Penelope Moomey just to ease your covid worries, if you do get it while you're pregnant you're breast milk will reflect that and you'll be fine and the baby will be extra fine. Definitely speak with a lawyer so you can have that on your side. A lot of times that alone will get them to stop bullshitting you. Sounds to me like they're trying to get out of paying you and being dumb. Get your sister to get you a piece of her mail with her address to prove she has one. They shouldn't need ANYTHING more than that. The next time you speak with them tell them you'd like to set up a call with them with your lawyer present.

Subject shared details about her daughter's birth Caption: So I wanted to update my Facebook family and friends since it's easier to this way without having to call everyone personally. Yesterday when they started my induction we had complications almost immediately. They lost Honey-Marie's heartbeat and I was rushed back for an emergency c-section. She was unresponsive for 20 mins. She wasn't breathing on her own and having seizures. They have her in an ice bath to help keep her from having anymore seizures. As of right now we don't know if there will be any challenges or not going forward. I personally haven't been able to see her yet but will after breakfast. I've seen pictures of her beautiful self. Sad to see her hooked up to all the different machines. Her eyes are open and she's breathing assisted with the vent. I'm doing ok considering everything I've gone through. Just trying to remain strong and focused on getting us both home. I don't plan on posting any pictures while she's in the NICU. Thank you everyone for your prayers and kind words.

Subject shared photos of her and Honey-Marie and additional details regarding her birth Caption: So I've been reluctant about posting Honey-Marie especially with all the tubes and wires they had on her. I had the most traumatic birthing experience and wouldn't wish it upon my worst enemy. Waking up from an emergency c-section and not knowing where your baby is or what happened. Not being able to hold her or see her for days afterwards. In the past 2 weeks I have learned a lot about patience and it not being about me. Many sleepless nights which are not going away anytime soon and tear filled eyes were still here. She's showing everyone she's a fighter and my little soldier pushing through. Regardless what the doctors say she'll always be my perfect little baby. We have a long bumpy road ahead of us. So with that being said... Everyone welcome Ms Honey-Marie Rose to the world. She was born on the 29th of July at 2:44 pm weighing 6lbs 11oz, almost 19inches long and we can't forget her big ole 13in noggin! She came off the vent today and hopefully we can keep it off. She's in an open crib and tolerating my breast milk through the feeding tube.

Subject posted an update about Honey-Marie Caption: I'm sure most of you have been waiting for a Honey Bee update. After a few weeks to really think and decide on a really hard decision we were faced with. Despite what some have said I decided against doing hospice/ palliative care. I couldn't bring myself to make that decision and it rest well with my soul. So with that being said we are going to go ahead with a surgery (trek & gtube) that will make it easier for us to take care of her at home. I know this decision is the harder road of the two but she deserves a shot at life. Her future is still unknown with what she can/ can't be able to do. Bringing her home comes with a whole new level of stress. Finding nurses to come in the home to help with her care and finding a reliable vehicle for us. If anyone knows of any RNs or LPNs that would be interested in working for us have them reach out to me! Finding help before she gets home will be a god send for us. If they feel I don't have enough help, I can't do it or we can't find any nurses she will be in a rehab facility for children in St Louis till nursing is set up for us at home. So we really need to find nurses before heading home. Her surgery will be as soon as Friday this week or sometime next week. They are hopeful she won't have to come home with the ventilator but still a possibility. Please keep us in your thoughts and prayers as we go forward in this adventure. Overall Honey-Marie is doing well and growing like a weed! She's over 10pounds and is smiling! We've found one of her favorite cartoons to be Bluey. She'll fight her sleep to pay attention to it.

Photo of Honey-Marie with Subject indicating she was getting surgery the next day Caption: Tomorrows the big day for my Honey-Marie. Her surgery for us, is one step closer to being able to bring her home. I can't wait to see her face with out all the tubing and being able to pick her up whenever I want. Photo of Honey-Marie sleeping, Subject discusses her seizure activity within the caption Caption: She's pooped in more ways than one after her bath today. She managed to poop all over her bed before getting in the tub! I swear this girls mission is to poop on me everytime! Also, they have upped her seizure medication because myself and a few nurses have noticed more seizure-ish movements last few days. I'm glad I spoke up yesterday. Hopefully before she goes home I can talk them into another scan and eeg just too see if there is any progression with the fluid/ injury. Other than that she's still doing amazing on her cpap settings and is continuing to grow.

Subject indicated Honey-Marie was on two antibiotics and when allowing visitors they need to be masked and sanitized. Caption: Update: She's currently getting 2 different antibiotics for an infection and blood transfusions. They believe it's Tracheitis and she does NOT have COVID thank the lord. Still scary regardless. This doesn't affect her timeline on being able to come home. With that being said when we allow visitors you will wear a mask and wash your hands & sanitize before seeing or touching her. AND NO KISSING ON HER. I don't want to live like the bubble boy but I will make sure we lower the risks of her getting sick from anyone or anything. Thank you everyone for your prayers and good thoughts we appreciate it very much.

Update post Caption: □ Update: Unfortunately Honey-Marie isn't out of the woods just yet. She's been having breakthrough seizures still after upping her maintenance dose. So it's been increased and she's undergoing a 24hr video recorded EEG to see if there is anymore breakthroughs , as well as her movements to see if any of them indicate seizure activity. Again this doesn't change or hinder her coming home just might add a few more weeks on our extended stay. Hopefully this will show what we need to see and everything will be taken care of.

Caption: Ok I know I've been talking about finding a nurse... well things are moving forward and we NEED to find a nurse. If we can't find nursing either before insurance wants to stop paying for the hospital stay and/or the medical equipment provider is strongly suggesting we have nursing she will be moved to a facility like this. Not saying it's horrible or a bad place, I just would rather her be at home with me. So please please please reach out to any of your nursing friends or family that would like a pretty easy job. We're only looking for a few days a week and I'm willing to take the night shift if it means I get my baby home. Post discussing what at home care will look like for Honey-Marie and the help Subject needs Caption: After having a sit down with the doctor and discharge nurse kinda looking at our plans and deciding what steps are needed moving forward a schedule is needed with a nurse and care partners. They are worried I won't get adequate sleep/ rest to be able to handle everything. Frankly they are right and know more about this whole situation than me(not saying I couldn't do it). So with that being said, I'm going to basically take the night shift with baby girl because realistically I'm not going to be able to sleep at night. I will need the very minimum of 8hrs a day to be able to sleep covered by a nurse or a care partner. I know a lot of you said you would help and I do have a few caregivers already willing. I'm basically asking and this would almost be a commitment type thing until we can't get full time nursing, who is willing to learn trach care/ gtube feeding / Trach CPR to be able to sit with Honey-Marie so I can get my rest? In order for everyone to feel comfortable enough with her going home with out full time nursing a schedule has to be set in place. So let's jump this hurdle and show them the village that's behind our girl! Let's get her home. I'm attaching 2 nursing agencies information that are aware of us. If you are a nurse RN/ LPN and want to help reach out to them to find out the info for pay and whatever else. Hey Mandy Keathley! So we will be working with a nursing agency for the employment part. You can contact one of the two up there that is aware of us and recruiting for Honey's care. As of right now I'm pretty open and flexible with the hours. Once our waiver is approved I'll know more about what hours we will be required to fill with nursing.

The screenshot shows a Facebook video player interface. The video content is a close-up of a woman with glasses and a blue surgical mask pulled down to her chin. She is wearing a white hoodie with red text. The video player includes a progress bar at the bottom left showing 0:01 / 0:19. To the right of the video is the Facebook post interface, showing the user profile for Penelope Moomey (October 28, 2022), 39 likes, 18 comments, and 320 shares. The comment section contains several replies, including one from Rhonda Whitlow with a giphy image of a woman drinking from a mug.

