues know that I took over running this business while he was in the ICU. I've received a ton of phone calls from these old friends. One who was also hospitalized and nearly diabetic, another friend who was just diagnosed with congestive heart failure, and several others on a constant drip of anxiety meds or over-drinking. All caused by stress, overwork, and not taking care of ourselves. The tipping point: a designer friend of mine is due to have a baby in a week. She is still placing plants in the field this week, and told me she hoped she would be back in the field by a week after delivery to help with projects. I did this foolishness in my own pregnancy, working in the field until I got preeclampsia. Last week, I developed an eye infection but was still placing plants and working with the crew because we had a deadline, despite the fact that I had fuzzy vision and was surrounded by machinery. People. This is crazy. We should not have to switch careers in order to take care of ourselves. Long post but I sincerely hope you'll stick it out with me.

I spent 30 years working in construction, as a landscape designer and project manager for large residential projects.

Construction was not friendly towards motherhood- daycare hours were always shorter than my work day, and I often worked 60 hours a week even as an employee. "Work-life balance" was a total impossibility.

I recently started a new business in travel, which finally allowed me to make some positive changes for my life.

Fast forward to this spring: An old friend that I used to work with developed a severe illness, and spent 2 months in the ICU, I'll spare any private details, but let's say that severe is an understatement. It was absolutely caused and exacerbated by the high stress environment.

I'm well aware that all jobs have stress. What makes contractors a little different is that we work in 105 degree heat, or extreme cold, trying and failing to remain hydrated, miserable port-a-potties, the difficulty in keeping healthy food cool, so you resort to fast food, long hours in the elements, and very few Saturdays or holidays off. Although you didn't get any actual cardio exercise in, you're far too exhausted to go to the gym after work.

Many of my old colleagues know that I took over running this business while he was in the ICU. I've received a ton of phone calls from these old friends. One who was also hospitalized and nearly diabetic, another friend who was just diagnosed with congestive heart failure, and several others on a constant drip of anxiety meds or over-drinking. All caused by stress, overwork, and not taking care of ourselves.

She is still placing plants in the field this week, and told me she hoped she would be back in the field by a week after delivery to help with projects. I did this foolishness in my own pregnancy, working in the field until I got preeclampsia. Last week, I developed an eye infection but was still placing plants and working with the crew because we had a deadline, despite the fact that I had fuzzy vision and was surrounded by machinery.

Thank you Julie, for writing this! I fully agree that somewhere, somehow the world accelerated and our lives became out of balance. I share with you the passion that bringing travel, both to our lives and the lives of others, is enriching and nourishing. Enjoy Vietnam!

Thank you! Yes, it's strange to me that we collectively hold the power to change this, but we also feel so powerless at times. If we could all get on board and reset our priorities, it would do wonders.

PS Vietnam has been an amazing trip!! Worth the flight time for sure, My second visit, and I love it even more this time!

Simple: understand any technology before you give it to your child. We know what fire can do before we let kids use it, we understand drowning before we let them swim, we understand accidents before we let them drive. Phones, like all technology, should augment our humanity, not consume it. When it comes to introducing technology to children, I can't imagine there's a parent alive who isn't dealing with this issue in their own family.

Emily Cherkin was a teacher for over a decade and coaches parents about digital tech. In an NPR interview, Cherkin said, "I have talked to hundreds of parents, and no one has ever said to me, 'I wish I gave my kid a phone earlier or I wish I'd given them social media access sooner. Never.'" https://lnkd.in/dxCRry\_d

After four of the happiest years of my life, this incredible man asked me to marry him! We spent last week in Mexico with my extended family, and I was so excited to share the excitement with so many people I love. I knew I wanted to be with him forever on day 1- as cheesy as that sounds, it's 100% true. I'm looking forward to every one of our adventures to come, and of course, there will be many!!! I also gain 3 absolutely wonderful bonus kids whom I love dearly, and his amazing family. ❤️❤️❤️

Whatsup LinkedIn! This is Snoop Dogg here and this is my first ever LinkedIn post. I'm super excited to be here. My entire life and career has been about helping others and giving back. I'm here on LinkedIn to do the same through sharing lessons I've learned during my journey to help make LinkedIn and the world a better place. Look forward to interacting with this amazing community here over the coming weeks and months. Peace.

Honored to be representing Gabb Wireless regarding their headquarters expansion, as they deliver safe tech for kids with phones & watches providing a reliable & safe experience for kids & teens while giving parents peace of mind.

The company is changing the narrative of giving children "smart" devices that lead to screen addiction & other negative effects on kids' development. Gabb encourages kids to live outside the screen by giving them everything they need – and nothing they don't. Very proud to be associated with this team including Nate Randle Lance Black Isaac Jacobson Parker Hansen . Utah Governor's Office of Economic Opportunity Colliers Economic Development Corporation of Utah (EDCutah) Todd Brightwell

Dear Josia Nakash,

I woke up this morning to the terrible news of a terrorist attack on your country. You were the first person I thought of. Our dear Israeli friend, Josia, who is always supporting and caring for others.

Today, I share my public support for you. I am so sorry to hear of the lives that have already been lost. I feel for the sadness and fear you must feel right now.

You have a way with words that touches the soul. You write to uplift and tell the inspiring stories of others. Thank you for impacting my life with your goodness and grace.

My hope is that this note will play a small part in letting you know how many people see you, love you, and are with you.

I pray that your family is safe and that you are not in harms way.

I am here for you. This community is here for you.

We love you! 🇺🇸 ❤️

-Nate

The state of Utah is going after TikTok for the dangers the app poses to its most vulnerable users. Governor Spencer Cox has long promised litigation against several platforms, and the lawsuit against TikTok is the first major court action the state has taken.

Kids deserve to be protected, and this is just one step in the right direction to protect them from these harmful platforms.

