Donation protected

Hello everyone, this is a fundraiser for my brother Nicholas Lopez who has recently survived a very serious motorcycle accident. Being in critical condition he was touched by the hand of god and blessed to keep his life.

This is a very dark and difficult time for our family as we continue to hope and pray everyday that Nicholas continues to stay strong both physically and mentally.

The sole purpose of this fundraiser is more so to create awareness and support for my brother Nicholas as he begins his road to recovery. The power of prayer is so strong, so I ask if you can take 1 minute out of your day to dedicate thought to my brother, and if you don't practice a religion, even to just recognize his name Nicholas Lopez once in your day would be very much appreciated.

These situations are never easy and can easily break a person down with burdens and obstacles that follow. I know times are some of the hardest they've ever been for a lot of people, so if you could even spare 50 cents, I promise it would not go unnoticed, instead cherished full heartedly. It's going to be a long journey ahead for Nicholas and I know he would be very appreciative towards even the smallest act of kindness.

The goal is set to $5000 but I know Nicholas is a very proud-hard working person and I know asking for a donation is something he's never done. Meaning although it says that, there is no need for a specific goal. He's never asked for handouts and he's never asked for help because quite frankly, everything he set out in life he either accomplished on his own - or was taking the necessary steps to do so with full determination and confidence. That is why I know he will recover with Godspeed.

Thank you so much in advance for all the unconditional love and support that would come from everyone I know and everyone who took the time to read this. And please if you can take the time to follow and support my brothers new clothing brand "Die Devoted" on Instagram @diedevoted. I know he would be absolutely blown away to see it when that time comes.

Make sure to call your family and the people close to you every now and then just to let them know you love them, because times like these really make you appreciate everything and everyone you have in your life. And to all the people who have experienced loss or something like this before, my heart is with you fully. God bless.

Prior to DOI: One thing that completely bummed me out about this year, was that I wasn't going to be able to see my brother at all. With him being in the Army, we see each other pretty much only once a year. Originally he wasn't going to make it to my Mom's graduation, and with my great opportunity this year I was no longer able to go to Hawaii and see him with my family next month. So I've been pretty down about it. So to see him walk up and surprise my Mom at her graduation, it was so amazing. I only got to see him one night, and it still bums me out I can't be there next month in Hawaii...but I'm blessed and fortunate I got to spend a day and a half with him. Nick you really are my best friend and despite the fact that we see each other once a year and we're separated by thousands of miles, we have the closest bond and I'm proud to be your brother. The dynamic duo before the Fantastic Four. Love ya man, thanks for all that you do!

This is Nick's brother Andrew. Writing on his behalf since he's unable to use his hands yet, and is looking at his phone for the first time since the accident. He just wanted to seriously thank everyone for their love, prayers, and support. His surgery was successful, yet he has a very long and painful road to recovery. He misses all of you very much and can't wait for the day he can embrace every single one of you and thank you personally for the tremendous amount of true love he's feeling after seeing his phone again.

Hi everyone
Everyday is a new battle and fight and I just want you all to know your continued love, prayers, and words of motivation are what keep me in the fight. I feel deeply humbled from y'all's support and look forward to seeing your faces. For those wanting to visit I'd love it be when my days are more predictable and less of a rollercoaster with all this post op battle. Truly miss you all and thank you for everything

Wanted to say thank you again for all the love and prayers. They have really helped me push myself further during the moments it gets dark. Everyday there's a new battle. Each one helps me appreciate the little things I once took for granted. With another surgery on the horizon, I won't be leaving the hospital anytime soon. Still a long road of recovery ahead, but y'all's love and support keep me in the fight.

With the help of an awesome friend and my amazing parents, #diedevoted will be back up and running. White "Lonely Road" tees will finally be printed soon. For those who have waited long for their order, y'all are awesome and your patience couldn't be more appreciated. Look out for a surprise goodie or two in your orders! Along with the white tees we will also have stickers and hats in stock very soon! Super excited! Thank you again so much I can truly feel a whole heart from all the love. I miss y'all.