Subject shared their need for at home nurses to help with her daughter's care Caption: Please please please share!!! We really need nursing and ASAP. I just received 2 letters from the insurance stating they are not covering Honey-Marie's care from November 1st going forward. So that being said if we don't pull these nurses out of thin air she will be transferred to Rankenjordan. I'm not sure when for sure but this is what I was trying to avoid. So please share with all your nursing friends RN and LPNs. Please help this stressed out mamma get her little girl home where she belongs!!!

Caption: So, as I've said before I'll say it again; I'm happy I've stuck to it & they gave Honey-Marie another MRI. In doing so they found something that I knew in my heart would be a chapter in our lives and I'm glad I'm being heard! She's having another follow up MRI today & we will meet with a neurosurgeon in couple weeks following discharge. She will have a shunt placed either before the end of year or at the beginning. With her condition and her brain slowly deteriorating, as it does her brain replaces the dead tissue with fluid. Which is causing her head to grow more rapidly and making seizures more frequent. This does NOT hinder us from coming home Monday. It's just another speed bump in our journey and getting Honey-Marie where she needs to be. So please continue to keep us in your thoughts and prayers. This little girl is definitely a trooper!

Subject shared having a difficult night due to Honey-Marie having a "bradycardia event" Caption: Last night was hard and not for the weak of mind. Honey had a bradycardia event and I woke up, reacted like I've been doing this for years. It took almost a full minute to get her back to where her heart rate and oxygen should be. I didn't even freak out like I figured I would. So yes I'm a little emotional today after the fact. This little girl is going to end up giving me a heart attack. She's fine though and I'll be ok. Last night was hard and not for the weak of mind.

Honey had a bradycardia event and I woke up, reacted like I've been doing this for years. It took almost a full minute to get her back to where her heart rate and oxygen should be. I didn't even freak out like I figured I would. So yes I'm a little emotional today after the fact. This little girl is going to end up giving me a heart attack. She's fine though and I'll be ok. Just venting and letting y'all in on our journey, the good and the bad.

It's okay to vent
I'm so proud of you
Takes me back to when Terra had Tuff she picked up the reins and did what she had to for her son and you lady remind me of her you are a strong individual
But just remember like I tell her don't push yourself to hard Honey needs you to be healthy so make sure to take care of yourself as well

Subject shared that Honey-Marie is being admitted to PICU. Caption: So we're being admitted to the Picu. We were never supposed to be released Saturday. Photos of Honey-Marie in the hospital with the caption indicating she was getting a "24hr EEG" Caption: 24hr EEG tonight to make sure we aren't missing any break through seizures. She's looking better but still not feeling 100% herself yet. I did manage to get a smooch and a smirk so I'll take it. She looks adorable in her gauze turban ☐ Hoping we can get some answers from this and get some peace of mind.

Subject shared that she was struggling with her mental health Caption: I don't know why but today has just took a huge toll on my mental health. I feel like a complete wreck and just find myself crying. So many emotions and thoughts running rampant. Sadly they are more common for me but today is just heavy. The uncertainty of everything in my day to day life, to what the future holds for Honey-Marie. I try to stay positive, upbeat about our situation but in all reality I feel like I cause myself more mental anguish than anyone can really imagine. Until you're going through what we're going through you'll never truly understand how it feels or is. I know I need to find a good therapist to help cope with everything. It's just hard trying to find the time for myself when my whole world is centered around someone else's well being. I guess what I'm trying to get at is be mindful of others. Even though you might not see their struggles or they seem to be upbeat secretly they are struggling. Struggling to get up, to find a purpose and to just be present. Be kind and be patient.

Post indicating Honey-Marie was discharge from the hospital and was on minimal oxygen and new medications
Caption: My Christmas present came right on time this year. Honey-Marie is on her way home for her first Christmas!!! ☺☺ We're coming home on oxygen but it's such a minimal amount that we believe we can have her weaned. Then it'll just be for emergencies or when she gets sick/ requires it. During our stint in the ICU we found out something that maybe happening and causing some disruptions."Neuro Storms". She's trying out a new medication to help with them. So far it's been showing improvement in some areas! Hoping we can help calm her storms and keep her comfy. We are not expecting any visitors till after the first of the year. The ones who we do see daily will be wearing masks and following good hand washing. Keeping Honey-Marie healthy and home is my main focus. I'm just so happy to actually have my baby home and healthy. Merry Christmas everyone and Happy Holidays!!

Subject indicated needing to re-home her dog due to behavioral issues since having her daughter
Caption: I have a very hard situation I have to deal with, my bigger dog is feeling neglected since my daughter being home. He's acting out and doing things out of character. I believe in Honey-Marie's best interest at the end of the day im going to have to rehome him. He's being too unpredictable and I can't have a dog like that around a child let alone a child with special needs. It hurts my soul making this but I'd rather be smart/safe before something happened worse. So if anyone is looking for a dog. . . he's a 4yr unaltered Chinese Sharpei. I have papers for him but never registered them. He does well with cats and very timid to people. He doesn't do well with other dogs.

Photos of Honey-Marie with the caption providing an update on her Caption: Update: Doc was pleased with how she looks and is happy she's off the oxygen. We're only using as needed. We are a little concerned with her head circumference. Her head is growing a little faster than we'd thought. So hopefully we can get back into Nuero Surgery and get everything taken care of! Off to the doctor for a follow up! Ms Honey-Marie is wearing a new outfit she got from Christmas, which is an 18month!! How can this little girl be in 18month clothing at 5months! My little chunk is growing so fast! She was really mad ☹️ in the second picture from after her bath and trach care.

Those are INSANE prices for something that improves/helps with her day to day! Insurance should ABSOLUTELY cover this. I despise american healthcare. Ill keep an eye out and ask around!!! Maybe if you called a church or daycare, they can help or maybe have one extra they could sell/give to you. I worked at First Academy for years and we had a special needs kids room and they had tons of different floor sitters, the roly chairs, etc.

Post from Subject about Honey-Marie's hearing test Caption: 3 hours later... we're headed home! We still have to come back for another hearing exam to finalize everything. With how severe her brain damage is they have to slow the tones down significantly and measure her response time to determine everything. So far there is a HUGE possibility of having hearing aides. She does have some hearing but also a quite a bit of loss mainly in the mid to higher tones. Regardless of it all I'm just wanting the best for her and if hearing aides are the avenue we are directed down... bring 'em on! I'm ready for my baby to actually hear us fully!! Next huge hurdle is going to be her eyes...

Subject shared needing to purchase a medical stroller due to insurance not being able to cover it Caption: Looking for a medical stroller similar to these. Sadly insurance won't approve us for one until she's 3 or has a CP diagnosis. I have been warned that even if approved it'll still take months to get. So we are looking for one to make doctor visits and just being able to get out & about easier for us. If anyone has any leads or suggestions please reach out to me! Caption: ☐ Honey-Marie update: As of right now we are not getting a shunt. Since she has maintained head circumference & weight in the 100th percentile, plus the scans are actually showing some movement of the fluid we aren't going to rush into surgery. We are going to get a consult with an eye doctor down at Children's. Just to make sure we're not missing anything and to be certain there's no fluid/ pressure building up behind her eyes. We're also getting a consult for a helmet since her heads a tad bit heavier than most, she doesn't have a lot of head control at the moment. We're trying to stay ahead of everything and keep her on the right path. Trying to make sure her head shape doesn't get too flat on certain sides. So no bad news yet and if anything I say it's a step in the right direction. I also just want to reiterate, which the doctor did the same today with us... Honey-Marie may never speak, she may never walk, she may never be able to feed herself or be able to be weaned from the vent or trach. Everything depends on her brains development and what her body allows her. Either way, regardless of everything I'm still happy I made the choices I made and I have my little girl at home with me everyday. Everyday is a new day, we're going to appreciate what we have and not dwell on the things we can't change. I can't predict the future and instead of worrying too much about what could, will or won't happen we're just thankful for the moments we do get to cherish. I haven't lost hope or faith that my miracle will prove everyone wrong. Just going to celebrate a little harder on the progress regardless of what.