What does a nun's prayer have to do with a business meeting? Business dinners are common occurrence in my life, and while the conversations are often lively, many of them tend to run together in my memory. This one was different. This time, I was in the presence of some remarkable people. Astounded at my luck to be amongst this group, I kept my cool through the normal course of exchanging pleasantries, and discussing potential collaborations and problems to be solved. While waiting for dessert, the main participant, asked if he could read a nun's prayer from the 1600's. The table was taken aback and of course welcomed it. He unfolded a small piece of paper, tattered from years of traveling in his pocket. He read it out loud, slowly: Lord, thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older and will someday be old. Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs. Make me thoughtful but not moody; helpful but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all, but Thou knowest Lord, that I want a few friends at the end. The gravity of the moment was intense. While business is all around us, business with people that become our friends is rare and most desired. Some of my best friends come from past business relationships. It can be easy to separate the people in your life into "business" and "personal", but in the end, it's just all about the people in our lives, wherever we may have been lucky to meet them. It's easy to forget, and I was grateful that this man provided a heartfelt reminder. I remain deeply appreciative of that evening. It served as a reset button, reminding me of the value of all human connections that I am lucky enough to make on this path.

Product Passion My son makes pizza. So, we often share pizza vids like this Una Pizza Napoletana video. Why am I posting this on LinkedIn? It's not about pizza, it's about the intense passion that makes you want to create something incredible. A true passion for your product, or your craft. Anthony Mangieri exudes love of his product, and the consistency and attention to detail required to make something of the highest quality, every single time. Eater poured their love into this video Many products are created based on the numbers, the profit margins, the market forces. But what if every one of us, and especially product people, slowed down for a moment to remember, or rekindle this fire within us? Like Anthony, what if you thought "I can't WAIT to try to make today better"? The love of your craft can make a career pass by in a blink of an eye, because it fuels you, instead of draining you. Watch it during your lunch break (15 min) and I'll bet you'll wish you had a slice of his attitude. <https://lnkd.in/dTZRUvc9>

An impactful company mission endows its employees with superpowers. Gabb's mission has united people from diverse backgrounds, and I've marveled at the remarkable career transformations occurring as these exceptional people embraced the mission. Holly Rawlings, formerly a middle school and collegiate teacher, has evolved into a lead research writer and TV guest expert advocating for child safety online and teaching parents how to learn about the tech kids use. Katie Bethel, a former administrative assistant, has honed and mastered her engineering recruiting skills, as we needed it, and of her own learning and doing, bringing Gabb the best tech talent in the state. Christopher Hales, a former seminary instructor, has redirected his educational skills to simplifying technical explanations and enhancing customer responses as the Director of Training & Parent Education. Colin Cole was finishing his accounting degree while passionately dedicated himself to pioneering a child's smartwatch that now leads the industry because he figured out what kids love. This is only a sample; we have a company full of individuals who have redirected their efforts towards the mission of safeguarding children from online dangers. Our good fortune is amplified by having a leader like Nate Randle, whose commitment to company culture and the well-being of our people be as substantial as our customers and the bottom line.

Thankful doesn't even begin to describe what we feel for this crew. ❤️

Day in and day out, they work with one mission in mind: To protect kids with safe tech. They pour their minds and hearts into their work and it shows.

This year, Gabb leadership gifted each employee with a holiday bonus—an act of generosity to say "we are truly grateful for you". They thanked every 🧡 single 🧡 person individually. Holiday sales and promotions will expire, but these relationships will last forever.

My Grown-Up Kids at Work. When Gabb needed temp workers for the holiday season, my daughter Anna happily signed up. When my daughter Maya wants to be close to us, she swings by the new offices and grabs a spot for a bit. They love our space. Whether working or visiting, they enjoy it, "the vibe is good", "it's chill", "it feels safe" (Their words). Thank you Gabb, Nate Randle, Greg Cole, Parker Hansen and Dana Grunander, for creating a safe and enjoyable workplace for everyone; including grown-up kids.

Aww this strikes a cord for me 🥰 We haven't had an office since 2020 and my kids used to love visiting! I love to see kids in the workplace, be they grown or itty bitty.. but the grown sort seems extra special. How cool that your girls come to hang?!

Full Circle with Good People and Real Relationships. I was invited to a holiday reception lunch by our partners at Blue Diamond Capital, LLC. When I arrived, I saw one my favorite people on the planet, Kyle Reyes, Ph.D. We hugged and immediately reminisced on our Full Circle of events and the Good People we care about. Kyle is the starting point of this amazing full circle story. He and I met when he started working at Utah Valley University. During one of our visits, he asked if I needed a full-time attorney to help run my business, I said yes, and he recommended his brother Sean Reyes. Because of the goodness of Kyle, I of course met with his brother. After one dinner meeting with Sean and his wife, I offered him the chance to join my company, he accepted and soared as a Partner and general counsel as well as becoming one of my best friends. Sean one day tells me about a great company called Gabb Wireless. Because of what Sean means to me. I of course met Gabb. Some months later, I joined Gabb full time! And why not! Good People recommend Good People, and these Gabb people had a Great Mission. Not long after joining Gabb, I invited Blue Diamond Capital to work with us and they did! Again, Good People, Good Company, Great Partnership. Which leads me back to the Blue Diamond reception lunch with Kyle Reyes. Wow! Knowing Good People is easy, building Real Relationships takes effort, making it all click in business is magical. Thank you to all involved in this Circle. You mean everything to me.

"It's REALLY hard to align your purpose and passion with your profession," - Nate Randle

He's right. A lot of us have passions, hobbies, and causes we're involved with that have nothing to do with our day jobs.

Sometimes, like Nate says, you DO have to choose pursuing your passion or making more money.

Perhaps we also have to look harder find purpose in our work and daily lives.

I ask myself these three questions on a regular basis:

📌 Who am I helping with my work?

I run a marketing agency, Accelity. We're building a company where people are respected and have the flexibility that they deserve. We market software products that make people's lives easier every day.

📌 How can I find purpose in my work every single day?