After DOI: Because of my injuries I've had to learn how to do everything again like an infant: eat, use the restroom, bathe, walk, etc. These are my first couple steps in almost 3 months. I'm not allowed to film at therapy but I wanted to keep pushing at home and show you. It's a very uplifting and moving experience. Because of injuries I still have in my leg I'm only allowed to walk like this for the next 6 weeks at least: 25% weight on my right toes which still have fractures. A lot more healing needs to occur in my femur and knee before I can put 100% weight on my foot. This road has been teaching me patience like I never thought possible, mental strength I've had to pull from deep down inside, and how to truly love myself. I finally felt confident physically and built up strong self esteem over years before the accident. With my muscle atrophy from surgery, weight loss, and weakness it felt like all I had built was taken from me, but with every moment of insecurity, sadness, and confusion I feel myself becoming stronger. I find myself at the altar falling into the Father's open arms and it's the most beautiful experience. Everyday since the accident I open my heart and mind to seek God's will for me. I used to be so wrapped up in what I wanted. With this second chance I will seek out and serve my purpose. I'm so excited for the journey. First, I will walk again. My road to recovery has so far been overwhelmingly filled with emotion and lessons. Thanks for being a part of this with me. 🙏 DM/leave a comment with any stories of overcoming adversity you may have and let's walk the journey together! After DOI: 4 months ago I ended up on the ground in the middle of an intersection bleeding out with my bones all over the place. I could feel myself slipping after my adrenaline was wearing off and I was waiting for someone to help me. Not a day goes by where I haven't thought about that feeling. It was the day before I was relocating to pursue a major career path I'd been wanting for 12 years. I had finally listened to my instinct and took action to embark on the journey I thought was my purpose. God had other plans for me. These past 4 months have been an incredibly intense journey of guts and glory with much more to come as I recover. The only reason I'm continuing to share this journey is because of the positive feedback I'm getting from people who are touched by this. By sticking to my decision to pursue what I believed was my happiness 4 months ago I've found a whole new perspective and purpose. Blinded by my wants, I realized what God was leading me towards all along. His redirections are powerful, and I'm grateful to be here. #staytrue #neverfuckinfalter #nff #diedevoted

SEPTEMBER 3, 2022 REMINDERS FOR LIFE

Things may seem stagnant like they aren't going anywhere, or progress isn't manifesting, but trust the pieces are falling into place. Remember your reasons for starting and keep going on your path. Believe your miracles will happen. Don't give up now. For all you know, you might be one act away from everything materializing. Stick to your decisions to pursue your happiness. It will all pay off soon.

Bone marrow will be extracted from my pelvis this time to graft it with my femur. I'll also be getting my knee cranked while under anesthesia in an attempt to gain more flexion since I'm stuck between 50-60 degrees (started at 0 so it's pretty awesome given how much my knee got destroyed). If this works it will allow me to eventually put weight on my leg so I can finally start the process of learning to walk again. I will continue to lean on my faith in God, my family, all of you, and my intestinal fortitude to never end the fight no matter the pain or dark days. I appreciate all the continued love and support throughout this long and crazy journey that y'all have provided for me. Nick ☺️

After DOI: Been a week and a day since my most recent surgery on my femur and pelvis. This one has been by far the biggest mental strength test of my life. This recovery has continually givin me situations where I'm constantly provin to myself how far I can push myself mentally through excruciating pain. My pelvis and knee pain has been real and to be up and hoppin on my good leg is such a victorious feeling. I'm looking forward to gaining the progress back that I had lost before this surgery and of course to hopefully walk again one day. I don't post this stuff for sympathy or attention. I do it for all y'all who been prayin and sendin me awesome love and vibes. It truly works and thank you so much from the bottom of my heart. I also want to continue to inspire anyone going through any physical and mental opposition. We're all we've got. #neverfuckinfalter Thank you @hewkofit for constantly setting the highest standard of being a wife and best friend and lifting me up in the most darkest of times. I love and appreciate you is an understatement. ☺ What you do for me and our family is just supernatural. Shoutout to all the veterans who had the guts/balls to sign a contract and dedicate their lives to this country. Always in my heart forever. To those still in uniform: keep up the fuckin fire! ☺. #diedevoted

