Rockford's stepped-up efforts to quell prostitution applauded

Jeff Kolkey | Rockford Register Star

ROCKFORD — Boyd Glovier has worked with police and neighbors to reclaim his neighborhood from the pimps, prostitutes, drug dealers and gangs that frequently disrupt the lives of hardworking residents.

And after 15 years, the Take it Back Neighborhood Association he leads has some notable wins in shutting down drug and gang houses.

But the sight of desperate women and girls in skimpy outfits strutting south down Parmele Street toward Broadway remains all too common. Glovier sees prostitutes from his front porch as they troll for johns — people in cars with license plates that, he notes, are often from Wisconsin who come looking to buy sex.

So Glovier cheered when police Chief Chet Epperson urged commanders last week to step up enforcement on street-level prostitution.

“They have been cracking down, doing more undercover stuff, and it will help,” Glovier said.

After Epperson urged the crackdown during a Compstat management meeting, he went out Aug. 15 and arrested a woman wanted on a warrant for prostitution.

After approaching the black SUV Epperson was driving, he learned that the woman, Rebecca Zeller, 27, was wanted for failure to appear in DeKalb County court on a prostitution charge. He later confirmed the warrant.

On Aug. 18, M3 Streets Team officers conducted an undercover operation that netted eight women on prostitution charges.

Another sting Friday resulted in three more arrests: Trenika T. Allen, 27, prostitution, battery and possession of drug paraphernalia; Bobbie L. Burl, 61, prostitution and possession of drug paraphernalia; and Brenda K. Hughes, 48, prostitution and battery.

“It’s horrible, it’s deteriorating and devastating to a community, and in the opinion of some business owners who have spoken to me, it’s disgusting to have prostitutes frequent the area,” Epperson said.

He urged officers to crack down on prostitutes and the people who look to buy sex from them. But the recent stings have not resulted in the arrest of those looking to buy sex — viewed by advocacy groups as a more effective deterrent than arresting prostitutes who typically are already living in desperation.

The Chicago Alliance Against Sexual Exploitation promotes an “End Demand” approach to prostitution enforcement. It cites research showing that men who buy sex consider changing their behavior when they are the targets of police enforcement.

The organization says enforcement is less likely to change the behavior of prostitutes, who often are victims of abuse or are drug addicts.

In the past, Rockford police have worked with the Winnebago County Sheriff’s Department to conduct hotel-based stings targeting johns. Arresting street-level prostitution customers is more difficult, costly and dangerous, Lt. Patrick Hoey said.

And the public complains about prostitutes walking their neighborhoods or driving business away from their storefronts, Hoey said.

Arresting sex-solicitors requires female officers to pose as prostitutes.

“Some johns won’t make a deal with the officer standing outside the car, so you really have to, if you want that, have the undercover officer get in the car,” Hoey said. “And now an officer is in a moving car, that’s a lot riskier.”

It's sad that people are up here bashing each of these individuals. Addiction is horrible! Addiction not only affects the addict but it affects their loved ones. No I have never been an addict but I lived through it with my son. I am praying they find their way to recovery.

Suburban Pals Plan To Ride Bikes 100 Miles To Raise Money For Human Trafficking Victims

May 12, 2021 / 8:30 AM CDT / CBS Chicago

More from CBS News

15 killed, 87 hurt in shootings across Chicago during 4th of July...

Man killed, woman hurt in drive-by shooting in South Loop

NASCAR Street Race takes over Chicago

CHICAGO (CBS) -- Biking for a better tomorrow; a suburban man and his close friend are teaming up to ride more than 100 miles to raise money and awareness for human trafficking victims.

CBS 2 Morning Insider Tim McNicholas joined them for a training session this week.

"I've whipped this 61-year-old body into shape, so we're ready to go," Mark Kurland said.

That's the sound of dedication and drive. Kurland and Dan Stratton are training for the ride of a lifetime.

"I'm hoping my seat holds up," Kurland said.

They're riding 110 miles - from Lombard, Illinois, to La Porte, Indiana - to raise money for Naomi's House, a long-term residential care facility for survivors of human trafficking.

"These are women that were tricked into this, or wooed into it in some way, and all the promises that were made were dashed. So, for me, it's something I have to do something about," Kurland said.

Their goal is to raise $15,000 for Naomi's House, to cover the group's costs for 100 days, and create more success stories like Rebecca Zeller's. She was a human trafficking victim at age 17.

"The only thing I knew was prostitution and trafficking," she said.

Zeller said Naomi's House Naomi's House helped her get back on her feet, leave her old life behind, and fight through a drug addiction.

She said, if not for Naomi's House, right now she'd be "probably struggling, if not dead."

Instead, now she works for Naomi's House.

So does Kurlan's daughter, Brianna Saxer, who will cheer him on for the May 28th ride.

"If we can raise money to help them heal, if we can really be in the trenches with these women as they walk through everything they go through to get from one side to the other, it's essential," Saxer said.

It's a scenic ride, but a tough one.

"When we get to the hills, it's attack the hills for Naomi's House," Kurland said.