To me, purpose looks like: brightening someone else's day, helping my team solve a difficult problem, overcoming a challenge, making progress on my goals. I want to close my laptop every day knowing that I did my best.

📌 How can I use the money I make and the time I have to do more good?

I believe we can all find the time to do more for each other. It can be big things—like becoming a foster parent, being a big brother or sister, mentoring other professionals, or regularly volunteering your time. Or, it can be smaller commitments of time or money. Every single action helps.

So, can purpose, passion and money go together?

Yes. And depending on your perspective, it might be easier to find than you think.

Nate Randle aligns his purpose and personal experiences with work every single day at Gabb, which provides safe technology for kids. Give him a follow and find a link to our full conversation in the comments.

Passion, purpose, money—can they go together?

[Jackie] What's your best advice on finding that intersection

Getting the wifi and security set up are big projects that take a lot of time and effort.

Drew LeBaron and Brian Hadfield made it all happen and our entire team can't thank them enough.

This type of work happens behind the scenes and often goes unnoticed. It can be a thankless job that only gets flagged if something goes wrong.

Thanks for sharing your remarkable talents with all of us at Gabb,

My best friend: Sean Reyes. From the first moment that we crossed paths, I knew I could trust him, and together we embarked on a professional journey working together, and we moved mountains! Sean has since then transitioned to the AG's office, where I continue to be inspired by the impactful and meaningful work that he engages in daily. Not only is he the brightest mind in every room, but he also has a genuine kindness that sets him apart. One of Sean's standout qualities is his exceptional listening skills. He not only cares deeply, but also assists in a way precisely tailored to your needs. During my darkest hours, he stood by me, and in my brightest moments, he shared in my celebration. Sean is more than my friend; he is a cherished confidant, my most trusted colleague, and undeniably one of my favorite people.

I want to share a tough situation my son Ethan recently experienced. Remember that proud-dad post I made a few weeks ago about his passion for pizza making and doing what you love? Well, in a surprising twist he was let go from his job – a job he loved and did well– and the reasons hit me hard. A while back, I invited him to join me at my yearly office Christmas party. He said yes and I was excited to have him with me. We had a blast! Ethan, being the responsible kid he is, let his manager know he'd work almost his whole shift, but would have to leave one hour early to join me. The next day, he gets a text saying he's fired. He was shocked, upset and embarrassed- this was his first firing. He called me, wondering what to do, or what he had done wrong. Something felt off- he was a customer favorite, and regularly covered other people's shifts. A week later, the manager group-texted the whole team, saying they're closing their doors for good. Clarity at last! They were finding any reason they could to thin out the herd and stay afloat, however briefly. Instead of adjusting hours, prices, menu items, you name it- they chose to fire people during the holidays and made them feel like it was their fault. We hear often of "quiet quitting", but not enough about companies "quiet firing." It messes with young workers' trust in business and the job market itself. As businesses, it's crucial that we consider the impact our decisions will have on both our current AND future workforce. Ethan's taking some time off to be with me for the rest of the month. When he jumps back into the job hunt, I have no doubt that he'll do well. But you can bet he'll be more cautious. It's too easy to complain about the work ethic of younger generations, rather than see the effect that treating young workers like they're disposable has on their morale and future decisions. Wishing you all a mindful and compassionate holiday season. hashtag#workplaceculture hashtag#employeeempowerment hashtag#businessethics

We hear often of "quiet quitting", but not enough about companies "quiet firing."

It messes with young workers' trust in business and the job market itself. As businesses, it's crucial that we consider the impact our decisions will have on both our current AND future workforce.

Ethan's taking some time off to be with me for the rest of the month. When he jumps back into the job hunt, I have no doubt that he'll do well. But you can bet he'll be more cautious. It's too easy to complain about the work ethic of younger generations, rather than see the effect that treating young workers like they're disposable has on their morale and future decisions.

Wishing you all a mindful and compassionate holiday season.

I sad statement on the lack of professionalism and employee care that seems to be the norm lately, and a hard life lesson for your son to learn. Inevitably, it will work out better for him, as he will find a better and more satisfying job. It's too bad that a young man with such a fine work ethic and attention to is duties has to become a less trusting person to adapt to today's work force.

Last night my son texted me a poem about food. Why does this matter, and why did I post it on LinkedIn? Simple. It describes the result of his craft: How food tastes. As professionals our final product or results matter. If you can speak fondly of your end work product, then you are in the right place. During his current time with no work, he turned to words on what he loves. Still crafting. The heartfelt messages from the LinkedIn community on my last post about Ethan's quite firing were impactful as I shared all the messages with him. It empowered him and made him hopeful again. Thank you all and Happy Holidays!

I made a poem about food

the gift of tasting food, it's truly divine,
With every bite, flavors dancing, oh how they intertwine.
From sweet to savory, and everything in between,
The joy it brings to our taste buds, is such a sensation so keen.

The tang of citrus, the warmth of a spice, The creaminess of chocolate, it's so nice.
The crunch of a chip, the sizzle of a fry, Each taste, a moment of pure bliss, oh my!
So let's savor each meal, let's cherish every bite,
For the gift of tasting food is a true delight.

Taste buds dancing, flavors so ripe, a mix of sensations, such a beautiful hype.
From the fiery spice that lights up our tongues,

From the fiery spice that lights up our tongues,
To the filling feast that replenishes our tumms.

From the first sip to the final swallow, let's cherish this gift, and let our taste buds wallow.

For Christmas this year, we decided to get married, surrounded by our kids! Plans are still on for a big, fun wedding later, but the moment was perfect and we didn't want to wait! We surprised them just a few minutes before, and it was a casual, barefoot event- perfect!!! I'm so happy to call this man my husband ☺

The future of voice: challenges and opportunities

Andrea Moreno

Officials warn of AI-aided grandparent scams

What are the challenges threatening the future of voice, and where are there untapped opportunities? How can carriers cement the voice call as the cornerstone of modern communications, even as new technologies threaten to splinter how we communicate?