Been a week and a day since my most recent surgery on my femur and pelvis. This one has been by far the biggest mental strength test of my life. This recovery has continually given me situations where I'm constantly proving to myself how far I can push myself mentally through excruciating pain. My pelvis and knee pain has been real and to be up and moving on my good leg is such a victorious feeling. I'm looking forward to gaining the progress back that I had lost before this surgery and of course to hopefully walk again one day. I don't post this stuff for sympathy or attention. I do it for all y'all who been prayin and sendin me awesome love and vibes. It truly works and thank you so much from the bottom of my heart. I also want to continue to inspire anyone

After DOI: After a highly anticipated ortho visit today my femur has not grown back enough to support the hardware holding me up in my leg. After many bone graft surgeries I'll be getting a total knee replacement with distal femur GMRS. (Swipe pic to check it out) Due to my young age my doc wanted this to be last resort while giving it his all trying other procedures and ways to give me my long term quality of life back which I'm truly grateful for. I have such an amazing medical team behind me! Shoutout to my family, my friends, and all y'all who continue to lift me up by rootin' for me everyday. Especially my wife who always helps me find the motivation and strength I need to get up and fight another day when I have no idea how that seems possible sometimes. I also might need a back surgery and will find more about that possible operation next week. Back in December when I first was allowed to bear weight and try and walk again it seemed like my recovery was reachin a point where it was going to all be over and I can move forward, but it now feels like that was only the beginning. It's almost been a year since my accident and I never imagined I'd still be having huge surgeries. I can't thank y'all enough for all the love, prayers, support, and motivation you give me that leads me to the most insane courage I didn't even know I had in me. I'll never be able to put into words what that truly means to me. One of the last text messages I sent before my accident was a quote to my wife. It's a quote that's always spoke to me since my days in the army, and I can't put into words what it means to me now: "Once more into the fray, into the last good fight I'll ever know. Live and die on this day, live and die on this day" Onto the next battle of this unwavering war. ☺

Your a BIG man, showing up to the spot to show that your still the champ and that moment didn't define who you are and where your going. It's just a junction of road that you can go always reflect to show you the hurdles you've conquered and the strengths you've grown into. I hold so much admiration for you and the inner warrior that you house within. Keep going strong soldier!

Super grateful for all y'all and as always special shout-out to my wife @hewkofit for lifting up my spirits when it all feels too ruthless. ☺ It's been a hell of a journey with my right leg and it's aggressive to get this surgery at my age but my quality of life will eventually be so much better than it has been. ☺ Doc didn't know how my femur hadn't snapped again walkin on it these last few months. He said it was way more broken than my X-rays have been showin. Such a huge victory yesterday! Can't put into words how grateful I am for the amount of beautiful blessings I've continued to receive since the accident last year. After DOI: Spinal fusion = success. ☺ Such mental relief! I was so anxious going into this one. More fear than any of the other surgeries I've had. I have another road of healing and work ahead of me to get back to being completely independent and walking unassisted, but it's nothing I haven't done already. I'll continue to hope and pray this is the last time I have to start over. I'm so blessed to be able to be under the care of such talented and kind doctors. I also feel blessed for my wife, children, and all those who have been there for us during this unexpectedly insane recovery. The road blocks life has tossed us during this has been the heaviest stress and it's put a lot of pressure on me and my family but I am so proud of us all for accepting the ever evolving situations, learning from them, and continuing mission with optimism, strength, love, and unity. This journey and struggle has really shown me how loved I am and the help I've received is more love and kindness I've ever experienced. I've truly gained family during this recovery and the blessings you've given me have helped me get this far. You know who you are ☺ and to my wife, @hewkofit , we been thrown a lot of shit for a while now and I can't be more proud of us for always finding a way to grow and strengthen our union. I truly don't believe I'd have made it this far or be walking if it weren't for you and your selfless love, care, and strength when I'm in my most weak and dark moments. I will continue to never falter with the idea that one day we will have the life we've dreamed of and all these tests and hurdles will be behind us. I will never stop until we're on top. There's a lot I can't say right now because of the legal aspect of my accident but my family and I are in the trenches and I will fight with everything in me until we are out of them. This journey feels far from over in that regard but I know what I been through and so do y'all. It's been true physical, emotional, and mental pain but I'm breathing, been pieced back together through surgeries, and standing on my own two feet. God is great. ☺ Here are some of my favorite pics from the past few months. I call them: Dancing in The Rain.