Just because she carries it well doesn't mean it ain't heavy.

I've seen first hand the type of mother you are. Incredibly attuned to your child's cues, selfless, devoted.

You give it your all, every single day. Of course you're exhausted! Parenting children without additional needs can be overwhelming enough. Having learning curves to work around for the both of you is HARD. You're not any less of an amazing mother for being overwhelmed, frustrated, even angry. Even if you feel a disconnect, I know your love for your daughter is endless. After the trauma you have experienced, I'd be shocked if you haven't had mental leaps to overcome.

There is a lot of uncertainty, but all you can do is take it as it comes and cry, yell, scream, do ANYTHING you need to do to let it all out. Youre a wonderful Mom. The things you're feeling don't make that any less true. ❤️

Caption: Major HONEY BEE update..., Guess what this little has been doing?!? She's rolling from side to belly, back to side, and now likes to roll to where she's almost off the bed!!!! I was told she might never do this and many other things. Well the devil is a lie and this little girl is going to prove everyone wrong! Scariest moment of the year is looking over and seeing your daughter, the one who doesn't have large range of motion or basic control of her body rolling out of the crib. Looks like the rails in the front will be going back up. I am beyond excited and honestly I knew she'd thrive in her own way! Go baby Go! She's definitely showing out this month and I'm all for it. I'll always be her biggest cheerleader!!!

Major HONEY BEE update...

Guess what this little 🐝 has been doing?!?

She's rolling from side to belly, back to side, and now likes to roll to where she's almost off the bed!!!! I was told she might never do this and many other things. Well the devil is a lie and this little girl is going to prove everyone wrong!

Subject indicates having issues getting resources for her daughter due to where she lives Caption: I love living somewhat in the country and out the way but I SERIOUSLY HATE LIVING HERE when I get turned down for any resources or help for my daughter because I don't live in Taylorville or Sangamon/Macon counties. Called habitat for assistance for the wheelchair ramp... won't help don't live in the county I was referred to United Way in Taylorville. Well they don't physically help but fund a church program that would/ does. So I call Davis Memorial... they don't help anyone outside of Taylorville..... Well who the hell am I supposed to call then. We're using DSCC for a generator so I'm not trying to exhaust all of our funding the first year when we're allotted a certain amount for 5 years at a time. I want to throw my phone through the wall!! There's all these amazing programs but nothing for families living in rural areas. I feel like I'm beating my head against the wall with everything on a daily basis.... Ughhhhhhhh

Honey Bee

On July 29, 2022 at 2:44pm my niece Penelope gave birth to her daughter Honey Marie after a relatively uneventful pregnancy. Honey was born unresponsive and without adequate blood/oxygen flow to her brain for 20 minutes. She had to be resuscitated at birth. Honey then started having convulsions/seizures due to trauma. She was placed in a cooling blanket for 72 hrs immediately following birth in an effort to slow down/stop anymore brain damage from occurring.

She has since been diagnosed with HIE (Hypoxic Ischemic Encephalopathy) and severe brain damage with diffuse brain atrophy. Honey doesn't have the ability to protect her airways so a tracheostomy was placed for using a ventilator due to her lack of a gag/suck/swallow reflex. Which also means Honey does have a g-tube for feedings.

See all ☆ See top

The portion of Honey's brain that was damaged has replaced itself with fluid causing hydrocephalus. Going forward she will have a shunt placed to help drain the excess fluid that is building up. We also expect a cerebral palsy diagnosis by age two. Honey will need specialized equipment to help her have an adequate quality of life.

My niece Penelope is sole caregiver and provider, which is a full time job. Penelope is currently living off of her army disability pension which just covers their basics living expenses. And with all of Honey's medical conditions she is unable to go to work. All the extra out of pocket/outside of insurance is beyond difficult. Things like: A van that can safely transport Honey and all her equipment safely to and from appointments. (A wheelchair accessible van will eventually be needed due to the reality of future wheelchair use), A ramp or lift installed at home. (My niece has tried most every local church in our area. Unfortunately as she lives in a rural area instead of city proper she has been turned down) So absolutely anything is a blessing and be greatly appreciated.

April is HIE awareness month and up until last July I've never once heard of it. Now we live it everyday! Honey-Marie is a living testament to what "HOPE" means.

My "HIEro"

HIE
Hypoxic Ischemic Encephalopathy

Hypoxia
Decreased oxygen to the brain, either due to decreased blood volume or decreased oxygen in the blood.

Ischemia

Encephalopathy
A broad term that describes a brain disease that alters brain function or structure. In this case, the lack of oxygen causes brain damage.

HIE occurs when a baby's brain does not get enough oxygen. Something happens that interrupts the blood flow and/or oxygen supply to the brain and causes brain damage. Cerebral palsy, seizures, cognitive disabilities all can be caused by HIE.

Subject shared that Honey-Marie needs a shunt placement, due to the fluid in her brain increasing Caption: Ok, so I'm posting here first so everyone gets the same information at the same time. After our appointment with Neurosurgery, we've been told a shunt is required and is something that needs to be done within the next month or so. The fluid in her brain has almost doubled in size since her last scan in December and is showing signs that it could be troublesome for Honey-Marie before we know it. We have an attentive date, which will be May 4th as long as everything works out persurgery wise and logistics. Keep us in your prayers because this mamma is stressed!

Subject shared that Honey-Marie was diagnosed with Cerebral Palsy Caption: Honey ☐ update from today's long adventure; We now have a Cerebral Palsy diagnosis! I know crazy I'm excited about a diagnosis but by just having that opens so many doors for resources! Another new medication to help with her dystonia and neurostorms. ALSO we got fitted today for our wheelchair, stander, AFOs(which are leg and wrist braces) and our bath chair all ordered today. She got X-rays of her hips and met so many new providers that were exactly what we were hoping for! We're still waiting on our surgery date. Overall St Louis Childrens has been truly amazing. Update on Honey-Marie after her shunt placement surgery Caption: Everything is going so well for Honey-Marie recovery wise. Already tolerating full feeds and her bowels are moving. The only thing that would stop us from coming home tomorrow would be that the shunt is working too well and is draining too fast. Which could cause her brain to practically collapse on itself. So a quick (5min) MRI in the morning to confirm everything is draining properly and after that we will be IL bound. I'm not sure about Honey but momma is ready for her king size bed. Can't forget all the cuddles from my four-legged babies... Thank you everyone again for keep us in your prayers and checking in on us.

Photos of Honey-Marie and an update about her Caption: Neurosurgeon cleared her today. Helmet gets made soon. AFOs and braces were approved & being made. Possibly getting a ramp soon(someone's coming Sunday to measure and take pictures). The new car seat is a lifesaver. Doctor was impressed with how alert she was today and the fact she's been more vocal overall. All in all a great day. Also I can't get over how big she looks and the fact she's in a 2T.

Caption: Crazy to think we're already talking about puberty in a 10month old. Our brains are an amazing organ but this is crazy to even think about. Glad we caught it and getting it all figured out/ under control. X-rays and labs for Honey. We have been through so many things that nothing surprises me anymore. I really feel like I'm in an alternate timeline.

Honey-Marie was admitted to the hospital Caption: I hate I have to make this post but... Honey-Marie is being admitted into the hospital today after our CP visit at Children's. Nothing too overly concerning at the moment. I expressed concerns with possible seizures/ more uncontrolled movements. Just so happened she had one of these episodes in front of the doctor (which I'm extremely happy she did) and with this being her first time meeting Honey she believes having her admitted would be for the best. We're hoping to get a 24hr eeg with hopes it does catch these episodes and we actually know for sure what's going on. Absolutely not what we had planned today but whatever keeps her healthy, I'm all about. Hoping it's just her "ticks" and just what her/ her brain does.... Rather than seizures so we can wean from the big meds we're on and to get just some sort of answers. Keep us in your thoughts and prayers && hopefully we'll be home tomorrow with answers!