Those were some of the questions answered during a panel discussion at Hiya's 2023 State of the Call Summit in New York City. Speakers included:

- Andy Walker, Global Communications and Media Lead for Accenture
- James Lau, Chief Product Officer at Hiya
- Isaac Jacobson, SVP of Strategic Partnerships and Services at Gabb Wireless
- Alex Quilici, CEO of YouMail

The discussion was moderated by Jason Young, Founder and Managing Partner at Campanile Partners. As a former executive at T-Mobile, Young advises tech and telecom companies. Young set the stage for discussion with this thought:

“Trends suggest that there will be many more voice calls — and more ways to make calls — in 10 years than there are today, and that innovation in voice can bring us more enriched and satisfying ways to connect. The other side of this trajectory suggests that the voice call will be under increasing attack, which means the opportunity to innovate the future of voice is a fantastic one that’s here now.”

Watch a recording of the panel discussion, The Future of Voice

Young posed three questions to the panel of speakers. Below are the questions and a sampling of answers from the panelists.

#1. How real is AI today in your business and in businesses you touch?

Alex Quilici, CEO of YouMail, talked about the use of AI by both the good guys and the bad guys. "For us, AI is a really big deal in detecting bad call traffic. So in the short term, it has been good for the good guys, and the bad guys haven't really needed it," he said. "But when the good guys get better and better, that's when we'll see the bad guys start using it. And that's where it gets scary because it doesn't require a lot of sophistication beyond what's there now."

Quilici asked the audience how many have a personal voicemail greeting set at their office. When most raised their hands, he noted that the average voice greeting is six seconds, but voice cloning software only requires three seconds of audio. "All the bad guys have to do is clone your voice, spoof your phone number, and they're you. That's what keeps me up at night," he said.

Hiya's Chief Product Officer, James Lau, was asked about some of the positive aspects of AI. "Gen AI is really just a tool and, like any other tool, can be used for both good and bad," he said, giving examples of AI-powered software he worked on in his previous role at Microsoft. "More and more, we're going to see AI deeply integrated into every piece of software," Lau said. "In five to ten years, it will be commonplace and just be a part of every software and service.

#2. Where do you think the future of voice is going in terms of all the different ways people can connect?

Isaac Jacobson of Gabb Wireless explained how Gabb's customers are parents looking for phone service and devices that are safe for their children. Generally, the child will start with a voice-activated watch, and as they grow, they move up to a handheld phone that allows calls and text messages but not internet or social media access. Later, they grew into a handheld device that included certain curated apps. "What we'll see in the future is that once a child gets a phone, they keep the watch, which is still their primary device," he said. "So voice is very, very important to our consumer group."

Andy Walker of Accenture pointed out that even beyond different devices are the different apps that people use to communicate. "If you look at millennials and Gen Zers in general, their behavior around devices and apps is really different from Gen X or boomers," he said. He notices that older consumers prefer making phone calls, whereas younger consumers want to communicate through apps. "They may even use different apps for different friend groups. Maybe they're connected with these friends on Instagram, these friends on TikTok, and these friends on Fortnite," he said.

#3. What are the biggest opportunities in that future of voice?

Accenture's Andy said that in India, 70% of voice calls are made through applications, such as WhatsApp, and he sees the same thing in other countries as he travels. "You wonder, why haven't the telcos created something like that?" he said. "I think we're going to see applications playing a greater role in the future. With 5G, as we continue to create faster and better networks, I think the software layer is where the innovation will occur."

YouMail's Alex Aulici agreed. "I think the biggest thing for me would be to see the telcos open up so all the app makers and all the services out there have a better chance of being really successful because they're deeply integrated through APIs and have access to the network. They can do things like WhatsApp but do it in a better way. That's the challenge."

Rise Above the Roar with Quiet Conversation. The CES conference is just around the corner, and my tech savvy friends know that means lots of people, lots of conversations, lots to take in, sometimes to the point of being overwhelmed. In the midst of the vibrant, noisy, wonderful chaos that defines these events, I've come to recognize the profound impact of engaging in quiet yet meaningful conversations with people that I've just met. These one-on-one interactions have consistently served as pivotal moments, not only steering my career or business in new directions but also expanding my network, and fostering brand new opportunities. It's remarkable how million-dollar deals often trace their origins back to these intimate exchanges, and frequently with individuals that I've never met before. As we prepare for the excitement of CES and welcome attendees from around the globe, I'm eagerly anticipating where these quiet yet impactful conversations might lead me. Whether you opt for a direct message, a call, or a chance encounter on the tradeshow floor, I'm hopeful that we'll find a moment to connect. Rise Above the Roar with Quiet Conversation. The CES conference is just around the corner, and my tech savvy friends know that means lots of people, lots of conversations, lots to take in, sometimes to the point of being overwhelmed. In the midst of the vibrant, noisy, wonderful chaos that defines these events, I've come to recognize the profound impact of engaging in quiet yet meaningful conversations with people that I've just met. These one-on-one interactions have consistently served as pivotal moments, not only steering my career or business in new directions but also expanding my network, and fostering brand new opportunities. It's remarkable how million-dollar deals often trace their origins back to these intimate exchanges, and frequently with individuals that I've never met before. As we prepare for the excitement of CES and welcome attendees from around the globe, I'm eagerly anticipating where these quiet yet impactful conversations might lead me. Whether you opt for a direct message, a call, or a chance encounter on the tradeshow floor, I'm hopeful that we'll find a moment to connect. I'm curious to hear if any of you have stories to share about connections made in these quieter moments within the intensity of a huge event? Recently, Zane has been on a quest to narrow his career focus, seeking insights into various professions, asking me about my experiences, and the ins and outs of different kinds of businesses. ## Busca por segurança pode revitalizar ligações telefônicas

Empresas investem no fornecimento de soluções de bloqueio e autenticação de chamadas para operadoras; no MWC, provedora apresenta tecnologia 5G New Calling para uso empresarial

Reforço de segurança pode fazer com que usuários voltem a confiar em ligações telefônicas (crédito: Reprodução/MWC)

Perdendo espaço para chamadas de áudio ou vídeo feitas por meio de aplicativos de mensagens, as tradicionais ligações telefônicas não estão com os dias contados como alguns pensam. Pelo contrário, com o uso de novas tecnologias, a busca por aumentar a segurança nas comunicações pode revitalizar o serviço, de acordo com discussões realizadas no Mobile World Congress \(MWC\) 2024.