He and Stratton can't wait.

If you'd like to donate, please reach out to Saxer by email: brianna.saxer@naomishouse.org.

An anonymous donor is willing to match donations all month.

They Look small yea... 50cc It is small. A rock in the pipe, yes small. But you be suprised what you can fit in these things. Your car. Your house. All your money and possessions. Crazy, yeah? But there's more. Your friends will fit in there too. Along with your kids, the love of your life, Your hopes and dreams,...It will all fit in here and more.... Gone with a push of the plunger, a hit on the pipe, a snort of a line, a bottle of booze, popping pills. If you wanna dance you gotta pay the band. And it's not cheap.

Push your friends to recover, because addiction is wiping out our generation.

Though she once walked the streets selling her body, Becky Zeller today hits the streets to help trafficking victims.

Not long ago, she found herself in the same spot as the women she seeks to help. From a young age, Zeller was sexually exploited and spent much of her adult life working for pimps and racking up prostitution charges in multiple states.

Now, Zeller is a graduate of Naomi's House, a Wheaton-based therapeutic program for victims of sex trafficking, and is the organization's community outreach coordinator.

Her goal is simple: Let women know there is help and hope and to help women begin their journey to healing.

"I had no idea about anything," Zeller, 37, recalls. "For all those years I was out there ... in all those states, I was prostituting, and I had no idea there were programs out here like this. Had I known, maybe I wouldn't have went through all the stuff that I have been through. Maybe it would've ended at a younger age."

Spreading awareness that help is available and human trafficking is happening in the suburbs are the key tools in the fight against it, experts said.

The recent arrests of five people trafficking seven women in Kane and Cook counties shocked many, but Zeller and others said that's just the tip of the iceberg.

“As long as there’s demand, there will always be a supply,” said Simone Halpin, co-founder and executive director of Naomi’s House, adding the collar counties rank among the highest in the state when it comes to buying sex.

While Illinois ranks eighth in terms of resources available to help trafficking victims, according to a 2023 report by the anti-trafficking nonprofit Safe House Project, only about 1% of trafficking victims are ever reached, Halpin said.

Why so few? Experts said it’s because there’s a lack of awareness of services available and many victims don’t realize they have a choice.

Victims often are conditioned at a young age to obey their abusers. Their traffickers also use various means – such as threats of harm or isolating victims from their families – to control them.

“Women have difficulty identifying that they had a choice in the matter,” Halpin said. “They don’t identify as a survivor. ... That comes much later in the healing.”

That healing journey takes time, Halpin said, starting with small steps such as a doctor’s visit or allowing space to let someone feel their emotions. As they take those small steps, Naomi’s House and other groups like it provide a therapeutic setting to help women identify their trauma.

“It can be devastating to think, ‘I was a piece of property,’” Halpin said, adding that often trafficking victims are conditioned to think they have no value.

In Zeller's case, she viewed her traffickers as boyfriends. One pimp, she recalled, kept her awake at all hours, pouring water on her if she fell asleep and selling her to different men. But in her 19-year-old mind, she saw the relationship differently.

"I thought I was in love," she said, noting she never saw a penny of what she made, not even to buy clothes. "He had me hypnotized."

At Naomi's House, survivors go through a program that often takes about two years to complete. Once they are done, Naomi's House continues to assist as clients move toward independence.

Reaching children

Reclaim 13 is an organization that works with children who have been sexually abused or exploited. It is the only residential program in the state for children who have been trafficked for sex.

Much like Naomi's House, Reclaim 13 provides a therapeutic setting for young trafficking victims to regain control over their lives.

"We focus a lot on building healthy relationships," said Cassandra Ma, executive director of the Lombard-based organization.

Much like Naomi's House, the organization addresses medical and emotional needs as children heal. It also offers online schooling so children can focus on their healing in a safe environment and it offers a young adult program serving those ages 18 to 25.

Like other agencies, Reclaim 13 has seen a significant increase in calls since the pandemic. The victims the organization helps also are reporting the demand for younger children in the sex trade is increasing.

“Children are much more vulnerable than before,” said Ma, adding children are particularly vulnerable because they depend on adults to provide food, clothing, love and shelter.

She dismisses the stereotype that sex trafficking victims are kidnapped. Often, she said, their traffickers are someone they know and trust such as a family member or a friend.

They may not be forcibly held against their will, but “emotionally and relationally, they are very much captive,” Ma said.

Both Ma and Halpin said providing safe spaces for children and women is key to preventing and ending trafficking.

While they know the journey to recovery is long and difficult, both have seen the rewards in the faces of the women and children who have been helped.

Our Story

"My first experience meeting a woman who was being sexually exploited and trafficked was in the city of Chicago. I really had no concept that women were being forced to sell their bodies on the same streets and in the same neighborhoods where I was raising my family and driving my kids to school. I remember being pregnant, waddling around the streets, having conversations with women and connecting with them because they too had had children. I saw buyers pull up their car and have a conversation with a woman. And I would watch her get into the car and think to myself, what kind of experience is she gonna have that is violent and traumatic and dangerous to her? And when we would speak, that would be the most dignified conversation she would have for the day. Because soon after, and soon before, she was treated as if she was a piece of property. These experiences led to feeling that God was saying, 'I can use you. I can use the Church to give women a place to heal from their trauma and start a new life.' From there, Naomi's House began."