Subject indicated her and Honey-Marie were home from the hospital Caption: Honey-Bee Update: We ARE home and we have answers. I was right about the increase in meds and that we were actually catching real seizures not the storms. We now have a whole neurological team of doctors helping manage her seizures and tone. I am so pleased with how we were treated and the care Honey received as usual from St Louis Childrens Hospital. Long term is to manage the seizures and hopefully not have anymore like we have been. We got a few new diagnosis which is nothing nobody ever wants but we have answers. Tonight sadly for me is another long one just to watch for any crazy episodes. She's knocked out snoring away in her bed. THANK YOU EVERYONE for your positive thoughts and prayers, you guys rock! I'm glad I have you all behind us!

Update on Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: We will be staying in the ICU for another night at the very least and then moved to a floor room. She's still in tachycardia and has only been able to bring her heart rate down for a few. Still negative so far for all viruses, which is usually our tell for tachycardia. Her seizure medication has been upped by 60% which seem to have helped stop the clusters of seizures she was having. She's where she needs to be is all I keep telling myself. Thank you guys for the support. We will get through this and hopefully be home sooner than later.

Update on Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: Of course I'd speak too soon. Honey is still doing fine recovering from our big week adventure. She did test positive for Pseudomonas, which she has had before and will always have colonized in her trach. They are still going to treat it regardless with IV antibiotics. Her heart rate is still down and out of tachycardia thankfully. Now they're worried about a vent setting dealing with her co2 output. Possible settings may have to be adjusted depending on how tonight goes. Spoke with our night team earlier and basically we're playing it day by day. Still hoping for tomorrow but if she needs to be here that's where we will stay. We love you guys and ready to be home!

I am so mentally exhausted from just my day to day life that I can't take much more. I don't care how much someone fakes that they help , they don't. I am the sole caregiver of my daughter and I do it all. I do have nurses from time to time. I cannot leave the home to work to be able to ease some of the stresses that I have and I can't work from home. Just because of the possibility of an emergency arising or the possibility of not having nursing that day. I don't have a reliable means of transportation and it's a fight with everyone just to arrange the simplest of things. I get into the situation of if they do it I can only do it the way they think is best and usually their way has no thought of how it affects my daughter. She has severe sensory issues and the slightest of discomfort or new things can trigger seizures or irritability. Which I try to avoid because I want her to be as happy and comfortable at all times. She deserves it just like anyone else. But the fact I have to beg for respect and help from the ones who were yelling from the mountains that they had my back and would make sure everything would be ok is so tiring. I have enough on my mind and my plate that I shouldn't have to worry about the simplest of things. Then you see these same people treating their other family members so differently than you and your child... the fact that you make time to actually spend with them and can't sit with mine no longer than 5mins is crazy to me. I struggle with so much and I smile everyday. I smile because I have my daughter and I can get through. I'll soldier through and make a way.... But I'm at my whits end. My mental health is taking the biggest hit right now and im trying. Im trying to remain strong and resilient as I can. I'm tired of being everyone's kick around and sad story. I'm not asking for money I'm not asking for really anything just support. Where's my lean to? Who can I lean on? When everyone either looks at you like a meal ticket or a problem.... I'm just done with this week. I'm done with people. I knew going down this road was going to be hard but I was reassured by everyone, close family, friends I wouldn't be alone.... But I am. I struggle daily just to make shit happen and work. I don't regret the decision I've made I'm just disappointed in the "support group" that I have. At the end of the day when a stranger would do more for you without a question... things have to change. My baby needs me at my mental best and I'm struggling.

Go take a hot shower and cry you'll feel better. Then tell yourself to pull up your big girl panties and face this head on. It's normal to feel overwhelmed with a baby and Honey is more difficult because of her medical needs. Learn to count on no o e and you won't be disappointed. Mindy Remmert my big girl panties have been pulled so far up my ass I have a camel toe. At this point I'm going to get a yeast infection if I pull them up anymore. I don't rely or count on anyone for anything because they always show or do the complete opposite. I'm simply trying to clear my mind and Facebook got it today instead of me screaming at people. I'll always push on crying , smiling whatever because I'm not going to let that little girl fall short anywhere, I have made so many sacrifices to be able to do for her the way I do. And in doing so made me realize if this would have been anyone else they wouldn't of done it because everyone is so selfish. ...

There are no words to make things better, and I cannot even begin to imagine your day to day. That little girl knows she has a momma that will do anything for her. Being mentally exhausted is understandable and sometimes it gets the best of us. You know I pray for you all the time and know that you will come out on top. God is on your side. Honey has the best momma out there, God hasn't brought you this far to give up on you and he never will. I can sit here and sugar coat and fill you with words you want to hear but that's not what you need. I may be far away but if you just need a listening ear I am here. Hugs. ...

POSTPARTUM RAGE

WHAT YOU SEE

WHAT YOU DON'T SEE

 Momwell

Poster based in Canada · July 29, 2020 · 🌐

Anger is a distress signal.

Anger in the postpartum period is a red flag that is being overlooked and misunderstood.

Studies have shown that moms struggling with PPA/PPA are more likely to have symptoms of rage.

This rage is often intense, hard to control and feels very uncharacteristic.

"Anger is indeed a normal emotion that we can all have, but being prone to anger can indicate there's something going on that needs to change." She [Christine Ou] adds that there is some evidence that shows that if a woman is both angry and depressed, the depression can last longer and be more intense.

The things that moms are angry about postpartum aren't earth-shattering. Some feel trapped or helpless as they shoulder so many new responsibilities caring for a new baby while their own needs are left unfulfilled. Others find the reality of motherhood and the supports they receive don't live up to their expectations. And many feel guilty that they aren't the picture of the idealized self-sacrificing mother that's upheld in our society.

What's more surprising is that no one's thought to look at anger as a red flag for postpartum mood disorders sooner. Ou has a theory as to why it has been overlooked: "Culturally, we often aren't comfortable with the emotion of anger because it can imply that you're not in control—especially for women." And women who've just had babies are expected to be particularly blissful.

If you are struggling with postpartum rage please visit @postpartumsupportinternational. They have several resources and a directory that can help you find a maternal mental health provider in your area.

Have h tried getting honey bee a bed like dezi?! I'm sure it will go through insurance pretty quickly. They bring it and assemble it. It's just like a hospital bed. It lifts up and it's very safe and secure!!!

I haven't thought about that. My main focus has been getting this bathroom fixed. I'm tired of bathing her in the dinning room. It's not fair to her and she's getting so big it's not going to be such an easy task in the dining room anymore.

Looks wonderful. Putting together, for you, piece of cake. Maybe with a few curse words thrown in ❤️ BUT. Apply for medical bed!!! Won't take long for this bed to break your back! Need to be able to lift bed to waist height (more or less) to turn or change then be able to put low in case she ❤️ moves herself to edge. (Shit happens) siderails are not a restraint. They are for positioning and safety. Thank me for the advise in 20 yrs ❤️ ...

Tamara Moomey the bedframe sits itself 16inches tall not including bed which itself 12inches thick. Plus her multiple positioning pillows and other things it will be fine for the time being. The bed is lifting and we do have rails. This will be fitting for the moment. When the time comes for a more advanced bed then we'll talk with insurance and doctors about what's fitting. ...

Jeez- I know it's a highly specialized piece of equipment, but it looks like they could make one that would grow with the child- at least a couple of sizes. She might be grown out of the next one by the time you get it!