Pesquisa apresentada em um painel sobre o futuro do serviço de voz indica que, em razão do crescente número de ligações incômodas e fraudes em todo o mundo, 92% dos consumidores acreditam que chamadas não identificadas são fraudulentas. Com isso, optam por não atender ao telefone, mas ficam receosos de perder uma ligação importante.

Além disso, o uso de Inteligência Artificial (IA) capaz de simular a voz de parentes e amigos para aplicação de golpes – prática recentemente proibida nos Estados Unidos – faz com que usuários fiquem em dúvida sobre a veracidade das ligações.

No entanto, para elevar a confiança das chamadas, algumas empresas estão investindo em soluções que bloqueiam possíveis golpes e atestam que a voz do outro lado da linha é de uma pessoa real.

A Gabb Wireless, por exemplo, disponibiliza smartphones para crianças e adolescentes com aplicativos limitados. O foco dos produtos é reforçar as comunicações por voz e mensagem de texto entre pais e filhos. “O que as famílias querem é mais segurança nas comunicações. As ligações telefônicas são preciosas, elas mantêm as pessoas conectadas”, disse Isaac Jacobson, vice-presidente sênior de produtos da empresa.

No mesmo painel, James Lau, diretor de Produtos da Hiya, provedora de bloqueador de chamadas, destacou que as operadoras estão cientes das fraudes realizadas por meio das linhas telefônicas, o que tem aumentando a procura por serviços de identificação e bloqueio de ligações.

New Calling

Durante o congresso, a WIT Software, provedora de RCS, voz e vídeo IP, anunciou uma das primeiras implementações da tecnologia 5G New Calling (5GNC) direcionada ao segmento empresarial – a tecnologia havia sido objeto de debate na edição anterior do evento. A solução tem apoio da GSMA, associação global de operadoras móveis e organizadora do evento em Barcelona.

Em nota, o MWC ressalta que a tecnologia pode restaurar a confiança dos usuários no canal de voz. Isso porque a ferramenta funciona com chamadas verificadas. Na prática, empresas e profissionais precisam solicitar uma conta comercial verificada para uma operadora. Após essa configuração, a plataforma executa um protocolo de verificação para autenticar cada chamada efetuada para dispositivos móveis.

Em smartphones, será possível ver um logotipo comercial verificado, indicando que se trata de uma ligação autêntica.

February 28, 2024

Chicago, IL and LEHI, UT – Gabb Wireless®, the leading company in providing safe tech for kids, announced a new agreement with HERE Technologies, the leading location data and technology platform, to launch Gabb Maps™, kid-safe mapping and navigation for all Gabb® mobile phones.

Gabb Maps leverages the HERE SDK (Software Development Kit) to develop a customized, in-app map and routing solution with kid digital safety as the top priority. Gabb Maps is customized to provide smart filtering that blocks out business information for age-inappropriate businesses (e.g. liquor stores) and blocks kids from “backdoor” access to the internet, through internal web browsers on business pages, or user-uploaded photos and reviews on business listings that could expose children to explicit content.

To ensure safety and privacy protection, Gabb Maps does not gather nor sell any child's information. Users can opt-in to send data to HERE, but the child's data is anonymous and is only used to improve the navigation, never for advertising.

“Kids digital safety was the number one priority when rolling out Gabb Maps and we wanted to be sure to create a solution that was safe for kids and didn't collect or share any of their personal data,” said Isaac Jacobson, SVP of Strategic Partnerships and Services at Gabb. “This unique offering gives kids the ability to use the location services everyone has come to expect on phones, without exposing them to any of the dangerous content from age-inappropriate businesses or users.”

“Gabb Maps provides a service that can give parents some peace of mind when sending their child out into the world,” said Stuart Ryan, SVP and General Manager of the Americas at HERE Technologies. “As a parent myself, I know the importance of making sure your children have access to tools that are useful and safe, without unneeded exposure of their personal data. We are proud to work with Gabb to create this customized Mapping and Navigation offering that's sole purpose is to give kids the valuable location information they may need."

Data privacy is fundamental to HERE. The company is one of the first mapping technology companies to achieve HITRUST Risk-based, 2-year (r2) Certified status, ISO/IEC 27701:2019 certification, in addition to its ISO 27017 and 27018 certifications for the provision and use of cloud services. Last summer, HERE also announced a new location anonymization tool for enterprises to use in self-hosted environments that meets compliance and privacy regulations, such as the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and the California Consumer Privacy Act (CCPA).

These parents refused to give their kids smartphones – until they found Gabb

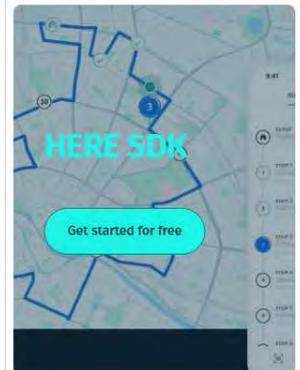

Insights & Trends 6 min read 11 April 2024

These parents refused to give their kids smartphones – until they found Gabb

Louis Boroditsky
Managing Editor, HERE360

---

In a world where compulsive smartphone use is on the rise, how do parents choose between giving their children freedom and keeping them safe?

"I think Addi thought she needed a phone when she maybe turned eight or nine years old," said Kim Rodela of Highland, Utah, talking about her daughter. "I've seen how kids have gotten addicted to phones. I basically wanted to hold it off for as long as possible."