After DOI: In May of 22', Nick Lopez' identity was protected by hospital staff as they awaited the doctor's word on whether he'd live or not. The ICU referred to him as Henry Trauma until he "miraculously" pulled through. From the date of the motorcycle accident through almost all of 23', Nick battled compound fractures, paralysis, the favored odds to never walk again, and multiple surgeries. He was originally a drummer/indie folk singer who had experience in bands, writing, recording, touring, and on tv and radio in Las Vegas, NV. His second chance at life helped him realize he'd put his purpose aside too long and began creating music again. After experimenting with different styles of music in 22', his calling to the first style of music he'd ever played in childhood grew incredibly loud: metal. With the difficulty of his new bodily limitations and not being able to play the drums as effective as before, Nick's determination helped him connect with producers who've helped his vision come to life. While practicing technique he remembered from his younger years, Nick created the vocal sound for his first single CHOSEN in 23' and it was then that henry trauma was born! Drawing inspiration from @metallica @slipknot @bringmethehorizon @asilaydying @suicideboys @knockedloosehc @kublaikhantx @slaughtertoprevailofficial and @lornashore , henry trauma plans to bring heat in '24 by releasing new music once he's fully recovered from his next and final surgery in Nov' of 23'

After DOI Congrats to my best friend, wife, and most badass woman I've ever had the honor of knowing on becoming a Registered Behavior Technician @hewkofit She never stops grinding and adding to her list of credentials in fitness and now behavioral therapy. She's been blowing me away with her grit and resolve since day one of her sweeping me off my feet. My motorcycle accident really set us back in much deeper ways than financially and with my body. I always believed I was strong enough to take on anything, but that caught up to me, and it did very strongly. I finally got the mental health help I knew I've needed for a long time but was too prideful to get. It's very recently helped me radically accept the bodily pain and limitations I'll deal with the rest of my life. It's helped me understand myself, helped me cope with accepting myself, and just learning to love myself while now realizing why I been the way I am my whole life. I'm actively in therapy and psychiatry and as cliche as this may sound it has saved my life. The anxiety, depression, dread, despair, trepidation, and ruminating lead me to scary places in my mind I never even knew I could go and I realized I needed help. It's okay to get help. Fuck the stigmas. That vulnerability takes true strength. I'm finally beginning to be comfortable in my own skin for the first time my whole life and feel contentment I never knew I could achieve because I thought something was just wrong with me and would never succeed at being able to focus my mind on what I desire and stay consistent. I've never felt more confident as a husband and a step father. I'm so thankful for my medical team(s) who have treated me since day one of my accident and are still continuing to treat me today. And for all those who've helped us along this journey through our financial struggles in anyway you've helped us there are no words to be able to express my gratitude. Learning behavioral therapies on how to focus on the present while taking a hold of my life and building it back up with my wife has truly been the biggest blessing during this insane journey. When my family and I are on top I'll never forget y'all. God is good. Choose life. ❤️