Sue Hogge that's the idea of it. They don't ever anticipate her being as big as she is and when I tell them they think I'm telling a fishing tale.

Sue Hogge when that man left yesterday he was sweating, cussing and was just perturbed by the fact she didn't fit. 🤔 not my fault. I warned them and was reassured when she was remeasured everything would fit. This thing should grow with her till she's at least 5ish!!

Honey-Marie pictured in a car seat with the caption discussing her eyesight Caption: So we found out today that Honey-Marie is severely nearsighted and they really don't know to what extent. She got a glasses prescription to start with to see if she can better interact within her world. She can only see possibly 3-4ft in front of her fingers crossed ☹️ these will be a step in the right way. She also has a muscle deviation in her eyes which make her seem to be always looking right. 6month follow up and if it doesn't get better she'll have an outpatient surgery to fix the deviation. She also weighed in a whopping 36.6 pounds and she's 2ft 8in tall.

Penelope Moomey don't worry mama she'll get there she's beautiful she's smart she's strong determined she'll get there just mild steppingstones just like you said and I don't care. You may take three steps forward and 18 steps backwards but those 18 steps backwards she's already learned three of the steps, so she just gotta take 15 more steps to get where she needs to be, it's back-and-forth all the time and you are strong individual and I am super proud of you

Caption: Unfortunately, our recent audiology appointment did not yield positive results. Honey-Marie has been diagnosed with profound hearing loss, previously thought to be mild/moderate. Our next step is to undergo an ABR hearing test, with sedation, to ensure everything is functioning properly and to understand how sound is relayed to her. Depending on the results of that test we'll know more as to maybe an implant and what the future will look like for her.

Post about Honey-Marie being admitted to the PICU Caption: Honey ☐ has been admitted to the PICU. She's receiving IV antibiotics to help kick this viruses butt that's caught a ride with the influenza. Her fevers have still be spiking, the highest 104. She's been put on oxygen to help with her work of breathing to give her a crutch. So her little self can try to rest without working so hard. Waiting for the cultures and blood work up to come back to see if tapping her shunt will have to be done. I have faith that they won't have to and they have things figured out. Keep her in your prayers. We're looking at 3day stay minimum at the very least.

Post about Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: No new changes with Honey-Marie. She's back on oxygen and can't seem to keep the fevers away. Started a new antibiotic hoping it'll will start helping her feel better sooner than later. They also started on a Shakey Vest (CPT) along with her cough assist to hopefully shake that mucus and help move it out easier. My assumptions is we won't be out of here till next week and it all depends on how she feels. Keep those prayers coming. I'm ready to see her happy and in better shape! I hate watching her struggle and not feel good.

Update on Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: Sadly Honey-Marie took a turn for the worse. She's starting to develop pneumonia and was put on the hospitals vent on a rate with more oxygen. Her fever isn't coming down as fast as they would like and she's been having more seizure activity. She's going to be sedated to help give her body some rest while she's trying to recover as well as some other meds to help control the seizures. Poor girl has been stuck so many times trying to get a new IV in since the other gave out. She's still hanging in there and surprisingly blew me some kisses before making everyone run for their money. I'm hoping things will turn back around and we'll be back on the right track.

Update on Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: Happy Mother's Day to all the beautiful women out there. Not the ideal place I want to be to spend it but atleast I'm with my baby girl. A little bit of an update: Day 7.. She's still having some issues with high temps/ high heart rates/ high blood pressures. Which is making it hard to differentiate between what's a neuro storm and what's actually her feverish from the virus. Medication has been managing everything pretty good when needed so that's a plus. Pulmonary wise her lungs are sounding more and more healthier as the days go with all her treatments she's been receiving which is also going in the right direction. Her secretions are also getting easier to manage and has slowed down quite significantly. She doesn't sound like she's drowning in her own fluids!! Yay! Since switching her antibiotics today will mark day 4(?) which she will have to remain on for the minimum of 10days. She's getting more labs ran to just check the trends and her levels. She was low in some things but extra fluids/ meds are going to be added to help raise our lower levels back to normal. She is on a continuous feed so that way the acid in her stomach isn't eating her lining and the medication isn't doing any damage. Overall she's been pretty sedated and hasn't been very awake. BUT when she is I'm getting kisses ☺ blown and she's sticking her TONGUE out at me!! (Something she just started but I'll take it!) Before she'll be able to be released she'll have to be weaned back to her home ventilator settings and be on her ventilator comfortable for a few days before we get the ok to leave. With that being said I believe we will be here a minimum of 2 more weeks after today. So with that being said if anyone would like to help me get my garden in ??? Please reach out to me!! I'm slacking and I was really hoping to get it in before now! We love you all and thank you for your continuing support & prayers.

Caption: Somethings I'll never understand or fathom how it happened. I'll get through and over it... but you lose respect and trust for the individuals you should be able to. Especially ones with so much education and knowledge behind the decisions made for your children's health. Always, ALWAYS speak up for your child when you think something is wrong! Just because you don't have those 8years of schooling or any training in the medical field doesn't change the fact YOU personally know your child. Ask questions! Make them listen to you! With that being said Honey-Marie and myself are waiting for transport to be transported to Children's in St Louis. Everything is fine and she'll be good, we just believe her care would be better managed and I'll feel completely comfortable with the care for her Specialist/ Care team.

Update on Honey-Marie Caption: With all that's happened, please bear with me if my responses are slower than usual. I'm doing my best to cope with stress and anxiety, which has been overwhelming. My priority is to be present for Honey-Marie. If there are any updates or changes I'll post here for the family. She's had a rough couple of night just trying to manage her seizures and storms. She's been on a continuous EEG and it has caught everything I've been describing, plus more! Trying to figure out which is what and what's the best treatment. We haven't had any extremely high temps and that's a plus. Which those high temps were expected to be from a medication which she's no longer taking at this time. I am so thankful for the nurses and doctors here at Children's. We have found out more in 2 days than the 9day stint in Springfield. Not sure when we'll be coming home. Just keep us in your prayers and send all the good healing vibes our way. Again I love you all and I apologize for not responding to everyone. It's just been one hell of a rollercoaster of emotions again and I know now when I need to stop recollect and focus. ❤️❤️🙏

Post providing an update on Honey-Marie's condition Caption: ☐ Honey-Marie update: So the EEG did have significant findings and will help us determine our plan of action going forward. She is having seizures that last 3-10seconds that doesn't seem to interfere with her daily life. They don't fully come through to her body for us to see. Also, she has what is called dystonia. Dystonia is an involuntary muscle contractions that cause repetitive or twisting movements. Dystonia may affect one or more parts of the body, and sometimes the entire body. The condition can be mild or severe. The main symptom is involuntary muscle contractions that result in slow repetitive movements, cramps, or abnormal posture. Which is what we were seeing when her fevers, temps and heart rates were spiking. She will have a new medication for that in hopes it will help calm her on the inside. She will remain inpatient at Children's for the next 2 weeks (?) so they can monitor her and make sure everything is going as planned. One thing that has been making all this difficult is the toll her body has taken from the virus. Her absorption through her tummy and digestive system isn't functioning as it should, it's just moving slow or not absorbing anything. We are being told that in time it will get better it's just something we have to let run it's course and see what she could benefit from to help her through. Which is another reason why we will remain here for observation. She is still on the hospital's ventilator with a rate just because they are trialing medication/ type of medication she's being given. Once things seem to settle out more she'll be put back on her home vent and weaned back to our home settings. Overall I am please to say we are finally on the road to recovery and found out a lot about what she needs to help her thrive. I am ver, very thankful for the doctors and nurses here for taking the upmost amazing care of her. Crazy the EEG we had at the previous hospital showed no signs of activity but here did. She was having the same symptoms and episodes as here so it makes you wonder.... Regardless we're in a better spot and is being cared for. Sorry for the long post I just want to make sure I explain it and everyone is all on the same page. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for ALL the support and prayers. ♥

Chasidy Warnick Gabapentin is what they are going to try. Right now she's on a mixture just to try and break the dystonia. She's been in this episode since we got admitted in Springfield so they are rotating out Tylenol, toradol, Dex (which she's on continuous) Valium and Propranolol last line. Poor girl isn't absorbing anything correctly so everything is only working short term rather than how it should. ...