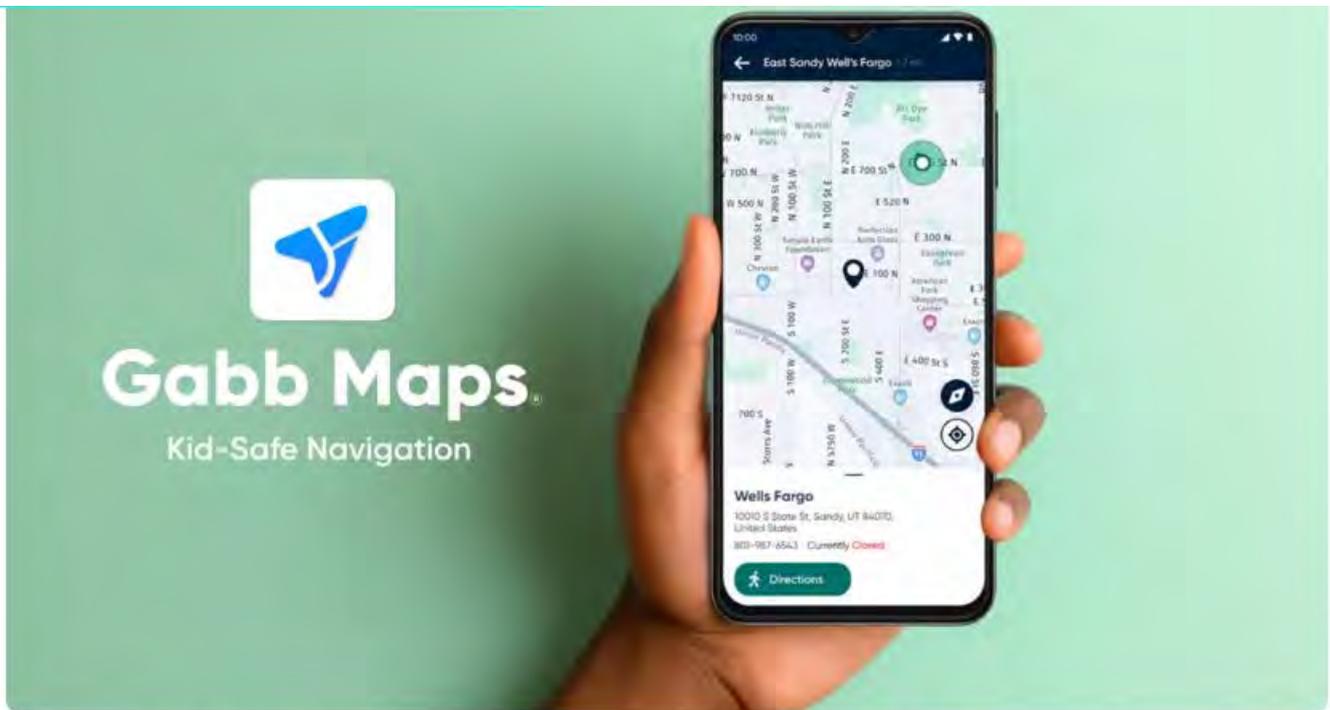

"My husband and I looked all over and we were like, 'What phones are out there that just have text and calls?'"

Smartphones have become an indispensable part of our daily lives, offering unparalleled convenience and connectivity. However, alongside their benefits, there's a concerning trend emerging: the rise of digital addiction, particularly among younger generations.

According to a recent survey by Pew Research Center, 95% of American teenagers have a smartphone, and nearly half of them say they use the internet "almost constantly" — roughly double the amount ten years ago.

For father-of-four Russ Bezzant, having his kids race dirt bikes felt a lot safer than having a smartphone, but his family needed a way to keep in contact. After his wife Missy's idea of flip phones was promptly rejected by their eldest son and daughter - on the grounds that it was too hard to text on them - a friend told them about Gabb.

"I looked into it and I was impressed," said Missy. "There was no group chat, no social media and no images that they could send or receive."

Gabb Maps uses HERE SDK (Software Development Kit) to develop a customized in-app map and routing solution that removes age-inappropriate content and keeps kids' online safety in mind.

Image credit: Gabb

Gabb is the first-ever US-wide cellular network that is dedicated to kid-safe technology. With a line-up of products that includes the Gabb Phone and the Gabb Watch, the Utah-based tech company has also developed a suite of child-friendly apps including Gabb Messenger, Gabb Music and now, Gabb Maps.

Joining forces with HERE, Gabb Maps uses HERE SDK to combine easy-to-use navigation with fresh and accurate data while removing content that makes many parents uncomfortable. This could be anything from user-generated content (such as explicit photo reviews), embedded web browsers that can act as a backdoor to the internet, location sharing and ads.

Deploying smart-filtering technology, Gabb Maps also blocks phone numbers, websites and store hours for all adult-only businesses, like liquor stores. For even more peace of mind, it doesn't collect kids' data (except in an anonymous format to improve the navigation function of the app. Kids' data is never sold to third parties).

"The beautiful thing about the Gabb Phone is that it looks like a smartphone, it seems like it's what everybody else is carrying around school, yet my son is not completely influenced by the toxic dangers of what a cell phone would typically bring," said Orlando property management specialist and Gabb fan Zane Hansen.

His wife Fallon agrees: "I feel like at his age especially, they're in junior high now, we need to be able to get in contact with them. But we don't want to give them the phone because we don't want them to be more interested in the screen."

Digital dangers

A few staggering statistics from Gabb's website that underline the importance of a balanced approach to smartphone use:

5 hours:

the average daily amount of time American children ages 8 – 12 spend watching or using screens.

1.2 years:

the average amount of time American teens between 13 – 18 will spend on social media.

1 in 3:

kids will become a victim of cyberbullying

"Kids' digital safety was the number one priority when rolling out Gabb Maps and we wanted to be sure to create a solution that was safe for kids and didn't collect or share any of their personal data," said Isaac Jacobson, SVP of Strategic Partnerships and Services at Gabb. "This unique offering gives kids the ability to use the location services everyone has come to expect on phones, without exposing them to any of the dangerous content from age-inappropriate businesses or users."

