Mentioned having a broken foot and its effect on her career

Maria Cristina Posada Slye's Post

Maria Cristina Posada Slye is 🌱 feeling blessed.

April 18, 2016 · 🌐

My start to 2016 was a HUGE change/personal struggle for me, just having broken my foot and living in VA with my parents. Not being able to dance, I was forced to trust the other skills God has blessed me with, and not only that, I was forced to trust that He had a plan for me. As all of you know, this audition season was RATCHET...especially if showing up at the open dance call was NOT an option for you. I was hobbling in the boot to every singer call every morning waiting all day to eventually be sent home and never get seen, it was discouraging and heartbreaking. Like I said, I could only pray and trust, that He had something planned for me.

I guess now is as good a time as ever to officially announce that I will be playing the role of Carla in the Hangar Theatre's production of In the Heights this summer! I'm absolutely thrilled to be a part of this show and cannot wait to sass it up 😄

Even beyond this blessing, I was really counting on my previous serving job once I moved back to the city (been unemployed for 4 months now, gotta make that doe), and after hearing that they wouldn't be able to take me back, I found another place to serve that I feel more at peace with! God will provide y'all... Take your worries, send them in a prayer to Him, and trust that He has something for you. I was so scared not knowing what to expect moving back to the city after 4 months of not dancing/waiting tables/auditioning, but He had something in mind for me all along, and obviously needed me to grow spiritually, and probably in other ways that I still haven't discovered yet. I just want to remind you to not fret.

Sometimes suffering is a blessing in disguise.

Example; Subject's performance was reviewed "His voice is lovely, but his presence never enters the Patinkin universe. The same could be said about the Mistress, shakily voiced by Maria Cristina Slye (Muny's Jesus Christ Superstar) who starts off well, but fades away during the beautifully crafted "Another Suitcase in Another Hall" when her emotionality should have been rising. Two Stars Rise Up to Queen Status Playing Different Types of Royalty: Tina and Evita

I never planned or imagined I would want to write about these two shows in the same review, but the parallels couldn't be erased from my head. Two musical theater stars on the rise grab hold of the spotlight, both playing true to life legends, with maybe one other musical theater legend looking on daring us not to forget about her (Yes, I'm talking about you, Patti LuPone). Each of these two leading ladies are giving it all in musicals just blocks away from one another, gifting us with a performance that will shoot them up into the Broadway star stratosphere, while each, to different degrees, are in shows that never quite match their magnificence. They are both partnered with men who do fine work, alongside an ensemble that works hard for the money, delivering those vocal and dance moves with finesse and sexy ability from very different dance world perspectives. One of the leading ladies can sing, act, and dance like no other (except for maybe the musical legend she is playing), taking us higher and higher with other (except for maybe the musical legend she is playing), taking us higher and higher with each kick, while the other, well..., two outta three ain't too bad either, and she only has LuPone to directly answer to.

This year, New York City Center is presenting Evita, the Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber masterpiece for their annual Gala Presentation. It makes complete sense, as this is an iconic musical, one loved by many, particularly the two gentlemen sitting beside me the other night. They were excited beyond belief, nonstop discussing the magnificence of the musical, a feeling I can completely understand as I've worshipped this show since I first heard a recording with Patti LuPone singing the lead so many years ago. Tweaked and reconfigured by Sammi Cannold (A.R.T.'s world premiere of Endlings), a director who seems to have made a study of the piece, the musical strides forward with an intelligent passion and commitment to the source material, bringing in different ideas and constructs that both enlighten, yet also trip it source material, bringing in different ideas and constructs that both enlighten, yet also trip it up. We see shades of the original iconic production, but overall the space seems distant, like a mausoleum, rather than a place to dance or celebrate.