Our primary called and told us she's aware of what happened and so is all our other providers. So hopefully something will be done and new policies will be in place so something like that would never happen to anyone else. Caption: Baby girl keeps showing them how strong she is! She's starting to be her sassy self again. Trying to roll over and away from the nurses tonight when they were trying to mess with her. Then respiratory had to come in and fill her cuff a tad bit more because she's vocalizing around the cuff! She's setting all the alarms off and yelling at them. She's now settled and snoring. Blessed to have one resilient little girl. ♥

Update post on Honey-Marie during her hospital stay Caption: Just wanted to give a quick update for Honey-Marie: They tried taking her off the hospitals servo and onto the home vent... didn't work to well for her yesterday. they're going to try to get her back to home settings and hopefully try again either later today or tomorrow. Her feeds are getting bumped up so she's handling her food well. She's still positive for parainfluenza but is just a residual positive. She's clinically ok minus the new bug she's caught. Which it's just Pseudomonas and it's something a quick round of antibiotics will fix. If she can get back to her home vent there's a HUGE possibility of being able to go home earlier in the week rather than later. So fingers crossed and praying everything goes well that we get to come home. Her Mini dog is heartbroken and missing her baby. All in all we're on the right road and things are looking up for us.

Subject indicated wanting to go to nursing school Caption: Ok nursing friends... I'm going to take a huge leap. I want to go into nursing school. Solely for my daughters benefit and for me to gain more knowledge to help us on our journey. These last few weeks of quiet within our storm has really made me realize maybe this is my calling. I'm always elbows deep with the nurses and doctors when we're in the hospital always asking questions, asking if I can help assist and just watch with all the different procedures/ testing that we've gone through. These last 2 years have pushed me into being a better human and why not push myself even more. So with that being said... I think Im going to start looking into LPN schooling just to get my foot in the door and go from there! Which program is better? What are your experiences? Help your girl out!

Video of Honey-Marie laying in a hospital bed Caption: Someone is feeling a whole lot better! She's talking to her suite mate in this video. Funny story I cannot not do her trach change. The nurse was like step back and let us do it. You deserve a break.... Well Ms Honey-Marie started screaming and crying as soon as I stepped back. I mean a cry I have never ever heard her wail before. Made my heart tear a bit but was so reassuring that she knows her momma is her safest place. I will always be here for her and she knows more than anyone! ♥

Subject shared her Amazon wish list for items for her daughter Caption: Just wanted to make a formal post about Honey-Marie's 2nd Birthday Party. We're going to combine it with her cousin Harper, who's celebrating her 9th on the 7th of this month as well. On July 21st around 3 we're gonna celebrate another amazing year for these two girls! It's going to be at my house on the curve. Family and friends come out and celebrate! We'll have some sort of sandwich, chips and dip and cake/ ice cream. Also I have linked Honey's Amazon wishlist for those who have asked what she'd want or need.

Post about Honey-Marie Caption: This little sass of a soon to be 2 year old has to be in the “ terrible 2s “. She has de-cannulated herself probably 10 times this week. Either squirming , pulling at things, or using her brunt strength to knock our arms down to pull her trach out. She has been finding herself so much the last few months, scratching and pinching herself. Especially her attitude! Doing her hair is a fight and honestly anything she doesn't feel like doing is a fight. I love her spunky butt just wish she'd be more docile in the tub like she used to be!!

Caption: This weekend has been so exhausting dealing with Honey-Marie's dystonia fits? Or tantrums with a little splash of seizures in the mix. Apparently her being on me is her safe spot, I get it but having a 50+ pound baby as a weighted blanket has sent me into a panic attack numerous times just from her weight on my chest. I have to find a happy medium for the both of us before I lose my mind. Does anyone that have any suggestions? Tips? Anything at this point would be beneficial. I already reached out to her doctors but who might know best than a fellow mom that deals with this stuff too.

I had to get Abel a weighted blanket. But I'm not sure that you can really do that. Does she focus with music. I also had to use light music to try to relax him when he was little, just to give me a couple minutes...

What about getting her these memory foam cooling pillows? They come in multiple colors. Clayton LOVES his... he loves them on top of him while laying in the recliner and he loves sleeping or putting his whole body on them when in his bed! He actually prefers to cuddle on his rather than me sometimes which gives me a break 😊

Larry Russell Moomey

Posted About One Year Ago

Larry Russell Moomey, 85 of Owaneco, passed away at 10:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 1, 2024, in his home. He was born on November 3, 1938, in Pana, the son of Russell and Minnie (Mink) Moomey. He married Penny Satterlee on November 7, 1958, in Owaneco. He graduated from Taylorville High School in 1957. Larry mowed bin sites in the eastern part of the state and worked at the Christian County Highway Department building roads and bridges. He worked at Georgia Pacific for 20 years until the company's closing. Larry's true passion was farming, which he was proud to do for many years. He could fix anything. If a part wasn't available, he would make it on his own. He was a man of few words, but a deep thinker.

He leaves behind his wife of 65 years, Penny Moomey of Owaneco; children: Bradley Moomey (Robin) of Owaneco, Brent Moomey (Linda) of Owaneco, Bonita Hadley (Wayne) of Taylorville, and Bart Moomey of Owaneco; grandchildren: Michael Stephens, Shawn Moomey, Penelope Jane Gomez, Eryn McGough (Dylan), Ann Moomey (Pete Broomstrom), Ashley Moomey, Caleb Hadley, Levi Hadley (Karlie), and Tyler Moomey (Emily); several great grandchildren; brother: Jerry (Rita) Moomey of Owaneco; sister-in-law: Lana (Gary) Campbell of Marion; and several nieces and nephews. Larry was preceded in death by his parents.

A funeral service for Larry will be held at 11:00 a.m. on Monday, October 7, 2024, at McClure Funeral Home with Pastor Jessica Baldyga officiating. Visitation will be held one hour prior to the service and burial will be in the Owaneco Cemetery. Memorials may be made to the Owaneco

Visitation will be held one hour prior to the service and burial will be in the Owaneco Cemetery. Memorials may be made to the Owaneco United Methodist Church or the Christian County Senior Citizens Center. McClure Funeral Home and Cremation Services in Taylorville is assisting the family with arrangements.

Caption: Well trip to the ER today wasn't in my agenda but I went. Still not a clear answer as to why my face is so swollen besides my lymph node reacted to the ct scan so may need primary to biopsy or check up on it if it doesn't go down. Everything came back negative through the blood work so no infection, abscess or periodontal stones. Also, my blood pressure was so high(188/103)Im supposed to relax and not get stressed out. Hmm ok sure we'll try. Couch potato with the Honey Bee it is.

Stay positive you will overcome. My sister Susan has stage 4 Breast cancer as diagnosis with mets to lymph nodes, liver and lung and later developed a rare form call Medullary thyroid cancer. That was a couple of years later, she had 4 bone marrow transplant, chemo and radiation therapy, in which all were unsuccessful then she was given 2 months or less to live but she somehow battled her way back from the brink and the good new, she is in complete remission after taking natural medication we ordered from herbalist Alfred. I have to help him share this Incase you have given up already visit his Facebook page below

I recently had the pleasure of working with Austin Townsend at Aveyo Solar for the installation of our solar panels, and I couldn't be happier with the results. Austin was incredibly knowledgeable and made the entire process smooth and stress-free. The installation was done efficiently and professionally, and the quality of work was top-notch. I highly recommend Austin and Aveyo Solar for anyone considering solar energy solutions!