I've never felt more confident as a husband and a step father. I'm so thankful for my medical team(s) who have treated me since day one of my accident and are still continuing to treat me today. And for all those who've helped us along this journey through our financial struggles in anyway you've helped us there are no words to be able to express my gratitude. Learning behavioral therapies on how to focus on the present while taking a hold of my life and building it back up with my wife has truly been the biggest blessing during this insane journey. When my family and I are on top I'll never forget y'all. God is good. Choose life. ❤️ die devoted Congrats to my best friend, wife, and most badass woman I've ever had the honor of knowing on becoming a Registered Behavior Technician @hewkofit She never stops grinding and adding to her list of credentials in fitness and now behavioral therapy. She's been blowing me away with her grit and resolve since day one of her sweeping me off my feet. My motorcycle accident really set us back in much deeper ways than financially and with my body. I always believed I was strong enough to take on anything, but that caught up to me, and it did very strongly. I finally got the mental health help I knew I've needed for a long time but was too prideful to get. It's very recently helped me radically accept the bodily pain and limitations I'll deal with the rest of my life. It's helped me understand myself, helped me cope with accepting myself, and just learning to love myself while now realizing why I been the way I am my whole life. I'm actively in therapy and psychiatry and as cliché as this may sound it has saved my life. The anxiety, depression, dread, despair, trepidation, and ruminating lead me to scary places in my mind I never even knew I could go and I realized I needed help. It's okay to get help. Fuck the stigmas. That vulnerability takes true strength. I'm finally beginning to be comfortable in my own skin for the first time my whole life and feel contentment I never knew I could achieve because I thought something was just wrong with me and would never succeed at being able to focus my mind on what I desire and stay consistent. I've never felt more confident as a husband and a step father. I'm so thankful for my medical team(s) who have treated me since day one of my accident and are still continuing to treat me today. Subject's email nicholastylerlopez@gmail.com led to a Google account with reviews.

★★★★★ 11 months ago
For as long as I can remember I was extremely insecure about my hair line. I couldn't stand how far back it went. I was tired of hiding underneath hats all the time and was willing to do anything to fix it. Right when I heard about scalp micropigmentation I was immediately ready to try it! I was fortunate enough to find Vegas SMP. Jonnazel not only fixed my hair line but helped me find confidence I didn't even know I had inside of me 😊 If you've been on the fence about this kind of treatment you won't regret working with Jonnazel over at Vegas SMP!

Below the review, there are 'Like' and 'Share' buttons. A response from the owner is shown:

Thank you Nick for the review, it's truly appreciated!

On the right side of the screen, a satellite map of a residential area in Las Vegas is displayed. The map shows streets like W Tompkins Ave, S Tee Pee Ln, and various cul-de-sacs. Several businesses are marked with pins, including 'Aurora Glen Homeowners Association', 'Fitness Health Keto', 'Midnight Sun Ave', 'Moonlit Sky Ave', 'Vegas Scalp Micropigmentation', 'Juan's Flaming Fajitas & Cantina', 'In-N-Out Burger Hamburger + S', 'Big Chicken Fast Food - $$', and 'Apache Pines A'. The 'Vegas Scalp Micropigmentation' business is specifically highlighted with a red pin. The map also shows a 'Guyborough St' street and a 'Google' watermark.

I weighed myself at 205 lbs a few weeks ago and was disgusted. Im 15 lbs down from a 25 lbs weight loss goal. Working out isn't the same for me anymore but it isn't stopping me. I'm at roughly 85 degrees flexion in my right knee which is insane given the prosthesis and where I started. Im never giving up on getting the most flexion I can. I've accepted this will be a life long mission. ☺ I'm almost 5 months in to quitting my opioid pain medication cold turkey which was a fight for sure and I can't even remember the last time I had a drink. I navigate my pain with over the counter meds and insanely religious stretching ☺ I work overtime on my physical and mental health everyday and am the happiest I've ever been. A disciplined mindset, staying true to declared goals with realistic timelines, and the love and support of you all are what assist me in waking up with purpose everyday. It sure has been a war but the battle is daily and I've learned to embrace and love it. I seek God in everything I do and pray he guides me towards his will for me. I strive to let go of ego everyday and try and live each day as if it were my last. I'm damn proud of my progress and would have NEVER thought I'd make it this far and I'm super pumped to keep climbing and see how far I go! If you feel comfortable enough to share, DM me anything you've been wanting to achieve/overcome/struggling with that you just can't seem to get after and maybe I can offer some insight on what made me find the discipline within me to stop being a victim and fight for the life I want. You're NEVER alone. Happy early Halloween and early voting everyone! ☺ Nick