Choose wisely, not only for you but also for your child. Later in marriage when you hit parenthood, you'll realize what you really wish for in your spouse is not big money or 'six-pack'. A pretty face and a good bank account are nice to have but at the end of the day, there's so much more you should be looking for. At 3am when your child is crying, and your eyes are heavy and your body is weak for postpartum, it will not be how he looks or what he owns that will matter. It'll be the compassion in his heart and the love for you in his soul that push him out of the bed to attend the child immediately and tell you, "Go back to sleep, love. I got this." If I could tell the younger people what to consider in a companion, I would say marry the man who will be the best father for your children. The man who will put you and your little family first, above all else. The man who is as responsible as you are in raising family because you both are in it together. In short, marry the person who will set a standard for a spouse in your children. Because in all of these, whenever you watch your partner with your child, you'll find yourself falling in love all over again. Choose wisely, not only for you but also for your child.

☐ Coat Drive for the Homeless - November 16th! ☐ Hey friends! As the weather gets colder, we're working to make sure everyone has a warm coat to get through the winter. If you have any gently used coats lying around that you no longer need, please consider donating them! I'll be collecting coats to give out at our monthly street reach event with Naomi's House on November 16th. Every donation can make a huge difference! You can drop off coats with me, or I can arrange a pickup if that's easier. Let's spread warmth and kindness together. ☐☐

🐾 Urgent Help Needed for Pebbles! 🐾

Hey friends,

I'm reaching out on behalf of a dear friend who is in a tough situation. They can no longer keep their beloved dog, Pebbles, and they're desperate to find her a loving home instead of taking her to a shelter.

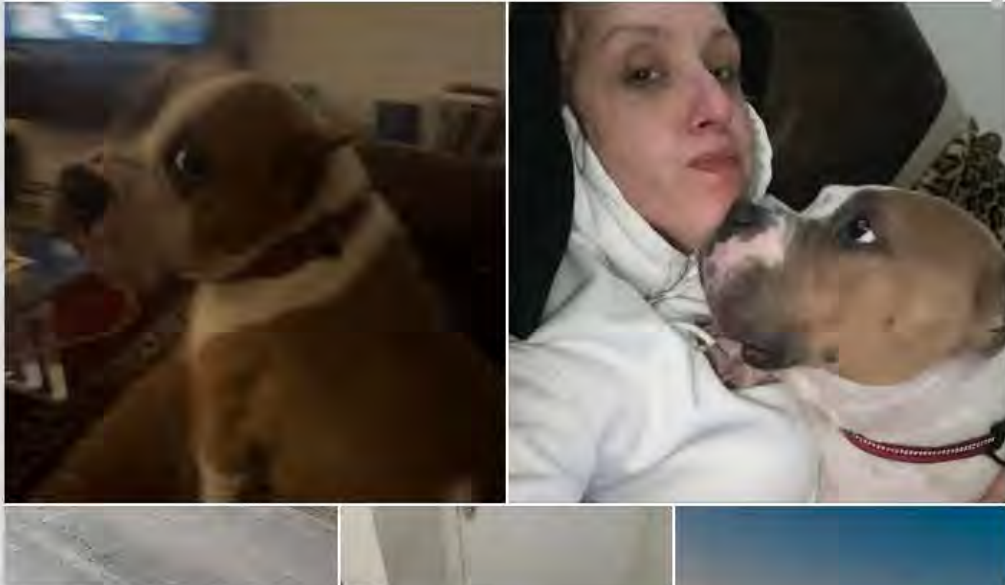

Pebbles is a sweet 4-year-old rescue who has brought so much joy to their lives. She's friendly, great with children, and gets along well with other animals.

If you or anyone you know can foster Pebbles, even temporarily, it would mean the world to my friend and Pebbles! Please share this post to help find her a new home where she'll be loved and cared for.

Thank you all for your support! ❤️

If you can help or have any questions, feel free to reach out to me directly.

Much love!

I just want to take a moment to express how much I appreciate my wife, Rebecca Rivera. I adore her so much! She's a full-time student, works a full-time job—actually, she juggles three jobs—and on top of that, she's pregnant and doing an internship. Despite all of this, she still maintains straight A's, cooks, cleans, and keeps everything running smoothly at home. She's absolutely amazing. She's also the reason I started back in college to pursue cybersecurity. Watching how hard she works has inspired me to push myself, and now I'm doing great in school, too—all thanks to her encouragement and example. She motivates me to be my best every single day. I honestly don't know what I would do without her. She's such a hard worker and so incredibly beautiful. She brightens my day every single day, and I'm so grateful for everything she does and everything she is. Rebecca, thank you for being my rock, my inspiration, and my everything. I don't even want to imagine a world without you in it. You're my everything, my forever, and I love you endlessly.