Response from the owner 11 months ago
Thank you for the wonderful review, Penelope! We're thrilled to hear that Austin provided you with exceptional service and that you're satisfied with the solar panel installation. Your recommendation means a lot to us! We appreciate your support and look forward to assisting you again in the future.

President Trump's federal funding freeze hits Medicaid in Illinois, slated to disrupt vast array of programs

The Trump administration's federal freeze has shut Illinois out of Medicaid, according to Gov. JB Pritzker's office. The government-funded health insurance program covered about 3.9 million people in Illinois in 2023, including low-income adults, children, pregnant women and people with disabilities.

Jacob Bilyeu you do NOT know her situation. Her child's issues were not caused by anything Penny did wrong. They were caused by complications during childbirth that were out of her control. She did everything right & has done everything she could since Honey was born to keep her alive and thriving. Penny served this country and should be able to get the help she needs for her service. I'm worried for you and your girl, I really am. Republicans say that welfare programs should come from churches and philanthropic organizations. I don't know of any church that could take on the cost of your baby's ongoing needs. God help us all.

BABY DADS, LISTEN UP!! The mother of your child can't eat, sleep, shower, or even use the bathroom on her own time because she has to work around her child's schedule...
Meanwhile, you're not missing any sleep, can eat a hot meal without interruption, hop in the shower without sticking your head out every two minutes to check for crying, and sit on the toilet as long as you want without being tugged on, stared at, or rushed... And you're wondering why she's always upset with you?
It's not even always about the money, it's the fact that her life revolves around her child while you get to pick and choose when you want to be a parent.

I'm autistic And when I heard RFK Jr. wants a government registry to track people like me using private medical records I didn't think "safety" I thought Nazi Germany—a roundup of disabled people. Because I know history. And I know exactly what comes after the list is made. This isn't about health. This is about control. It's about fear. It's about marking people. People like me, Neurodivergent people, Different people. Don't dress it up as policy. This is how roundups begin. You want to stop autism discrimination? Start by not creating a fucking list

Reminds me I have thing to sterilize..

Abigail Elaine Lee

April 19 · 🌐

When I pictured becoming a mom, I imagined so many things — tiny handprints on the walls, bedtime stories, scraped knees, messes in the kitchen, and the sound of my boys' laughter filling the house. I imagined holidays with too much noise and afternoons chasing them barefoot through the grass.

I didn't picture hospital stays.

I didn't picture feeding tubes, oxygen tanks, seizure monitors, or memorizing medical terms I'd never even heard of before Valen's diagnosis.

I didn't imagine standing helpless at Oliver's bedside while he fought through his first seizure, my heart breaking in a way I didn't know was possible.

Now, I'm a medical mom.

It's not a title I wanted, but it's one I wear because I have to.

People see the photos. The smiles, the milestones, the good days. And those moments are real — moments we fight for.

The alarms in the middle of the night.

The aching in my chest when a doctor shrugs and says, "We still don't know."

They don't see the grief that hides in the little things — in hospital wristbands, in conversations you never thought you'd have to have, in a quiet car ride home after another round of uncertainty.

I don't do this because I'm strong.

I do it because I'm their mother.

Because no one else will fight for them the way I will.

Because love this big doesn't give you the option to quit.

It looks like memorizing medication schedules alongside favorite TV episodes and bedtime routines.

But it's still motherhood. And it's mine.

And while I wouldn't trade my boys for anything in this world, I'd trade every single hospital stay, procedure, seizure, and night filled with alarms if it meant they could live without having to fight so hard just to be okay.

So when you see a mom like me, don't call her strong like it's a badge she asked for.

See her.

See the weight she carries. The fierce, exhausted, relentless love that keeps her standing.

Because this is medical motherhood — and it's the hardest, bravest, most beautiful kind of love I've ever known.

Post about Honey-Marie being in recovery after a procedure Caption: Honeys in recovery. Everything looks good even got pictures of her throat on the inside! She's gone up 2 trach sizes, ears are cleaned(was informed that her ears are extra squishy on the inside, which is similar to her throat). Which was my aha moment.... With her having CP her tone is either high or low. Her ears/ throat has very low tone causing her to sometimes choke and or swallow her tongue. All in all she's a trooper and as heathy as she can be. Which is a blessing in itself. Now to get her up and homeward bound. This momma is hungryyyyy. Who's cooking dinner for me tonight?

Senator Tammy Duckworth's Post

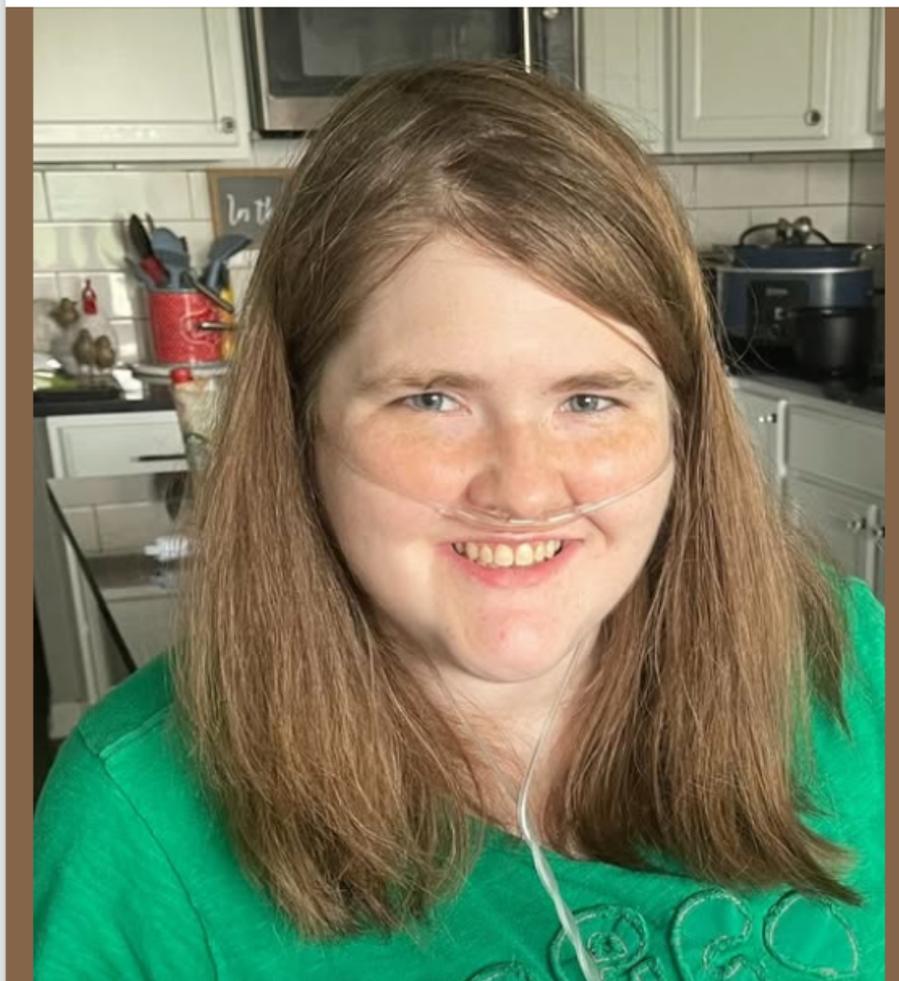

Senator Tammy Duckworth

June 25 · 🌐

If Republicans succeed in gutting Medicaid, the consequences could be life or death for Americans like Amanda. Her mom puts it plainly:

"Without Medicaid, the copay for her life-sustaining equipment would be so costly our family would not be able to afford to survive... I'm sure because of [Medicaid], Amanda is still alive."

We must protect Medicaid. Lives like Amanda's depend on it.