Cannold splits the lead role in two, creating two parts that are representative of Evita's different moments of struggle and success, a sort of psychological struggle that forever haunts the determined mind of Argentina's most famous first lady. It's a strongly compelling internalized slant on her fortitude; one that works within the misogynistic constructs of what it takes for a woman at that time to rise and gain any sort of power, and what tools she has at her disposal. The younger 17 year old Evita slides into view of a traveling tango singer, Magaldi, portrayed by the wonderful rich Philip Hernandez (Broadway's Les Misérables), who richly envelopes the audience with his magnificent voice, He draws the young lady forward into, what will become, her pathway to power. Awkwardly directed with the insertion of a wife-like woman on Magaldi's arm, the scene of Evita and family forcing herself into the life of the tango singer doesn't seem right nor make much sense as constructed here. It's highly illogical, tango singer doesn't seem right nor make much sense as constructed here. It's highly illogical, but on that night of a thousand stars, the young Evita, weakly played by Maia Reficco (Nickelodeon's Kally's Mashup) makes her way to Argentina's capital. It's unfortunate, as Reficco doesn't have what it takes to truly inhabit the exciting "Buenos Aires" number both physically, emotionally, or vocally. The dancers surrounding her thrill, but her inclusion in the tension disturbs and distracts. Finally, though, making the switch off from young Evita (Reficco) to the true star of the evening, Solea Pfeiffer (Hollywood Bowl's West Side Story) as the adult Evita, there is a burst of joy and exuberance, as here with Pfeiffer is an Evita we can all get behind.

Pfeiffer transports Evita into the star-making vehicle that we've all been waiting for. Her voice shines as magnificently as the iconic dress that shimmers overhead in the opening scene of mourning. Even with the clumsy set, designed by Jason Sherwood (ATC's This Ain't No Disco) giving her obstacles and more obstacles to climb over to get to the front of the stage, we are mourning. Even with the clumsy set, designed by Jason Sherwood (ATC's THIS AIN'T NO DISCO) giving her obstacles and more obstacles to climb over to get to the front of the stage, we are intrigued and enveloped. The set pieces even block her face for a brief period during the beautifully performed "Don't Cry for Me Argentina", making me want to cry for her and scold the designer and director. The hovering floral arrangements made for a achingly beautiful visual for that one brief moment, surrounding her on the balcony scene, but then they got in the way as they were, one by one, raised up to the heavens before she was actually done singing that iconic song. And poor Peron, stiffly portrayed by the over enunciating Enrique Acevedo (Encores' Zorba), who has the misfortune to open Act 2 on a mostly barren stage, awkwardly speaking to the masses, but only having Che, nicely portrayed by the well voiced but somewhat too tidy Jason Gotay (Encores' Call Me Madam) to cheer him on.

It says a lot, that Gotay's Che floats about the stage not really making an impact one way or the other. My companion and I barely discussed him as we walked away from NYCC, as if he

the other. My companion and I barely discussed him as we walked away from NYCC, as if he was some afterthought and not one of the stars, and that tells you everything you need to know. He looks nothing like the rebel, and more like a clean cut Disney star joining in to help out. His voice is lovely, but his presence never enters the Patinkin universe. The same could be said about the Mistress, shakily voiced by Maria Cristina Slye (Muny's Jesus Christ Superstar) who starts off well, but fades away during the beautifully crafted "Another Suitcase in Another Hall" when her emotionality should have been rising. Pfeiffer, on the other hand, just gets better and better vocally as the show progresses. She is what makes this Evita work, and pretty much the only reason beyond the music, lyrics, and dance to see this recreation. Oddly though, she doesn't seem to have the Argentinian rhythm or heat inside her body, even as she acts up a storm with her expert vocal renditions. She's stiff in her tango moments, and spends most of her time standing, posing, and walking circles around the others in gorgeously dazzling costumes by Alejo Vietti (Encores' Hev, Look Me Over). She gifts us with her voice, but not her body (LuPone, on the other hand, seemed to ooze musical sensuality in every hip strut she made across her Evita's Broadway bow).

July 3rd is usually the toughest day of the year for me, especially if I'm away from family. I wasn't able to be with family this year, but @iam_ryanreyes made the best with it. We explored a little town called Rockport. Chapman showed little signs all day that he was with us ❤️🙏

American Repertory Theater's Evita Closes Early Due to COVID-19 Cases in the Company

BY MEG MASSERON, LOGAN CULWELL-BLOCK
JULY 30, 2023

Company of Evita (Emilio Madrid)

The American Repertory Theater production of Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice's Evita has closed early due to COVID-19 cases within the company. The production opened at the Massachusetts theatre on May 17, and was supposed to run until July 30. The production played its final performance in Massachusetts July 28.

