Background

Method Of Discovery

Name, Location, Associates.

Summary of findings

Background and Family:

Matthew Bobbitt is a 43-year-old currently living in College Place, Washington. Subjects known family consists of wife, Shana Bobbitt; mother, Susan Bobbitt-Voth; father, Jerry Bobbitt; and children, Levi Bobbitt and Ellie Bobbitt. Tina Bobbitt and Shana Bobbitt were located as relatives of Subject, but exact relation could not be determined. Subject's social media accounts are connected to those of the related claimant, Stephen Fuchs.

Employment:

Per LinkedIn, Subject is a Creative Director at Tangent Media Group.

Social Media:

Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn, Threads, YouTube, and Pinterest were located for Subject.

Subject is currently active on social media. He has several posts regarding his model train hobby--he builds and maintains them. An article from January 2024 was located about Subject and his involvement in the Walla Walla Valley Model Railroad Club; he is pictured in videos on the club's Facebook account. Since DOI, Subject has remained active with his hobby, photography, and family. Several posts indicate that Subject has traveled and gone on outings with his family. Subject's wife is an active equestrian; she has many videos of herself and her children working with the horses, taking them for trail rides, and competing with them; no evidence has been found that Subject rides or cares for these horses. No mention of past injuries or health concerns was located on his accounts.

Photos of the aftermath of the accident were located on his Facebook account. In the post, Subject describes the incident, stating that the damage done to the vehicle was caused by being hit by a semi-truck going over 60 mph. Subject also states that he had thought his femur was broken. The accident also damaged a lot of Subject's photography equipment--post includes photos of his damaged cameras and tripod.

Property and Court Records:

No court records were located for Subject. Property information for the provided address was located; the owners are listed as Stephen and Barbara Dickerson. Indicators from Subject's background search show no bankruptcies, liens, or judgments (See File Notes).

Apparently this is the face I make when I think my femur is broken. I asked a witness to take a picture because I couldn't walk up to the front to see how bad the front was. It was about as bad as it felt.

The view from the helicopter. Not my view, but the paramedic who was nice enough to take some pictures for me so I could see it. The initial impact took place well back behind where the grey SUV is in this photo, maybe two car lengths behind the back of it. Despite being rammed into the truck in front of us, we were still propelled at least a hundred feet!

You can tell from the road markings that he didn't hit his brakes until well after he'd hit us.

Three photographs from a parade. The top photo is the same as the one in the main post, showing the blue Corvette with the man and woman. Below it are two smaller photos. The left one shows a line of cars in the parade, including a red Corvette and a silver one. The right one shows a blue Corvette driving in the parade, with a crowd of people visible in the background.

I've very intrigued with this man vs. bear discussion that's been going around. The question really has two components: Part one regards whether mankind is a more formidable predator capable of more harm than bearkind, and the answer to this one is an impressive (I think) yes; despite being many times the weight of a person, having extraordinary strength, massive teeth and huge claws, bears, nonetheless, are not more fearsome than people, for reasons that few dispute. The second part, though, is the part that seems to be tripping some up. It's a statistical question. While the first part concerns whether the potential consequences of a negative human encounter could be more severe than the potential consequences of a negative bear encounter, the full question is whether you're statically more likely to have a peaceful encounter with another human than with a bear. This is a question, I think, that has a very different answer from the answers I've seen floating around. Not to invalidate the sentiments behind so many of the well-thought-out responses... they just don't seem to be addressing what the question actually is.

Sorry, but you completely and totally missed the point on this. The whole scenario is to make a point about women's safety, specifically around men. Because the question is directed towards women, asking if we would rather meet a strange man in the woods, or a strange bear in the woods. basically what it comes down to, is that there are a lot more things worse than death that a man could do to a woman. I think it was summed up by someone saying if "I get attacked by a bear, at least I won't be questioned what I was wearing or if I lead the bear on. At least I'll be believed."

It has been three weeks since Inauguration Day. Most Americans recognize that newly elected leaders bring change. That is expected. But most Americans also expect that changes will take place in accordance with the rule of law and in an orderly manner that respects the lives of affected individuals and the work they have been asked to perform.

Instead, we see wide-scale affronts to the rule of law itself, such as attacks on constitutionally protected birthright citizenship, the dismantling of USAID and the attempts to criminalize those who support lawful programs to eliminate bias and enhance diversity.

We have seen attempts at wholesale dismantling of departments and entities created by Congress without seeking the required congressional approval to change the law. There are efforts to dismiss employees with little regard for the law and protections they merit, and social media announcements that disparage and appear to be motivated by a desire to inflame without any stated factual basis. This is chaotic. It may appeal to a few. But it is wrong. And most Americans recognize it is wrong. It is also contrary to the rule of law.

The American Bar Association supports the rule of law. That means holding governments, including our own, accountable under law. We stand for a legal process that is orderly and fair. We have consistently urged the administrations of both parties to adhere to the rule of law. We stand in that familiar place again today. And we do not stand alone. Our courts stand for the rule of law as well.

The most challenging (or should I say, the most complicated!) 6 shots of my life, but when Aaron Scott asks you to draft a script and then Dyani Rahne Turner and Jonathan Grant say they're willing to act in it, you find a way. Filming things is not remotely like it was before; I'm half blind and get looper than a drunken sailor, and even this tiny piece just about broke me...

But still, there's nothing quite like making a film:

They did not give a date when they would release it

Not sure why they don't just release it in accordance with President Trump's Executive Order

Trump's demands to Zelenskyy (the defender):

- 1) Formal apology
- 2) Give up the minerals
- 3) Hold elections even though Ukrainian law forbids it
- 4) Declare Russia as the non-aggressor
- 5) Give up all the temporarily occupied territories to Russia

Trump's demands to Putin (the aggressor):

Absolutely nothing.

This cannot be stressed enough - Trump is allied with Putin.