Senator Tammy Duckworth's Post

Penelope Moomey

I full heartedly agree with this mother because I am this mother! My daughter solely relies on medical equipment to have a "normal" life. With out Medicaid I don't believe I could afford any of her care, equipment and our basic housing expenses by myself as a disabled veteran at that! Scared to see what's to come when decisions are made off feelings instead of science and actual facts.

William Hahs I don't know but I'm fearful of mine and my daughter's situation. We live in a rural area closest hospital that can help her in 35mins away. Which I always use as a transfer unless it's a situation granting longer stay. A lot of these hospitals are going to close. People's elderly loved ones are going to be affected by this. It's just crazy. I said last night this is the worst sitcom I have ever watched and we're not even thru the first season.

Whooooo definitely not. My mind has been so messed up since being pregnant with Honey dealing with the dumb bs from her sperm donor and then to her traumatic birth....

My mind feels like mush most days, remembering things I should know is a chore and just trying to put my words together with out sounding so uneducated...

Caption: Honey-Marie gets to divorce a specialist! She got downgraded to a regular optometrist today and doesn't go back for a year! She does have CVI and severely near sighted.... But all in all her eyes are as healthy as they can be and structurally sound. So other than the damage that was caused from her birth... she's doing great. Just got to work on her being able to wear her glasses for longer periods and therapy to help make her vision stronger. So we'll take that "Win" and be grateful it's not worse.

Medical mama of two, yes. Human, also yes.

Sometimes I get so wrapped up in the appointments, the advocating, the scheduling, the forms, the med refills, and all the other things I have to do to keep my child alive and safe... that I forget I'm also just a mom. Sometimes I get so wrapped up in medical motherhood, I forget I'm just a 30 something year old doing life for the first time too.

This version of adulthood wasn't in the "parenting" guidebook for raising children with complex medical needs while also trying to figure out how to be a person yourself. Some days I get it "right." Some days I'm winging it. And every day, I'm learning.

To the other parents in the thick of it: you are more than the roles you carry. You are a whole human being. And you're allowed to still be growing and still be figuring it out, even while you're caring for the ones you love most. ❤️

Parenting a Child with Special Needs Is Nothing Like Welcome to Holland

If you're a parent of a child with disabilities, chances are someone has handed you Emily Kingsley's poem Welcome to Holland. It gets passed around like some universal balm, as if those words can soften the blow of a diagnosis or wrap up our entire reality in a metaphor about tulips and windmills.

But let me be clear: parenting a child with special needs is nothing like Holland.

It's not a vacation. It's not a scenic detour. It's not "different, but still beautiful." That poem is a fairytale that might make outsiders feel better about our reality—but for those of us living this life every single day, it falls painfully short.

It's Not a Missed Flight—It's a Free Fall

Welcome to Holland wants you to believe this journey is like expecting Italy and winding up in Holland instead. But when I got my child's diagnosis, it didn't feel like a detour to a neighboring country.

It felt like being shoved out of an airplane without a parachute. You hit the ground hard. The impact knocks the air out of you. You're shattered, bleeding in ways no one else can see. But you don't die—you get back up, because your child needs you to.

This isn't a "change of plans." This is survival.

It's Not a Sightseeing Tour—It's a Battlefield

Every day is a fight:

Fighting for insurance approvals.

Fighting for services that are constantly cut.

Fighting school systems that see your child as a budget line, not a human being.

You don't return from battle with souvenirs. You come back with scars.

The Loneliness Is Real

Kingsley suggests that if you just open your eyes, you'll find Holland has its own community of travelers. The reality? Most of us are walking this road alone.

Friends fade. Invitations stop. Family doesn't always get it. Society moves forward, and you're left behind—living a life most can't fathom. Yes, there are others in the trenches too, but the day-to-day weight of this journey is often isolating beyond words.

There are no tulips here. There's silence, there's distance, and there's the ache of watching life move on without you.

The Poem Minimizes the Grief

What I resent most about Welcome to Holland is how it diminishes the grief to something as simple as missing out on Italy.

This isn't about canceled gondola rides. It's about mourning the life I thought my child would have. It's about the milestones that may never come, the uncertainty of the future, and the brutal truth that love doesn't erase suffering.

The grief doesn't vanish—it evolves. It comes in waves, weaving itself into joy, pride, resilience, and heartbreak so tightly they're inseparable.

But don't tell me this is a "different kind of beautiful." That minimizes the cost of what we carry.

Why Welcome to Holland Is Dangerous

The reason so many professionals love handing this poem out is because it comforts them. It gives them a tidy way to explain away our grief and reality without having to sit in the discomfort of it.

It suggests we're all on some kind of accidental holiday—just not the one we signed up for. But we're not tourists. We're warriors. Survivors. Parents who have been drafted into a life we never chose, with no exit strategy.

Welcome to Holland doesn't honor that reality. It sugarcoats it.

The Real Story

Parenting a child with special needs is relentless. It's terrifying. It's exhausting. It's isolating. It's also filled with a love so deep and consuming it often feels impossible to put into words.

But it is not Holland.

It's waking up in a land with no map, no compass, no guidebook—where you build the roads yourself, where storms come without warning, and where every small victory feels monumental because of what it took to get there.

It's not tulips and windmills. It's scars, grit, grief, and resilience. It's the kind of strength you don't know you have until it's the only option left.

So don't hand us pretty metaphors. Don't reduce this life to a postcard. Don't try to sell us on Holland.

Give us resources. Give us understanding. Give us people who are brave enough to walk beside us in the trenches.

Because this isn't Holland. It's something much harder, much deeper, and much more real. And the truth is—we deserve for it to be seen that way.

"We're not tourists here—we're warriors." Stacy Warden — Noah's Miracle

"You handled the NICU so well."

But the truth is...I didn't.

I just survived it.

What choice did I have when my baby needed me?

I wasn't brave.

I was broken.

I was exhausted.

I was scared out of my mind.

So no, I didn't handle it well.

I handled it because I had to.

Because love gives you no other option.

You do know how my life is set up. Pretty hard to stretch fencing by yourself when you have to be tethered to a fucking child on a ventilator.

Which my amazing wonderful neighbor did help with out bitching about how easy it was for you. Have a day you deserve little man!

Kenny Miller and thanks again for finishing that bid for the bathroom. My daughter is still waiting on a contractor to come in and build her a bathroom so she doesn't have to be bathed on the dinning room table.

Message me what you're needing. I have someone who I can ask to help!!

Erica Lynn the whole bathroom needs ripped out and made accessible for Honey-Marie. The contractor would need to be insured with proper paperwork and would be paid through a program with the state that she's apart of with her disabilities.

Sad thing is I have 2 freaking tubs that could have been put in by now and we would have made it work. Now itll be just easier to have a roll in shower and "wet" room to be able to do all her cares in one place.

And just maybe I'll get my dinning room table back so I can actually sit down and eat my meals at.

As the shutdown looms, let's play; what are the facts?

FACT: Trump wants to distract from Epstein.
RELEASE THE FILES

FACT: Republicans run the House, Senate, & White House... if there is a shutdown, Real Math says it's the REPUBLICANS' SHUTDOWN.

I have a meeting today with Russ Vought, he of PROJECT 2025 Fame, to determine which of the many Democrat Agencies, most of which are a political SCAM, he recommends to be cut, and whether or not those cuts will be temporary or permanent. I can't believe the Radical Left Democrats gave me this unprecedented opportunity. They are not stupid people, so maybe this is their way of wanting to, quietly and quickly, MAKE AMERICA GREAT AGAIN! President DJT

ICE said they were only going after "illegal immigrants."
Then they went after anyone who looked Hispanic or spoke Spanish.
Now they're going after Black people.
And then the homeless.
And they're just getting started.
If you wonder how it felt in 1933 Germany, you're there.