Sammi Cannold is at the helm after staging the rock opera for New York City Center in 2019. She is the youngest female director in A.R.T.'s history. She will next take her version of Evita to Shakespeare Theatre Company in Washington, D.C., though dates for this next stop in the rainbow tour have not yet been announced, though it is likely slated for late 2023 as it's the first show of the theatre's 2023-24 season.

Shereen Pimentel (West Side Story) takes on the title role, opposite Gabriel Burrafato as Magaldi, Omar Lopez-Cepero as Che, Caesar Samayoa as Perón, and Naomi Serrano as Mistress. Sky Vaux Fuller plays Child.

"With Hal Prince's original production and ongoing research on the ground in Argentina as our north star, our phenomenal team and I will expand upon the ideas we began to explore at NYCC: examining Eva's story from a female and Argentine perspective, portraying this woman as a humanized icon, and seeing Evita's troubled teenage years as a dark, problematic backdrop lingering behind her dazzling 20s and 30s," shared Cannold in an earlier statement.

The ensemble includes Martín Almirón, Julian Alvarez, Adrienne Balducci, Leah Barsky, Bianca Bulgarelli,

PLAYBILL®

A TRUSTED THEATRE RESOURCE SINCE 1884

The ensemble includes Martín Almirón, Julian Alvarez, Adrienne Balducci, Leah Barsky, Bianca Bulgarelli, Camila Cardona, Melody Celatti, Esteban Domenichini, Rebecca Eichenberger, Sean Ewing, Nicole Fernandez-Coffaro, David Michael Garry, Eddie Gutierrez, Eric Anthony Lopez, Jonatan Lujan, Caleb Marshall-Villarreal, Ilda Mason, Jeremiah Valentino Porter, Leonay Shepherd, and Maria Cristina Posada Slye. Marissa Barragán, Mathew Bautista, Isabella Lopez, and Miguel Angel Vasquez round out the company as swings. Julieta Ortiz is the understudy for Child.

Cannold's creative team includes co-choreographers Emily Maltby and Argentine tango choreographer Valeria Solomonoff, co-choreographer Kelsey Burns, music supervisor Kristen Blodgette, associate music supervisor Michael Patrick Walker, and music director Mona Seyed-Bolorforosh. Orchestrations are by David Cullen and Andrew Lloyd Webber, based on Lloyd Webber's originals.

The production also features scenic design by Jason Sherwood, costume design by Alejo Vietti, lighting design by Bradley King, sound design by Connor Wang, and hair and wig design by Ashley Rae Callahan. Rebecca Aparicio is associate director, Claire Warden is intimacy director, and Max Rodriguez is the assistant director. Victoria Navarro is production stage manager with Derric Nolte as stage manager and Elizabeth Ramirez as assistant stage manager. Casting is by Benton Whitley and Micah Johnson-Levy of the newly established Whitley Theatrical.

The Massachusetts run will be followed by an engagement at Shakespeare Theatre Company in Washington, D.C., beginning September 5, as part of the company's 2023-24 season.

Evita, which premiered in 1976 as a two-LP concept album, features a score with music by Lloyd Webber and lyrics by Rice. Hal Prince staged both the original London and New York productions of the musical, which made stars of Elaine Paige in London and Mandy Patinkin and Patti LuPone on Broadway. The score features such tunes as "Don't Cry for Me Argentina," "Buenos Aires," "A New Argentina," "Another Suitcase in Another Hall," "I'd Be Surprisingly Good for You," and "Rainbow High." Madonna, Antonio Banderas, and Jonathan Pryce starred in a 1996 film version; Elena Roger headed the cast of the London and Broadway revivals, the latter with Ricky Martin.