My motorcycle wreck set me back in much deeper ways than just physically. I always believed I was strong enough to take on anything, but that caught up to me. I finally got the mental health help I knew I've needed but was too prideful to get. It's very recently helped me radically accept the bodily pain and limitations I'll deal with the rest of my life. It's helped me understand myself, cope with accepting myself, and learning to sincerely love myself. I'm actively in therapy and as cliche as this may sound it has saved my life. The anxiety, depression, dread, despair, trepidation, and ruminating I've experienced trying to accept my circumstances without help lead me to unpleasant emotional places I never knew I could go and I finally accepted I needed help. It was a grueling reality to accept, but I didn't come this far to become a victim to my accident and let it deteriorate me. It's okay to get help. Ignore the stigmas. That vulnerability takes true strength. I've lost far too many friends who I considered brothers because they didn't get help. "You can't fix something broken with something broken." I'm finally beginning to be comfortable in my own skin for the first time in a long time and feel contentment I never knew I could achieve since becoming engulfed in the focus of my physical rehabilitation. Since focusing on my mental rehabilitation, I genuinely feel more confident. More importantly, that confidence has lead me to being a better man. The man I've always wanted to be with authenticity. It's a daily effort and I embrace it and love the work. Learning behavioral therapies on how to focus on the present while taking a hold of my life and building it back up has truly been the biggest blessing during this insane journey. I've become such a huge advocate for good mental health hygiene. I'm beginning an endeavor toward goals I've wanted deep down but never believed in myself and thought it was too late because of different factors. However, it's all I do now, believe in myself, and you should to. "The pursuit of happiness is the chase of a lifetime! It's NEVER too late to become what you might have been." #mindfulness #chooselife ❤️ Nick nicklopez 205 → 174. Goal was 180. 31 lbs down and proud! I think I'm good here. 😊 So much gratitude for who and what's all around me!

Rise. 🌟

If you knew you weren't going to wake up tomorrow what would you do today? What would you say? Who would you say it to? What would you think? Would you regret? Would you rejoice? Well, my heart is full, and it took a lot of work. A lot. The work never stops. Stepping out of my head, listening to my heart, and embracing my instinct is the hard route. If it was easy everyone would do it, but I know everyone can. As long as you wake up you have a chance. I seize every opportunity God puts in my path now. No excuses. Even dancing is different for me now with my pain and right leg limitations but I'll never not try. "Easy choices, hard life. Hard choices, easy life." I want what God wants: nothing more, nothing less, and nothing else. I'm so pumped for what God continues to have in store for me as I surrender myself, open my heart, listen, and courageously execute his will. ❤️ Nick "I want to say this to you who are in deep pain: the less you can see hope ahead of you, the more wonderful God's provision is going to be. The most desperate of moments are some of the most miraculous rescues." Look ahead and wonder how God might provide in a way you and no one else have ever thought of and you will tell a story for the rest of your life of how good he is." - Pastor Drew Moore @canyonridge 🙏

Need hard lessons on how to get my hair up like in the second slide ☺ Although I kind of like how it looks after trying it so many times. Haven't had hair in a while so it's fun experimenting with it as it gets longer! "Your time is limited, don't waste it living someone else's life. Don't be trapped by dogma, which is living the result of other people's thinking. Don't let the noise of other's opinions drown your own inner voice. And most important, have the courage to follow your heart and intuition, they somehow already know what you truly want to become. Everything else is secondary." - Steve Jobs

Koda was more than just the “family dog.” He was so many people’s dog. Friends and extended members of my family. It’s an interestingly beautiful emotional contract we get into getting a dog. Embracing its unconditional love knowing you’re going to put it to rest one day. Koda went above and beyond embodying a dog’s purpose to the fullest. Anyone who was blessed to experience him knows this. He was a bright light in our family through a lot of ups and downs, and most importantly he was truly my Dad’s best friend. I love how you can have so many human buddies/friends but they’ll never equate to your dog. Thanks for taking care of my dad during the long and fulfilling life you lived, and for being the best companion to my mother, brothers, and so many others. I love you and I’ll see you later little bro. May God place his hand of healing and love on the shoulders of those enduring pain, loss, grief, etc and fill them with the courage to embrace the emotions of the disorder for the reorder to begin. 🙏🏻 Long live Koda.