Gabb Maps contains other useful features to help children navigate their surroundings including custom routing for pedestrians and cyclists that recognizes walkways, stairs, and ramps; traffic conditions with written directions so that teens can avoid things like construction, accidents, and busy roads; and an accurate GPS locator so kids don't get lost.

“Kids' digital safety was the number one priority when rolling out Gabb Maps”

Isaac Jacobson

SVP of Strategic Partnerships and Services, Gabb

While Gabb's kid-safe phones and watches are currently only available in the United States, the company plans on launching its suite of apps on Google Play and the Apple App Store soon, allowing parents in other countries to have more control over their children's online access.

Shortly after buying the Gabb Phone for her daughter, Rodela ran for Highland City Council. “I've got four kids under the age of 11 – it was a crazy summer,” she admitted. “I would send Addi with her friends, with the other kids. I'd be out and we'd be knocking on doors and passing out flyers. I am so grateful to Gabb for coming up with this idea, just to keep Addi younger for a little bit longer.

“That's how we were able to get through this summer of craziness. And you know, in the end, it worked – Addi helped win me my campaign.”

Working towards your first car. So much pride in one cute photo. My daughter Anna has been saving every check she gets from her work at Gabb. She is part of the enrollment team and diligently arrives to work at 8am sharp, making sure our phones are activated when mom (more likely the kid) rips open the box and turns it on. Her personal goal was simple: Buy a reliable car and pay for it in full. To do that she needed to find a place she feels good working in, identify what needs to be done, do the work, manage her money and reach her goal. She now sees work as a method to accomplish something personal. I love this. I believe in Gen Z. I believe in her. She'll just do fine in whatever profession she pursues because she made it personal. hashtag#genz hashtag#firstcar hashtag#worklifebalance hashtag#women hashtag#SheInspiresMe

Brandon Fugal, you came in, listened carefully and immediately understood our needs. Methodically put deals together to educate and evaluate. You gave crucial details, which ONLY YOU can insightfully demonstrate. Then closed the best possible deal for everyone involved.

If part of that customer obsession ever requires someone looking at/being part of the service team to repair/warranty these devices to get them back in the hands of customers I'd love the opportunity! Lots of customer requests for repair through 3rd party routes but not a lot of options and as a Samsung partner - love to increase their experience!

That's truly what we are trying to do at Gabb - break the mold - providing products for kids that's built FOR kids and that parents can trust (and make sure that experience isn't a full time job for parents to manage).

To all of you Accidental Mentors...keep going! I have learned more from someone I have self-designated as a "mentor" (of course, without telling them) than some that have asked to mentor me or vice versa. Those that give personal examples and advice tailored for me are inspiring and make me grow. These are my "GO TO" people whenever I just need to hear them talk. Sometimes it's about work situations, a family challenge or general catching up. They know HOW and WHEN to ask how I'm doing. I give a short answer, they proceed to ask me more and more and then before you say 'mentorship' they are handing out advice diamonds; plus giving context to how their advice helped cure their own similar situations. This is a thank you on LinkedIn, you may know who you are, but let's not talk about it, let's keep going because your mentorship is that good. hashtag#mentorship hashtag#career hashtag#advice hashtag#uplifting hashtag#inspire hashtag#advisediamonds

How a Vegas Breakfast Changed My Career. If you volunteer a solution, be ready to lead it—might just change your career. I learned this lesson the hard way over breakfast in Vegas. What started as a simple meeting quickly turned into a defining moment I never saw coming. A colleague had told me about a startup facing a major lawsuit from a big media company. They couldn't afford a lawyer, and they couldn't even get in the same room with the people suing them. Having just finished a company rollup and knowing the executive at the media company—I figured, why not? I reached out to both sides and managed to set up a meeting while we were all attending CES. The only available time? Breakfast. The executive from the media company came in hot, launching into a full-speed takedown of the startup's missteps before our coffee even had a chance to cool. Meanwhile, the startup team and I sat there quietly, letting him vent while awkwardly chewing our bacon. Then, finally, a pause. I took the opportunity to explain that, yes, the startup had made a mistake—but they had also done everything possible to fix it. Then I proposed a solution: Instead of pursuing the lawsuit, the media company could audit the startup's technical reports each month. This would provide them with valuable emerging market data while allowing the startup to stay afloat. Silence. More bacon chewing. Then, the executive pointed his fork at me and said: "Fine. But only if YOU oversee the reports. YOU offered the solution. YOU deliver the results." I was completely unprepared for that curveball. I hadn't planned to join the startup, let alone be responsible for their future under legal scrutiny. But in that moment, there was only one answer. "Deal." No hesitation. No backpedaling. Just action. When the executive left, the co-founder of the startup made a few calls, then turned to me and said, "Welcome to the team. Now... how are we going to pull this off?" On my long drive back home to Utah, I had plenty of time to think. Had I just taken on a massive responsibility I wasn't ready for? Absolutely. But stepping up to own the solution changed my career in ways I couldn't have predicted. The Takeaway: Ideas are easy, and solutions are valuable, but you must be willing to take responsibility for the fix. They come suddenly and unexpectedly, especially during breakfast in Vegas. Would love to hear from others—has there been a moment when stepping up changed your path? Or better yet, when you stumbled into one. ### How a Vegas Breakfast Changed My Career.

If you volunteer a solution, be ready to lead it—might just change your career.

I learned this lesson the hard way over breakfast in Vegas. What started as a simple meeting quickly turned into a defining moment I never saw coming.

A colleague had told me about a startup facing a major lawsuit from a big media company. They couldn't afford a lawyer, and they couldn't even get in the same room with the people suing them. Having just finished a company rollup and knowing the executive at the media company—I figured, why not? I reached out to both sides and managed to set up a meeting while we were all attending CES.