Post about how she broke the 5th metatarsal bone in her left foot and was pictured with a knee scooter and her foot wrapped/bandaged; mentioned that she broke the same bone in her right foot in 2015, but this time the recovery time would be much shorter

Maria Cristina Posada Slye

August 7, 2023 · 🌐

For reasons that I will probably never know, the Lord thought it was best to even me out on both sides. If you've known me for a while, you know that I broke my 5th metatarsal on my right foot in 2015. It was one of the toughest times of my life. I was non union, and couldn't dance for 7 months. I hobbled to EPAs and waited in lines in the snow, on crutches, for hours, to never get seen. But despite all that, I had a full recovery and my career has been a blessing ever since (other than a global pandemic)!

Welp, fast forward 8 years, and I broke the same exact bone...on the left foot. However this time, by the grace of God, the recovery time will be MUCH shorter.

My spirit is low, and I'm deeply disappointed. However, I am endlessly grateful for the support of my family. I couldn't recover from this without them. I'm grateful for this quality time spent with them. If there was an award for the best parents ever, they are it. They deserve that award.

I'm grateful for my incredible partner, Ryan. His presence, love and support are getting me through.

I'm grateful for a fierce female creative team that is understanding, supportive, and values me.

And finally, I'm grateful for God. She is allowing me to still find joy, and feel hope and purpose during this much needed time of rest. I know Her plan for me is greater than I can imagine, and I have a feeling I'll be back to work in no time!

In the meantime, feel free to send me some good vibes and prayers! And any TV show/movie/book recommendations would be greatly appreciated, cause I got some time!

The past two months have been so incredibly healing, in multiple ways. Obviously the circumstances weren't my favorite 😞 But my parents have gone above and beyond taking care of me, and I'm so grateful for familia time ❤️ It was a time to rest, reflect, and grow spiritually. Its also been such a blessing to be able to dive deeper into my VoiceOver career! But this chapter has come to an end. I'm thrilled to say I'm on my way to DC to rejoin the Evita cast 🥳❤️🙏

Mentioned that every time she breaks her foot, she falls more in love with dance; people commented about how they saw her back on stage that day

Maria Cristina Posada Slye's Post

On this final day of Latiné Hispanic Heritage Month, I am honoring me! I am in awe of what my body can do, and how quickly God allowed me to recover. I am forever grateful that She blessed me with resilience, strength, and tenacity. Every time I brake my foot (LOL), I fall even more in love with dance and storytelling through movement. And by the grace of God, I get to close my favorite production doing just that! I am also eternally grateful to be a part of a supportive team that values my work, and cares for my well being. What can I say? I love my job! My body is a miracle. God is good! 🙏❤️🥰

Today marks 18 years since seeing mi hermano. While it doesn't get any easier, I'm so blessed to have familia who show up and know the perfect ways to honor and celebrate his life. Today we had a paddle out ceremony led by mi prima @lex.weinstein and his presence was definitely felt. Love you always Chapman ❤️

Rachael and I grew up dancing together. She was someone I always looked forward to seeing. Often times people made me feel like I was "too much" growing up, but never her. She always made me feel comfortable being my truest self, and I could always count on her to make me laugh! I cherished the moments we had dancing together, as well as reconnecting as adults. My birthday celebration was pretty epic this year 🥳 I got to dance the night away with some of my favorite people 🥰🥳 I celebrated my prima's graduation with lots of family 🥳 And I got to spend quality time with more Cuzzies on a beautiful beach! All this with my all time fav person God ever created, @slychica 🥳 Thanks everyone for making me feel so loved and special ❤️🙏

It feels strange to post about my career when there continues to be multiple genocides happening and a fascist takeover. While I am deeply grateful and honored to share the stage with such talented humans and revisit this role that means so much to me, it's terrifying how this story becomes more and more relevant each day. Please join me in spreading awareness, boycotting, protesting, calling your reps and speaking your mind to them, join the movement y'all.

Kai was so lovely to work with and made my dream come true w my skirt! I'm a professional dancer and need to practice w a certain style of skirt, I brought in one that was beautiful but far too big and I had a vision of making it a bit more stylish, he fully understood the assignment and transformed it perfectly!

I can't thank Joseph enough for his help, his guidance and organization helped me save about $23,000 in a year, on top of getting out of severe debt, and I still had enough to take a trip to Cuba that same year! He is patient and easy to understand. I highly recommend this man!