I quit my prescribed opioid pain medication cold turkey after years of being on them. Living with physical aches and pain forever is inevitable for me after all the fractures, surgeries, titanium implants, and prosthesis after the accident, but I refuse to choose the victim mentality. Therefore, Tylenol and some occasional Aleve will continue to have to do. I'm also maintaining my 31 lb weight loss! Making these posts still feels too good to be true because I'm executing and accomplishing multiple things, I'm sharing here and not sharing here yet, that I've wanted to for quite some time now. There's so much for me to be proud of in every direction of my life and I give all the glory to God! ☺️😊 The support and love I've received from everyone here will never not be cherished dearly by me. Finding, for you, what bridges the gap between motivation and discipline is key. It has become such a conviction of mine. It's not easy by any means, but anything is possible. Undoubtedly.

In 2022, I was searching for a roommate. The moment I spoke to Nick on the phone, I felt an instant connection—he was warm, kind, and I could hear in his voice that he was a good person. I was excited to welcome someone into my home who shared my values, especially because I was still in graduate school and finishing up my clinical training. I had the apartment cleaned, the keys made, and was excited for his arrival. But the day before he was supposed to move in, I got a call from his father—Nick had been in a terrible motorcycle accident and was in the hospital. He was no longer coming to LA. For nearly three years, I've followed Nick's journey from afar—updates about his surgeries, his challenges, and his recovery. Watching him go from not knowing if he'd ever walk again to seeing him post updates of himself standing, moving, and now, walking. His story has deeply inspired me, motivating me through my own challenges and countless moments of doubt and wanting to quit school and the journey of becoming a therapist. And then, yesterday, he called. Funny enough, when he called me for the first time since his accident to tell me he was coming to LA and wanted to meet up, I unknowingly still had him in my phone as "Nick Roommate." Today, we met in person for the first time, and I even got to show him the apartment where he would have lived. It was a full-circle moment that carried with it so much meaning. Life doesn't always give us the opportunity to have full-circle moments or closure with the past, but when it does, they serve as powerful reminders that our paths have purpose and every juncture holds meaning. Nick, it was an honor to finally meet you. Keep up the incredible work—I can't wait to read your story in a book someday ☺ #fullcircle #heroesjourney

Effective vs ineffective. Something that has stuck to me that I've learned this past year to help me overcome the inevitable daily mental and emotional opposition life blesses me with. In regard to emotions, things out of our control, decisions, etc: is this effective or ineffective for my goals and who I am or the person I am aspiring to become? Most of the time it is going to be ineffective. A hard adjustment I had to make was embracing the ineffective emotions while not letting them consume me. Accepting God's plans and letting go of control. Way easier said than done, but the beauty is it CAN be done. I've now taken the effective vs ineffective to a whole new level: is this significant or insignificant in the scope of eternity. I ask myself this daily. It has profoundly helped me to authentically live and let God. 🙏🙏 Nick nicklopez Effective vs ineffective.

Something that has stuck to me that I've learned this past year to help me overcome the inevitable daily mental and emotional opposition life blesses me with. In regard to emotions, things out of our control, decisions, etc: is this effective or ineffective for my goals and who I am or the person I am aspiring to become? Most of the time it is going to be ineffective. A hard adjustment I had to make was embracing the ineffective emotions while not letting them consume me. Accepting God's plans and letting go of control. Way easier said than done, but the beauty is it CAN be done. Knocking at this course is so rewarding I spoke with my mentors and they agreed that what I'm looking to offer is a lot but in my perspective, I don't want it to be any other way. So just gotta buckle down and knock it out of the park! This one goes out to my boy @nicktlopez #create #thesovereignarchitect #daltonrios #diedevoled #workspace #officelife #coastalliving #determined #oceanviews #laptopstand #healthyspine #healthylife #healthylifecycles #sunnyday #motivation #effort #achievement #progression #lifecoaching