The only available time? Breakfast.

The executive from the media company came in hot, launching into a full-speed takedown of the startup's missteps before our coffee even had a chance to cool. Meanwhile, the startup team and I sat there quietly, letting him vent while awkwardly chewing our bacon.

Then, finally, a pause.

I took the opportunity to explain that, yes, the startup had made a mistake—but they had also done everything possible to fix it. Then I proposed a solution: Instead of pursuing the lawsuit, the media company could audit the startup's technical reports each month. This would provide them with valuable emerging market data while allowing the startup to stay afloat.

Silence. More bacon chewing. Then, the executive pointed his fork at me and said:

"Fine. But only if YOU oversee the reports, YOU offered the solution. YOU deliver the results."

I was completely unprepared for that curveball. I hadn't planned to join the startup, let alone be responsible for their future under legal scrutiny. But in that moment, there was only one answer.

"Deal."

No hesitation. No backpedaling. Just action.

When the executive left, the co-founder of the startup made a few calls, then turned to me and said, "Welcome to the team. Now... how are we going to pull this off?"

On my long drive back home to Utah, I had plenty of time to think. Had I just taken on a massive responsibility I wasn't ready for? Absolutely. But stepping up to own the solution changed my career in ways I couldn't have predicted.

The Takeaway: Ideas are easy, and solutions are valuable, but you must be willing to take responsibility for the fix. They come suddenly and unexpectedly, especially during breakfast in Vegas.

Would love to hear from others—has there been a moment when stepping up changed your path? Or better yet, when you stumbled into one.

Today, I saw a hilarious video of a kid eagerly grabbing a microphone but then not saying a word, going deep into thought, before handing it back. The words on the screen read "Me, realizing I have a solution to a problem at work and not speaking up because I know I'll end up leading it." Coincidental? Nope 😂 So glad you DID speak up!

Learned the term: “Freakishly Aligned” from this titan...and I’m all in! Firstly, thank you Shea M. Swenson and Sean Reyes for putting together one of the most impactful lunches in recent years. Listening to Christopher Zook speak about the manner of how his firm CAZ Investments operates their fund themes is NEXT LEVEL. Hearing Christopher describe how his team is Freakishly Aligned is not just an internal practice, it extends outwardly conjoining into their investing partners, cascading further into how people they meet, may or may not, fit their ethos, investment values and alignment. As a bonus, I also heard Christopher use a term that we echo at Gabb, “Doing Well While Doing Good.” Christopher and his team investigate what matters to humans today, then parlays that into a future of how humans will engage its themes for generations. Their thinking and execution is simply brilliant. This weekend I will finish Christopher’s co-authored book The Holy Grail of Investing and yes that’s, with Tony Robbins. The impact to me is to become as aligned in my themes within my work, as this extraordinary team has given me a glimpse of. ### Accelerate Ventures, LLC

A founding partner of Accelerate Ventures, LLC ("AV"), Isaac Jacobson's reputation in the media, retail and patent monetization space has garnered growing attention and respect nationwide. Mr. Jacobson has established AV as a rising player in the technology licensing industry, focused on representing companies whose intellectual property is solid, proven and threatened by infringement.

AV provides capital, legal, sales and licensing expertise to partner with companies lacking sufficient resources to defend themselves or who prefer to maintain a lower profile in licensing their technology. Licensees, normally averse to the "trolling" practices of others in the industry, have lauded the professionalism, preparation and integrity of AV's team as a refreshing approach that brings true value to the licensee.

Mr. Jacobson brings a wealth of executive experience and professional relationships, having assembled top tier executive teams and boards of directors for technology companies, syndicating venture capital, and buying and selling companies throughout his career. He has held executive positions with media and technology entities such as theDial.com, Digonex Technologies, MusicRebellion, Digital Kiosk Technologies, Humanizing Technologies and OpenBook.

A native of Utah who built and exited several successful ventures in Indiana and Washington, Mr. Jacobson acquired eTAGZ, Inc. from Wasatch Ventures (a DFJ Fund) in 2006 and returned to his home state. He transformed eTAGZ from a retail, media and marketing entity into a patent licensing juggernaut, setting it on a path for exceptional growth. That transition allowed Mr. Jacobson to form the critical components of what is now the AV team while amassing invaluable experience in licensing technology.

In addition to building and growing technology companies, Mr. Jacobson has ownership interests across other sectors and is currently a co-owner of the Utah Blaze of the Arena Football League.

A popular speaker and trusted advisor to power brokers the world over, he is often sought out by those in the highest ranks of business, politics and entertainment to strategize on issues ranging from investments and public policy to personal growth and bringing to market innovative ideas.

Mr. Jacobson is a father of 3 and an avid outdoorsman with an affinity for classical guitar, sports cars and planes. He is dedicated to his community, having established or served on numerous non-profit boards. He currently serves on the Utah Valley University Foundation Board as well as Co-Chairing the Snow College Foundation Board.

Easy online booking and easy pickup. However, app is buggy. Would shut down when dropping off. Had to restart it several times to finish doing a self inspection for an after hours drop off.

Hi Isaac,
Thanks for trying us out. I am a little confused, did you order sliders or normal burger, and did you ask it to be cooked well done? Our burgers are more than 1/3 lb, double or tripple of those on fast food or some others. if you can email us the detail i could try to find out why is it smaller patty. Our email is management@saltlakebgr.com

Like buying from a garage sale. Staff are agitated all the time and bought a washer, it broke, they offered no repair referral. ZERO HELP.

isaac, thanks so much for your feedback. Just a friendly reminder: Per the terms and conditions of your warranty, we're happy to repair your washer, if it is under warranty. other than that we do not fix appliances as a service. yes i am sorry we did not give you a referral the techs we know to fix appliances work here, and as stated we do not fix as a service. there maybe other appliances stores that could fix it but to be honest we dont know their business to tell you if they do that or not im sure you could look that up online hope that helps thanks again.
